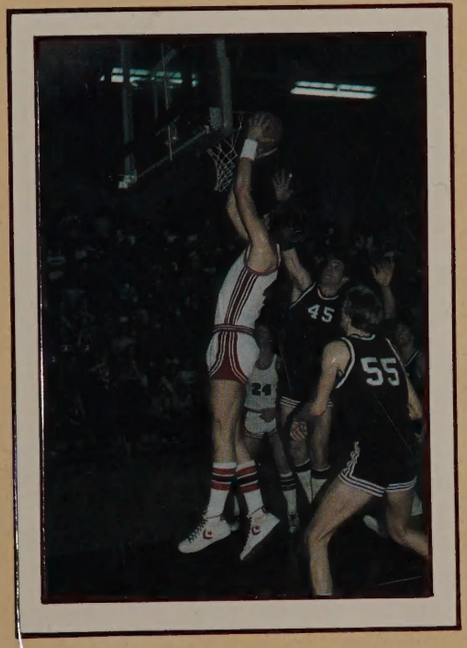
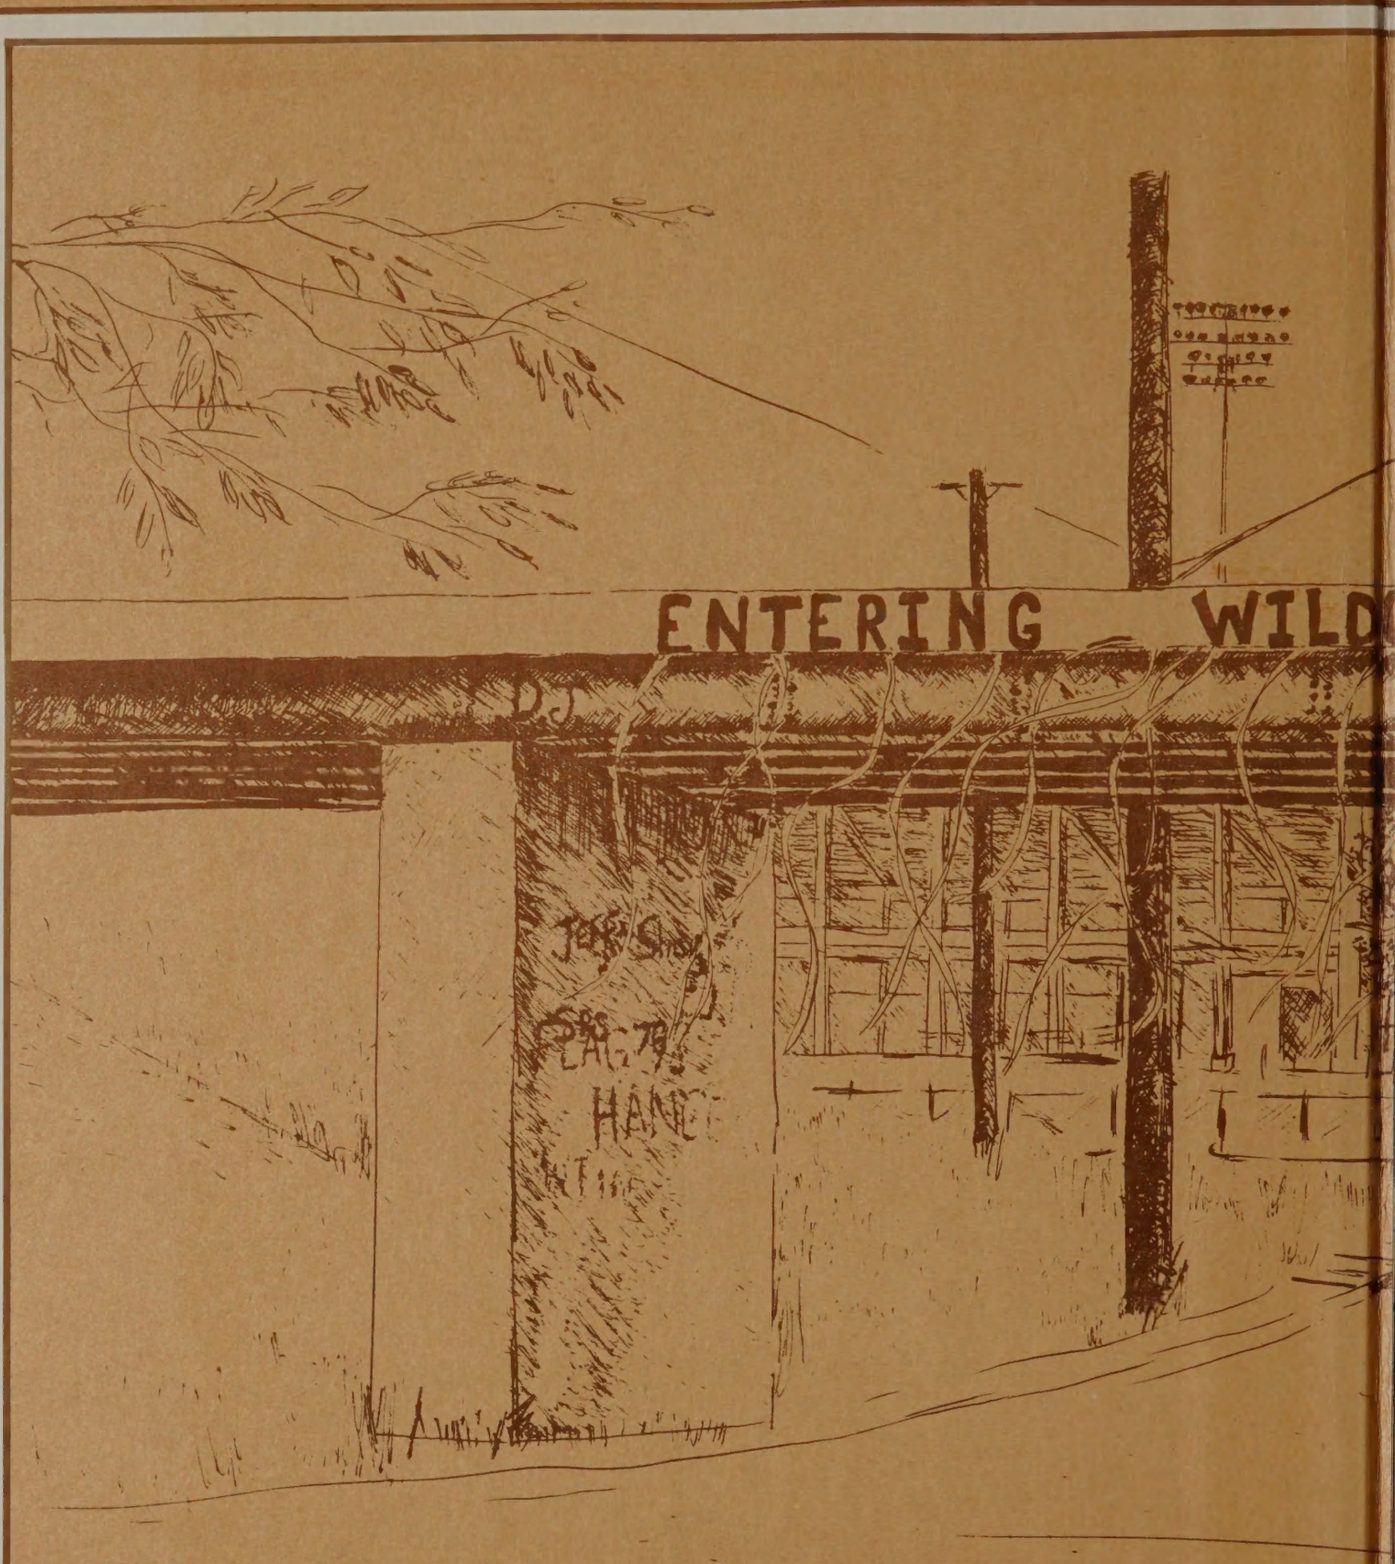
Up At The Top...A Nice Place To Be





During the week prior to the Lake Highlands-Highland Park football game, many LH students united to form a club interested in promoting school spirit. One of the Wildcat Mania projects was to paint the trestle over Church Road.

COVER, TOP: In an effort to break destructive tradition, the Physics Research Organization, sponsored by Mr. Wolfe, and the Student Council sponsored by Miss Jennings, donated time and supplies to decorate the new Zeke house.

COVER, BOTTOM UPPER RIGHT: The LH marching band celebrates after a victory in the State Fair "Parade of Champions." This was the third consective year for the band to place first in the competition.

COVER, BOTTOM LOWER RIGHT: Members of the cast of Godspell gather around Sonya Pleasant as she performs one of the songs from the popular musical. Godspell played to two packed houses before playing a third "command" performance.

To one of the smartest girls I know who is not only intelligent but well rounded (No crude comment intended) HAG HAG Good luck this sem.

Paula,

May God be with you always, and may you not have Madame Z again. You are a very intelligent girl, for one thing, you are aware of the world around you. And I do not mean Lake Highland area by the world "world."

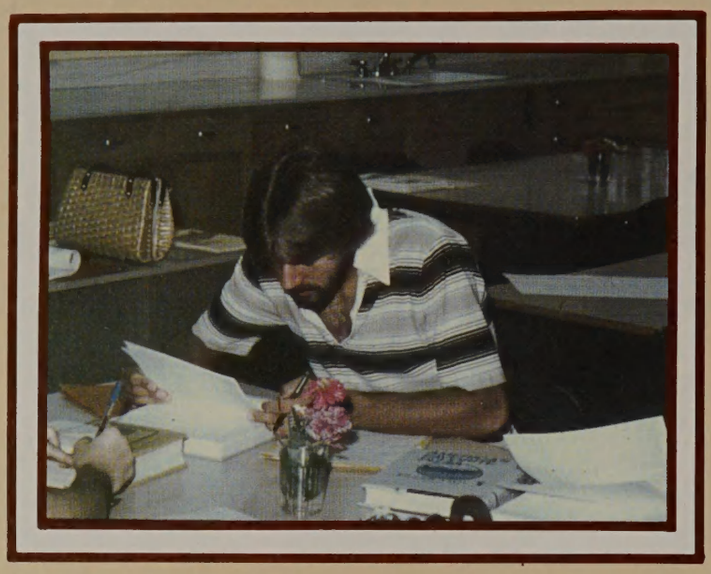
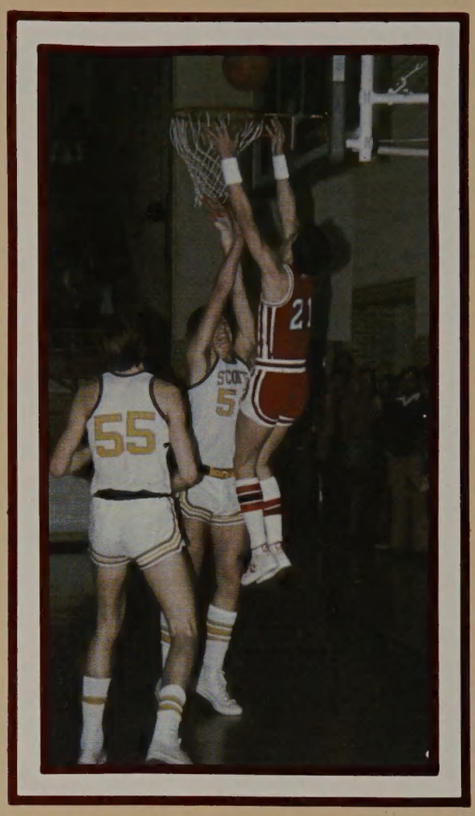
Up At The Top, A Nice Place To Be

TOP: Five of the fifteen cast members of the Drama Department's Godspell were juniors Lindy Willet and Clint Martell, sophomore Morgan Davis, junior Laura Hurley and sophomore David Farabee. LOWER LEFT: Junior Michelle Anderson comes out of a vault, displaying the talent that sent the gymnastics team to state competition. LOWER RIGHT TOP: The Times of Our Lives was the theme for the Highlandette Spring Show. Seniors Jennifer Mairs and Teri Bourne perform a skit introducing a dance routine to Baby Face. LOWER RIGHT BOTTOM: The AFS Olympics, gave the boys a chance to do the cheering. Cheerleaders watch during the pie eating contest won by senior class president Jeff Holland.

Senior varsity basketball team member Jim Vorlop sinks a basket during the playoff game of the district tournament. Vorlop was named to the coaches all-district first team.

"Free days" were really popular with students, but not quite so popular with teachers. Senior David Linenberger takes advantage of a rare free day in Single Survival class.





Varsity cheerleaders lead the Wildcat crowd at the Highland Park gym in cheers during the playoff game of the district basketball tournament. The Wildcats won 57-56.

Students relax in the Student Center, a place to eat a late breakfast, study for a second period test, or talk with friends in the fifteen minute break between first and second periods.

Seniors Don Williams, Melora Zaner and Don Eisenstein enjoy authentic Roman cuisine at the Latin Club banquet. First year students were slaves, second year students were masters, and third year students were senators.

We Predicted Our Year

When the 78-79 school year began we thought it was just going to be another ordinary year like the others.

We wouldn't have another movie filmed at our school, and the excitement of Cotton Candy was gone.

We figured we'd finish somewhere in the middle in football and everyone would complain because pep rally attendance would be down and there wouldn't be much spirit. As usual, we'd probably do okay in the other sports, we'd come out somewhere in the middle, we wouldn't be one of the best teams, but then we wouldn't be one of the worst teams either.

At the beginning, everyone would join a lot of clubs, but after a couple of months club attendance would really drop because everyone would be "too busy." Then the few members who were left would do the best they could with the number of members they had.

Seniors would try the same old pranks of tearing down the Zeke House, defacing our school's and other school's property, and Senior Skip Day, and never get away with them.

We really didn't expect much, but thought we could ride along on our past reputation.

Even Principal Jimmie Fountain demonstrated energy conservation on the Student Council sponsored Bike Day. An estimated 300 students and faculty members rode their bikes.

We Were Wrong

After the year started, we realized we had been wrong. It wasn't just another ordinary year like the others.

We didn't realize we would be contenders for the district football title, but we were. After Wildcat Mania peaked during Highland Park week, no one complained anymore about spirit.

Club involvement didn't slacken after the first of the year, either. Clubs planned projects which would be beneficial to the school, like PRO's painting of the Zeke House, NHS's Giving Tree, and the Student Council Bike Day.

Some seniors tried new pranks that weren't destructive. Many showed their spirit by painting the railroad trestle, painting murals on walls or repainting the Zeke House.

We had predicted another average year from an ordinary school, but we were proven wrong.

Under the direction of a new sponsor, Mrs. Betsy Vandament, the Spirit Team continued in its tradition of performing stand routines at pep rallies and games and promoting spirit.

Drum Major, senior Jimmy Cox, added a new dimension to the band's halftime show with a back flip at the end of Manhattan Skyline. Jimmy practices with the band during a summer practice.

Once again, the Highlandettes and Marching Band were invited to Texas Stadium by the Dallas Cowboys to perform during the halftime of the Dallas-St. Louis game.

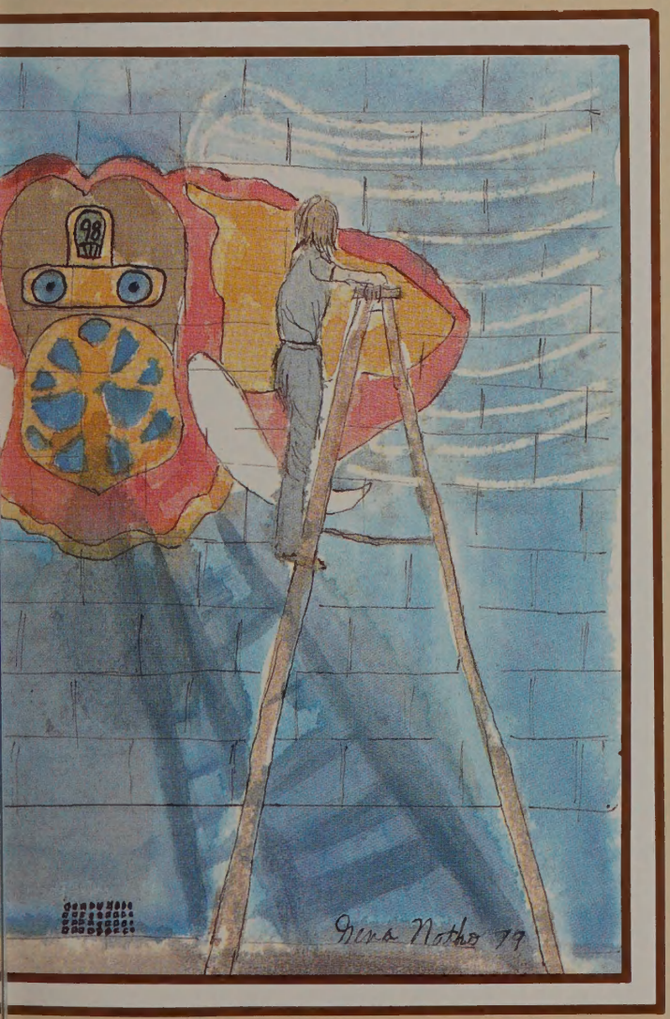
DECA officer senior Debbie Pickett assists in the DECA carnation sales. DECA sold carnations every Friday during football season. The money went for club projects and contests.



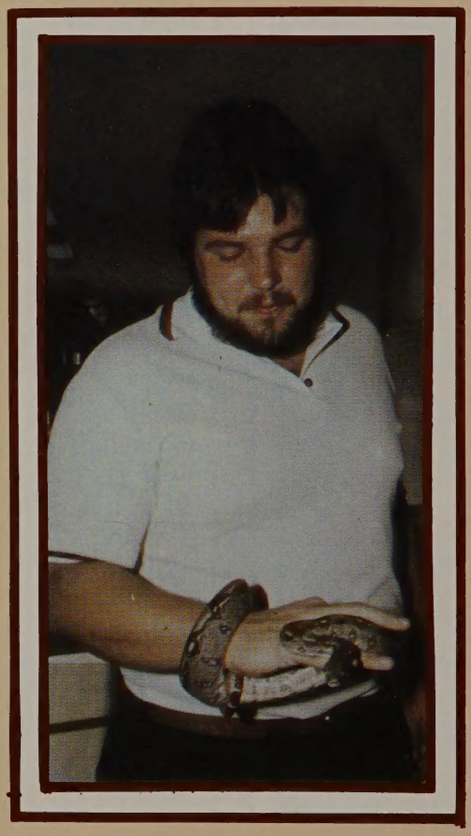
The flag corps performed a difficult routine while the band played the "Russian Sailor's Dance" at Texas Stadium at the halftime of the Cowboy-Cardinal game.

Juniors Nancy Darcangelo and Kim Freeze painted "Zulu," the symbol for album rock station KZEW, as an answer to graffiti on the smoking area wall. The girls spent about $20 of their own money on the project.

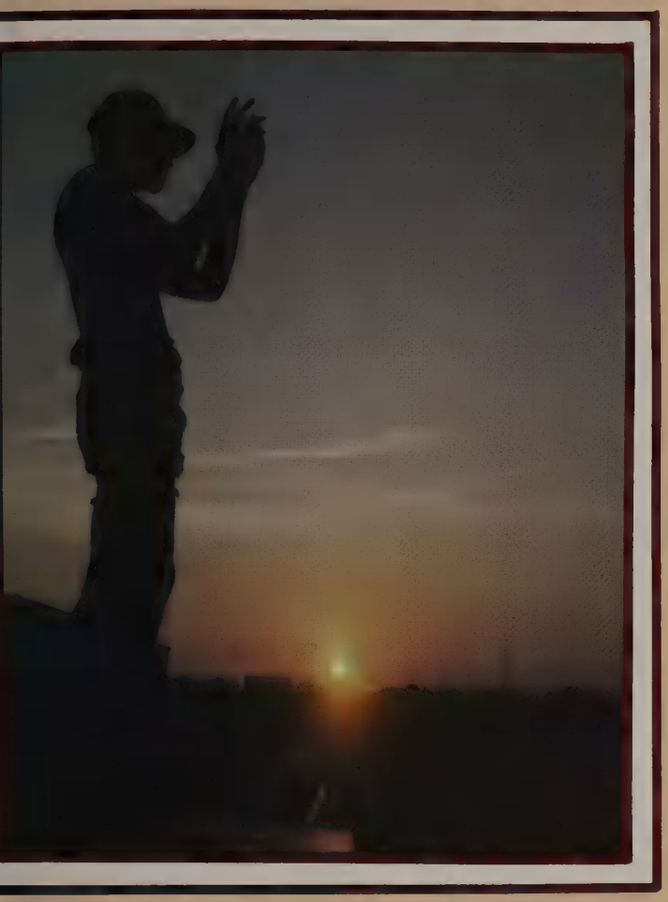
Instead of riding her bike on Student Council sponsored "Bike Day," junior Tammy Walker roller skated to school. Other students walked instead of driving so that they too could save energy.

The only fourth year Latin student was senior Mike Lanoux. He was the god of the Latin Club Banquet. The slaves, first year students, served dinner to the others present.

Senior Michael Jackson portrayed Jesus in the LHHS Theatre's presentation of Godspell. Godspell was so warmly received by students at the first two performances that an encore show was provided.



Biology teacher Mark Adams proudly displays his pet boa constrictor Jack the "Gripper." Coach Adams kept Jack in his room at school and used him for demonstrations.



Early morning practices paid off for the LH marching band when they won first place in the Parade of Champions and in UIL marching competition. Senior drum major Charlie Stimson directs the band.

Junior Kelly Gray and sophomore Annette Earhart cheer enthusiastically while anxiously awaiting varsity cheerleader tryouts. Both girls were selected as varsity cheerleaders for 1979-80.

We Were Up At The Top

We were delighted to find that our predictions for the year had been so wrong. It wasn't another ordinary year, because it was a year when we were fighting for championships instead of muddling around in the middle.

We were top contenders for the district title in football. We fought hard for the championship and proved that we were strong and when we defeated Highland Park we let everyone know we were contenders. Instead of rebelling when the administration told us we couldn't have any more pep rallies, we increased our spirit. We were up at the top in basketball, baseball, swimming, gymnastics, track, and soccer too.

Tremendous club involvement made us tops compared to other schools. DECA had five state contenders, the cheerleaders and Highlandettes won Superstar awards at summer camp, and the band and orchestra won first division ratings and sweepstakes. LH clubs helped the c ommunity with service projects too when the Jr. Exchangettes went to Angels Inc. and gave the children a Christmas party

Our year was much more than the predicted average year, it was a year when we were up at the top.

And...Up At The Top Was A Nice Place To Be

Suddenly, after finding ourselves at the top, we discovered that the top was a nice place to be.

And we had a right to be proud. We were fighting for district athletic championships, club participation boomed, and we learned with a new-found enthusiasm.

Seven of us made National Merit finalists, Earnest won district and regional, our girl gymnasts finished fifth in state, and we united ourselves in body and spirit as we rode out a day of high wind, baseball-size hail, torrential rains, and threatening funnel clouds.

We were glad we had been proven wrong. It was an ordinary year after all. We found ourselves up at the top, and up at the top was a nice place to be.

Senior Jeannine Thomas portrays the character of Cecily in The Importance of Being Earnest, the Drama Department's entry in the UIL one-act play competition.

Faculty team members discuss strategy during the Faculty-FCA basketball game while students look on. The faculty was triumphant in the second period assembly game with a score of 47-33.

"Bike Day" helped students celebrate the coming of spring and gave a needed break in the routine daily activities. Senior Denise Thomas rests after an invigorating ride.

Miss Donna Matlock was the faculty representative for the Jocular Juniors. Miss Matlock competed in the tricycle race before a student audience in the AFS Olympics.

Sophomore Diane Hale and junior Tara Delutis watch their team members intently during the LH-Highland Park game. The girls soccer team finished the season with a 7-4 season record.

The Fairmont Hotel was the setting for the Favorites Ball. Seniors Steve Lutrell and Lori Bailey dance to the sounds of TKO, a popular band with a female lead singer.

The Highlandette Spring Show theme was The Times of Our Lives. Emcees, seniors Grady Quick and Greg Dulcie, enter the stage during the opening number.

Up at the top in activities was a nice place to be

There was always something going on at LH, and usually, it was something too good to miss. There were all the usual high school activities such as dances, shows and assemblies, but ours seemed to have an extra flair.

Sponsored by the Student Council, Homecoming week provided many choices: Dress-up Days, Varsity Revue, the premiere showing of Cotton Candy, a crushing defeat of Richardson, and the Homecoming Dance. The highlight of the Student Council activities was the Favorites Dance at the Fairmont Hotel.

The Drama Department sponsored two major productions, Dracula and Godspell. Student response to these performances was outstanding and the Drama Department provided an encore performance of Godspell. Godspell was the only student directed performance all year.

The Spring Show climaxed the Highlandette's year and the Senior Show spotlighted the talent of the Senior Class in a final class project.

It was hard to get bored with all those choices of activies, and we seldom did. Outstanding activities made us tops, and up at the top was a nice place to be.

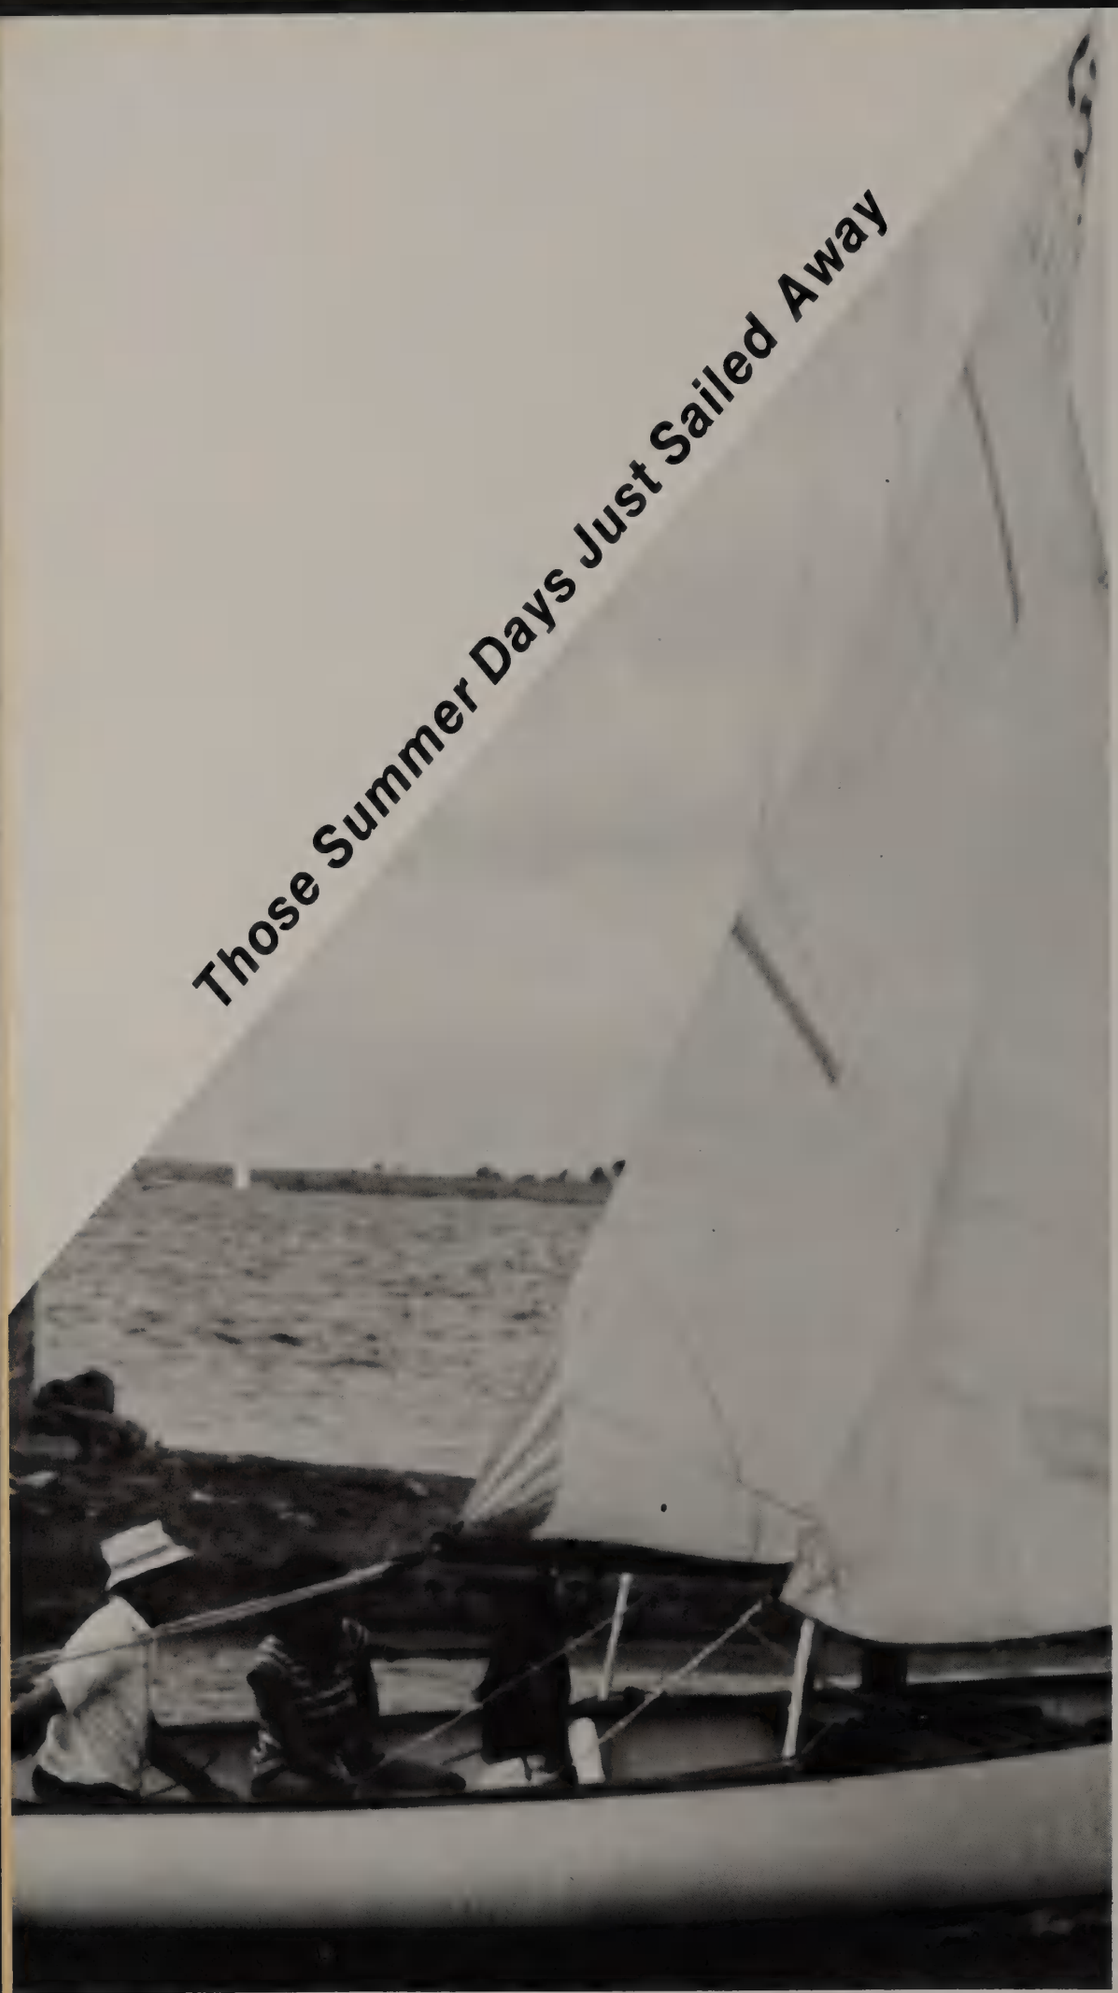
Those Summer Days Just Sailed Away



Whether spent working or relaxing in brilliant sunlight those summer days seemed to just sail away and before we knew it school had started and those golden days were lost forever.

But not quite lost for we were left with precious memories--each of us savoring our own special times. Remember the family vacation when after visiting all the national monuments and natural wonders the best thing to see was the old hotel bed? And remember trying to explain to your summer employer why sunbathing made you ten minutes late. Can't you just feel your muscles after the training camp that was supposed to be so much fun but in reality reminded you of boot camp. Can't you just see the picture of your friend when you saw her at the airport for the first time simce she moved. Remember? How could you forget...

Some students worked, like Junior Dean Malabanan. When asked why Dean said, "Something to do." Others spent time at camps such as Young Life and training camps. Ronnie Marr recalled his time at a Junior Fellowship of Christian Athletes camp where he served as a counselor, "The answer to prayer was miraculous." The summer was also a time of recuperation. Miss Fitzpatrick, English teacher, insisted she did nothing constructive the whole summer. "I just swan away." she said.

There was also students who had the opportunity to travel during the vacation. Sophomore Katie Campbell went to Las Vegas and remembers it as "Wild and Fun!"

Senior Barbara West summed up the summer best saying, "It was the best summer yet, but next summer will be better. Each summer gets better." That's just the nature of summers.

Mary Ann Farmer and Melora Zaner sail with Mary Ann's father in the Indian Summer Regenda Race at Chandler's Landing at Lake Ray Hubbard.

Student Council Vice President, Tracee McKee sweeps the bookstore while other officers, Brenda Reagan and Carter Moore chat with Senior Jimmy Cox.

Early summer morning practices become a ritual for LH band members as they rehearse their award winning half-time performances on the JV field.

Highlandette Captain Stacia Goad and 2nd Lieutenants Susan Golding and Ruth Milton rejoice at drill team camp when given outstanding awards.

Those Summer Days

Senior Matt Dunigan reads his Bible in ■ quiet time at the Fellowship of Christian Athletes camp in Black Mountain, North Carolina.

Some Lake Highlands students never did get away from the school and it's activities. These dedicated students spent many summer hours preparing for the coming school year.

Football players were seen working in the summer heat getting ready for the fall football season.

Band members spent two hours each night practicing and preparing halftime shows. The sophomores spent an additional two hours in the mornings from 7-9 a.m. Members of the flag corps spent a rigorous week at camp learning techniques and routines. When asked if she thought it was hard, sophomore Carol Williams said, "Uh!"

The cheerleaders were also rewarded for hours spent with awards from camp. Not only did they bring home the National Cheerleader Association's Award of Excellence, but they also received the Superstar Award. Mary Ann Rice was named Outstanding Cheerleader.

The Highlandettes spent summer days perfecting routines for competition and getting in shape for the fall season. At camp the officers captured Sweepstakes and the line brought home top honors.

The yearbook staff went to camp at SMU, Texas Tech, and Quachita Baptist University, where they learned layout and copy writing techniques.

These students sacrificed some of their precious vacation in order to be prepared for the 1978-1979 year. Kyle Martin, a senior band member, said he even heard Mr. Whitman over the PA system practicing, "May I have your attention please?"

There were the students who went abroad on the American Field Service Student Exchange Program. Senior Eve Johnson went to Japan and senior Karen Travis travelled around and the seashore. Both described the experience as exciting and unique.

There were those unfortunate few who spent some summer days in school either by choice or necessity. There students spent 7:30-12:50 each day for six weeks at the shool. Although the summer school marred some schedules, senior Grant Sanders described the work as easy.

Even the Student Council was busy this summer working on the coming school year. Among their projucts was the cleaning of the bookstore, which they bought new furniture for. President Carter Moore said, "The summer got us ready for a great school year."

During a Yearbook summer conference held a Texas Tech Univerisity, staff member, Cynthi Blum and photographer Jeff Bowles take ■ brea disco dancing.

In her job as a lifeguard at the Electronic Data System's clubhouse, senior Laura Runyan basks in the sun and listens to her radio while watching the pool.

Seniors Tracy Hansen and Susan Schriefer listen attentively to group discussion at a summer retreat on the search for Christian maturity.

Senior Charlie Stimpson, head drum major, directs the band in the early morning practices during the summer months.

Homecoming Week Winds Up

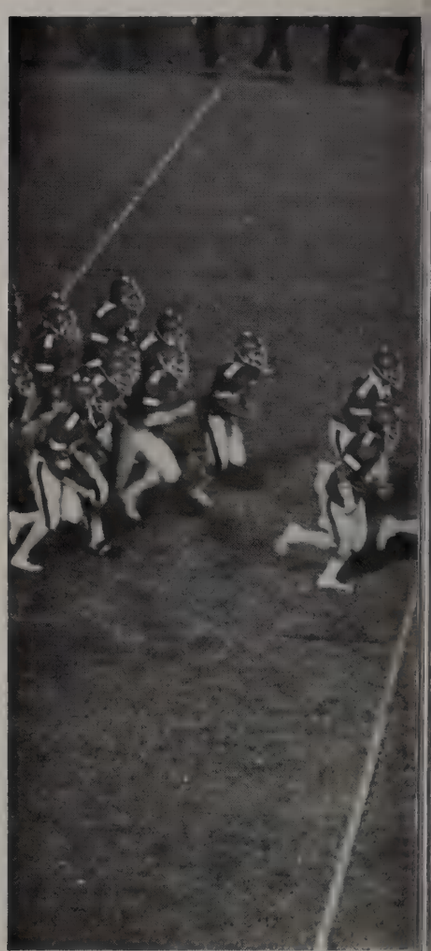
Whew...what a week! Probably the best way to describe it was the well remembered cheer, "Wind Me Up..." Although the week started slow because we were all anticipating Friday night, by the end of the week school was an organized chaos with suppressed excitement.

Monday was a slow start with no scheduled activities, but Tuesday started getting more hectic with the first of the infamous dress-up days. Backsards day was celebrated by wearing overalls backwards and underwear outside of jeans. President of the Student Council, Carter Moore opened the announcements with "Please attention your have I may." Tuesday night various clubs met to make signs for the halls and gym. The traditional class sign competition was broken with the ruling of superiors that class competition divided the school. The spirit abounded all week with everyone decorating his car and helping with the halls.

Wednesday's dress-up theme was met with much approval and everyone participated in Western day if only to don a pair of straight leg jeans. Wednesday night the decorating continued until late as determined students strove to finish signs. Meanwhile, other students were at home planning their outfits for Thursday's "Wild and Crazy Day."

Thursday the halls looked like an insane asylum with the outfits ranging from wild to crazy. During second period there was a preview of the Varsity Revue. The nominees for Homecoming were presented and a sample of the talent was shown. Thursday night last minute preparations were done for the game and dance Friday night as well as the pep rally. The pep rally was the first in four weeks due to a conduct problem in a previous one.

Seniors Tina Lamb and Connie Stress wear their nost uncordinated outfits to celebrate "wild and Crazy Day" during Homecoming week.

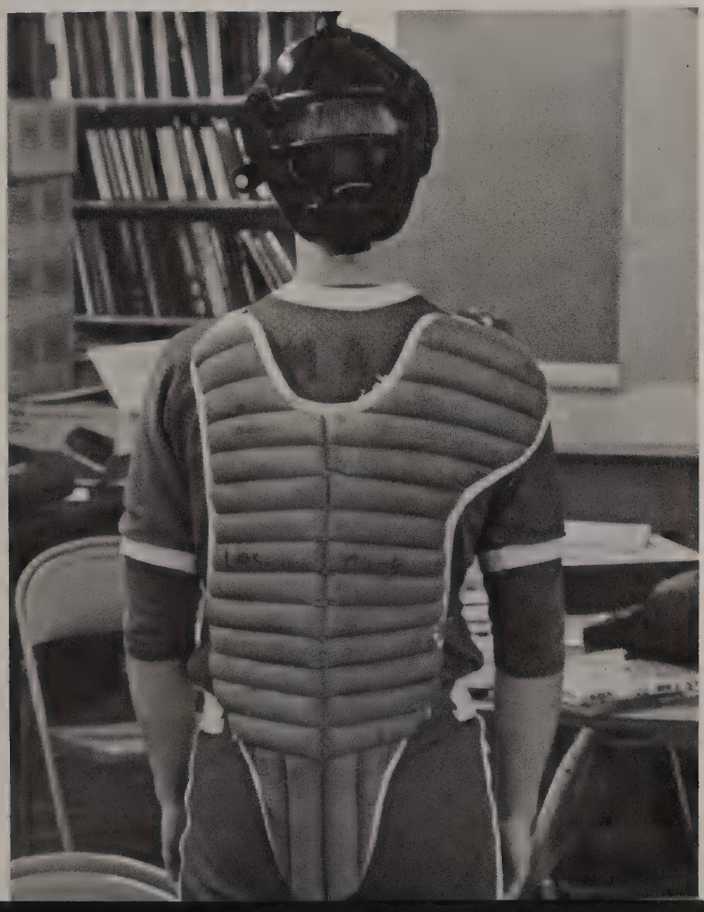


Seniors, Sharon Ranney, Lisa Mullins, Stacia Goad, Karen Sibley, and Amy Waller show how Cowboys eat their grub on Western Day.

At the Homecoming pep rally the Junior class shows spirit by chanting. This was the first pep rally in four weeks.

Run-Thru members hold up the Homecoming sign before the game. Each week artistic students assembled to make the signs for the team to run through.

Tuesday of Homecoming week was designated as "Backwards Day." Junior Max Morton participates by wearing his catcher's gear and uniform backwards.



The Winding Up Of Homecoming

Early in October, people began making preparations for Homecoming '78. Mums had to be ordered; decorations had to be made; music and routines were practiced; and nominations for the Homecoming were taken.

Before the game, the nominees for the Homecoming Court were presented. The candidates for duchess began the ceremony. Representing the sophomore class were Laney kAdams, Annette Earhart, and Kim Whitworth. Joanie Jordan was chosen as the spirit team nominee. The sophomore class chose Laney Adams as the Duchess.

The candidates for Junior Princess were Joyce Boyle, Kelly Gray, and Suzanne Hebert, with Joyce Boyce chosen as the winner.

The nominees for Homecoming Queen who were representing the senior class were Leslie Adwan, Robin Eubanks, and Mary Ann Rice. Karen Travis was the Student Council nominee, and Lisa Whitworth was chosen by the band. The choir nominee was Michelle Snoddy, the Football Sweetheart was Cindy Hurst, and the Highlandette nominee was Stacia Goad. Leslie Adwan was crowned Homecoming Queen for 1978.

After a spirited 34-24 win over LH's cross-town rivals, the Richardson Eagles, the Homecoming Dance began. It was held in the cafeteria from 10:30 to 1:00. The Student Council decorated with ballons and crepe paper. A new twist was added with a disc jockey instead of a live band. Disco Sounds provided the music and a light show. Behind the DJ, a huge backdrop with the school flag, a silhouette of the school, and a class ring was hung. The halls were decorated with old movie posters, and a few new ones.

Junior Joyce Boyle gives a royal smile as befitting the Homecoming Princess. Joyce was chosen by her class over her friends Kelly Gray and Suzanne Herbert.

Candidates for Princess Suzanne Herbert and Kelly Gray gibe each other with encouraging smiles before the winner was announced during the presentations ceremony before the Richardson game.

Was It Really Worth All That Time In The En

All those long, boring hours waiting to be filmed for "Cotton Candy." Did you ever see your face? your hand? perhaps your locker? Remember the hours spent in the auditorium playing games and doing homework to pass the time, the Saturday spent in the scorching sun practicing tossing your mortar board into the air along with 300 others. And day after boring day spent at the Holiday Inn in a cramped formal waiting for rehearsal calls? Sacrifices were made, grades dropped, jobs suffered, and many asked-Why?

After the preview showing of "Cotton Candy" on October 20 at Lake Highlands, many Juniors, Seniors, and Exes who had participated in the film were very disappointed with the outcome. Seniors Joan Hudel and Kathy Sherman agreed that "it was cute, but on a two-year old level." Following the first showing, Sophomores and the public were able to view "Cotton Candy" and evaluate it. Some agreed that the fun in watching the film lay in the fact that it had actually been shot at Lake Highlands, picking out the people they knew, and watching their friends "in action." Having actor Clint Howard introduce the film helped to get participants back into a receptive mood for viewing.

In all, there were four showings for the Lake Highlands' community. The first two were on Friday, October 2 the week before Homecoming. (Tuesday night, October 24, aft P.T.A. Open House, parents were ab to see the film. The Thursday nig production of Varsity Revue was ca celled due to the television premie of "Cotton Candy," and finally Satu day morning-after Homecoming t previous night-the film was present for it's last debut to L.H. ex-student

Some agreed after seeing the fil that it was quite a disappointmer while others were enthusiastic abo it. Mixed emotions prevailed. Juni Brian Chubb "...only liked it becau it was filmed in our school." Othe like Senior Jana Inman, enjoyed saying, "Corny, but cute."

At the premiere showing of "Cotton Candy," Mr. Tom Whitman, special activities principal, introduces actor Clint Howard, who presented the film.

Masses of Lake Highland students flock into the auditorium to view the first presentation of "Cotton Candy" on October 20.

Actor Clint Howard, in an interview with L.H. journalists, explains many aspects of "Cotton Candy" which he brought to L.H. October 20.

Lake Highlands graduates CHuck Brewer and Joe Stadelman return to view the premiere showing of "Cotton Candy" the week before Homecoming.

'Carding' Not Allowed at LH Disco

No longer did Lake Highlands students need to face the rejection of being "carded" at local discos. The new dance craze hit LH with the first football game against Spruce. As one of their money-raising projects, the cheerleaders sponsored the first of many after-the-game dances.

Highlighting the football season and climaxing an exciting, activity-filled week, the Student Council organized the traditional Homecoming affair. After taking a student body survey, the Student Council decided to hire Disco Sounds who provided fantastic music and prepared a special medley of songs from previous years to relate to the "Reminiscing" theme.

Old-time movie posters were given away as door prizes. The Council spent the entire preceeding week painting a backdrop with a collage of school emblems to hang behind the disc jockey. "The cafeteria was decorated with blue streamers and baloons to create a dreamy effect," stated Lynn McCarty, Student Council historian.

Kristin Harpole, social chairman of the Girls' Service League, finally found a location to hold the annual Barn Dance. On Friday, December 1, about 100 couples converged upon the "Ranch House," a private club and dance hall in Wylie, Texas. Couples dressed in blue jeans, overalls, western shirts, cowboy boots and hats enjoyed a mixture of disco and country western music provided by a disc jockey and seven piece country band.

A week after the GSL "Kicker Dance," the Highlandettes sponsored their annual Christmas Dance on December 9 at the Royal Oaks Country Club. For the second time, Disco Sounds provided the music at one of Lake Highlands' special occasions. A silver-tinsled tree decorated with favors--the Highlandette key chains--served as background for pictures.

An unidentified LH students is offered the opportunity to express her own dance style and to relax after a hectic, fun-filled week at the traditional Homecoming Dance.

The music of Disco Sounds at the annual Highlandette Christmas Dance provides an exciting atmosphere for senior Cindy Hurst and her date Brad Woodson as well as others in attendance.

Senior Charlie Brown dances with his date Margaret Lang, who graduated from Lake Highlands last year and returned to her alma mater for the Homecoming festivities and dance.

Seniors Kathy McPherson and Jason Cervantes "two-step" to a slow song. The annual GSL "Kicker Dance," held at the Ranch House in Wylie, proved fun for those who enjoyed all types of dancing.

Carding Not Allowed at LH Disco

Favorites gave students a chance to express their admiration for several fellow classmates. The senior class chose the Most Congenial, the Most Talented, and the Most Likely to Succeed boy and girl of their class. Each class chose a boy and girl favorite and the entire school voted for Mr. and Miss LHHS.

Sherrene Asay and Danny Brewer were chosen as Most Congenial among the many worty nominees while Stacia Goad and Michael Jackson were voted most Talented of the lengthy list of gifted seniors.

Voting for Most Likely to Succeed gave Lh seniors a chance to try their luck at fortune telling. Karen Travis and Nickey Naumovich were prophesied to have the most successful future of the promising class.

Besides the superlative honors, the favorites of each class were announced at the dance February 3 at the prestigious Fairmont.

The sophomores chose Laney Adams and Kirk Kelley as their favorites while the juniors selected Randa Babaa and Todd Kirkpatrick. Senior Favorites were found to be Mike Brattlof and Shawn Asay.

The entire student body voted for Leslie Adwan and Mike Martin as Mr. and Miss LHHS.

All the winners were announced at 10 p.m. at the dance. The anticipation of the presentations added excitement and all left the dance with many memories of a great time.

The next dance, on March 10 at the elegant Registry Hotel, also included Presentations. GSL's annual Presentations honored all the senior members of the club with long stem red roses as they walked through a garden arch with their escourts. Parents were invited, and after the introductions the traditional Father-Daughter dance began. The tradition and elegance left all who attended with pleasant memories.

The final dance of the year, the much planned and much dreamed about Senior Prom was held on May 18. Although scheduled to be held in the fabulous LeBaron, a last minute tornado which damaged the hotel sent senior class officers on a harried search for a new location.

LH seniors sighed in relief when the Marriot on Stemmons was reserved. The switch did not daunt seniors and the elaborate plans for the night continued. These included elegant dinner parties, early breakfasts and late parties. Good music, mounds of food and tornado glasses for memtos were provided by the funds raised the past three years. Most all who attended agreed it was all worth it; Prom fulfilled all their expectations.

Junior Bobby Hammers congratulates Todd Kirkpatrick for winning the boy Junior Favorite announced at the Favorites Dance held in the Fairmont on February 3.

ior Linda Roberts gracefully sways to the beat provided by the band at n which was held at the Marriot on Stemmons. Her date, Jeff Courght, a graduate from last year, accompanies her. The dance had to be ched to the Marriot at the last minute due to damage at the LeBaron.

Lori Taylor, sophomore, displays the disco fever that hit the dance scene at the Presentations dance. The music, provided by the DJ was mainly fast and heavy.

Dee Gilbert, Natalie Parks, Dan Zelios, and Denise Thomas take time out from the fun and excitement at the final Prom to smile for the camera. More than 450 couples packed the ballroom at the Marriot for the 1979 Senior Prom.

The comedy skit Jock in the Parking Lot added satirical humor to the Varsity Revue show. Seniors Matt Dunigan and Charlie Stimson argue as other band members watch in astonishment.

Many singing numbers highlighted the Varsity Revue performance. Senior Greg Dulcie, accompanied by guitarist Mark Campbell, sings the song "Looking for a Lady."

LH Stage Yields Top Performances

Dr. Seward, portrayed by senior Michael Jackson, listens skeptically to the pleas of Renfield, the fly-eating lunatic played by senior Bart Mascarelli in the drama production of Dracula.

In a school of more than 2,000 students it is not easy for talent to shine out. However, several LH performances throughout the school year gave gifted students a chance to display their dancing, singing and acting abilities.

Glittering with comedy and song, The Varsity Review 1978 as the first production, was highlighted by several outstanding performances. A light-hearted skit "Who's on First" was presented by Brent Hardaway and David Jablinski. Sophomore Patti Wonder received a powerful response to her solo of "Theme to Foul Play".

Juniors Suzanne Hebert and Dana Brown entertained the crowded audience with their energetic rendition of "Get Off." The Homecoming winners were presented along with their escourts, followed by the Lake Highlands Stage Band's jazzy "SWAT."

Soon after the Varsity Review, the Drama Department began work on their next production. An orthodontist's dream was featured on October 19, 20 and 21 in the titilating creation of Dracula.

Senior Chris Campbell portrayed the bloodthirsty vampire who nightly stalked his defensless victim Lucy (Laura Hurley). Lucy's Health deteriorates with his thirsty visits which cause her father, Dr. Seward (Michael Jackson) and her fiance, Jonathon Harker (Clint Martell) concern.

Aided by Professor Von Helsing (Michael Anderson) they seek the cause of Lucy's frailty, which leads to the thrilling showdown. Entertaining the audience, the players practiced techniques alternately comical and subtely sophisticated.

After this thrilling production, the Drama Club moved into the annual Children's Show. Dragons, grottos and dolls combined in a flurry of talented suspense in the presentation of The Golden Grotto on November 30 and December 1.

Members of the Godspell cast perform one of the parables in the play. Enthusiastic response from the audience forced a command performance of this Broadway musical.

The LHHS Drama Department presented Dracula as their first major production of the year. Senior Colleen Crudden, the maid, gasps in horror as Tiger Dawson, portraying the attendant, startles her with a mouse.

LH Stage yields Top Performances

The next major production, "Godspell" caused quite a stir in the LH Auditorium on January 31 and February 2. Response to this musical protraying Jesus Christ's life and works was so great that a command performance was demanded.

Senior MichaelJackson playing the part of Jesus captured the audience along with Bent Hardway as John the Baptist and the other talented cast members. From the swift begining to the uplifting ending, the crew kept the audience mesmerized with vibrating songs and joyous acting.

The Drama department had a break with the next show being run by the Highlandettes. The annual Spring Show portrayed "Times of Your Life" by highlighting memorable stages of growing up. Begining with a tap dance to "Baby Face", the show moved through a charecterized playschool scene to a spin off of "The Wiz" with the song "Ease On Down the Road." Graduation was depicted in the dance "If They Could See Me Now" while weddings were remembered with Wedding Bell Blues. Other acts include dedication to schools from the seniors and the finale introducing all 1978-79 Highlandettes.

Drama soon resumed their efforts and produced the One Act Play for competition. Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest" was this year's entry. The area contest on March 31 sent the seven member cast, including seniors Jeannine Thomas, Michael jackson, Tiger Dawson, and Sarah Zeigler, to District with juniors Jeff Ray, and David Karlen, and sophomore Martha Johnson. The LH theater department won District competition which set up the contest with Plano for Regionals where the LH curtain fell in defeat.

The final show, Senior Show have many seniors who had never been on the Wildcat stage the chance to shine. "Shine It On" on May 18 and 19 brought back the era of the big bands. A dance number to City Lights along with the classy stage band added to the dominant theme.

Special sidelights were provided by the senior men and woman in their traditional acts. The men did a mock ballet routine in tu-tus while the girls did a charade depicting the juvenile sophomore and junior girls becoming "So Fine" senior women.

Other entertaining acts included emcee Ronnie Marr and Carter Moore juggling, and the 'Macho Men's' version of YMCA.

The closing of the Senior Show with "Shine It On" brought the year's outstanding performances to an end.

Senior Jeannine Thomas expresses delighted surprise while senior Michael Jackson proposes in the One Act Play, "The Importance of Being Earnest."

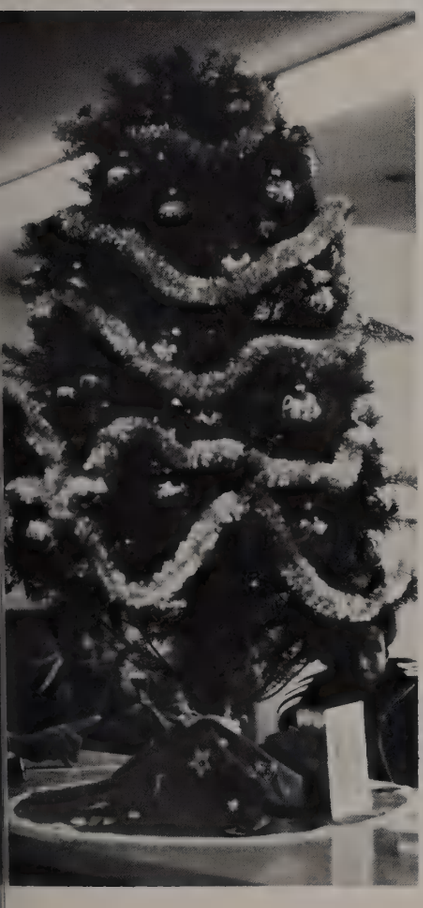
Senior Michael Jackson sings to Stacia Goad in the crowd pleaser "Godspell" as juniors Laura Hurley, Lindy Willet and sophomore Patty Wonder sing along.

Junior Julie Lemmons assists senior Lori Mallory in the push-up competition during the U.S. Marine Corps sponsored Physical Fitness Competition during the State Fair.

Many Lake Highlands students participated in the First Baptist Church's annual Living Christmas Tree Concert on December 13 to help celebrate the holiday season.

The city of Dallas suffered extensive tree damage and a partial power shortage during the icy holiday that LH students enjoyed on January 3 after a long Christmas break.

Seniors Debra Oakes and Joan Hudel board the ski lift at Purgatory, Colorado while on a ski trip sponsored jointly by their church and Mountain Haus Sports Shop.



The Senior Office decorated a beautiful Christmas tree which they displayed on the front counter in celebration of the upcoming holidays.

Holidays Give Relief For Students

There came a time when you just couldn't take it anymore. All the exams, games, practices and performances seemed to engulf you so that your mind cried for relief.

Just about the time LH students reached this point of desperation, the holidays arrived to rejuvenate them. Whether it was the seventeen glorious days for Christmas break or just an extra Monday to prolong a fantastic weekend, the holidays served as a picker-upper for many Lake Highlanders.

Labor Day was the first holiday for Richardson schools. Students spent this extra day catching last minute summer rays or stocking their bank accounts for fall expenses.

The next free Monday came four weeks later with the annual state fair. Although some students simply used the day as a breather, many explored the fair. Some students formed teams and competed in the Marine Physical Fitness competition. Both boys' and girls' teams received awards for the highest daily scores.

The next holiday was not until Thanksgiving at the end of the first quarter. If students had met the necessary requirements for exemptions they had a week of freedom. Those who had too many absences or not quite high enough grade averages, found themselves taking exams Monday and Tuesday but joined their friends for the long-awaited three days rest. Thanksgiving dinners perked up everyone and students came back ready to work.

After the first burst of work-generating energy, students began to get "antsy" for the exciting Christmas Holidays.

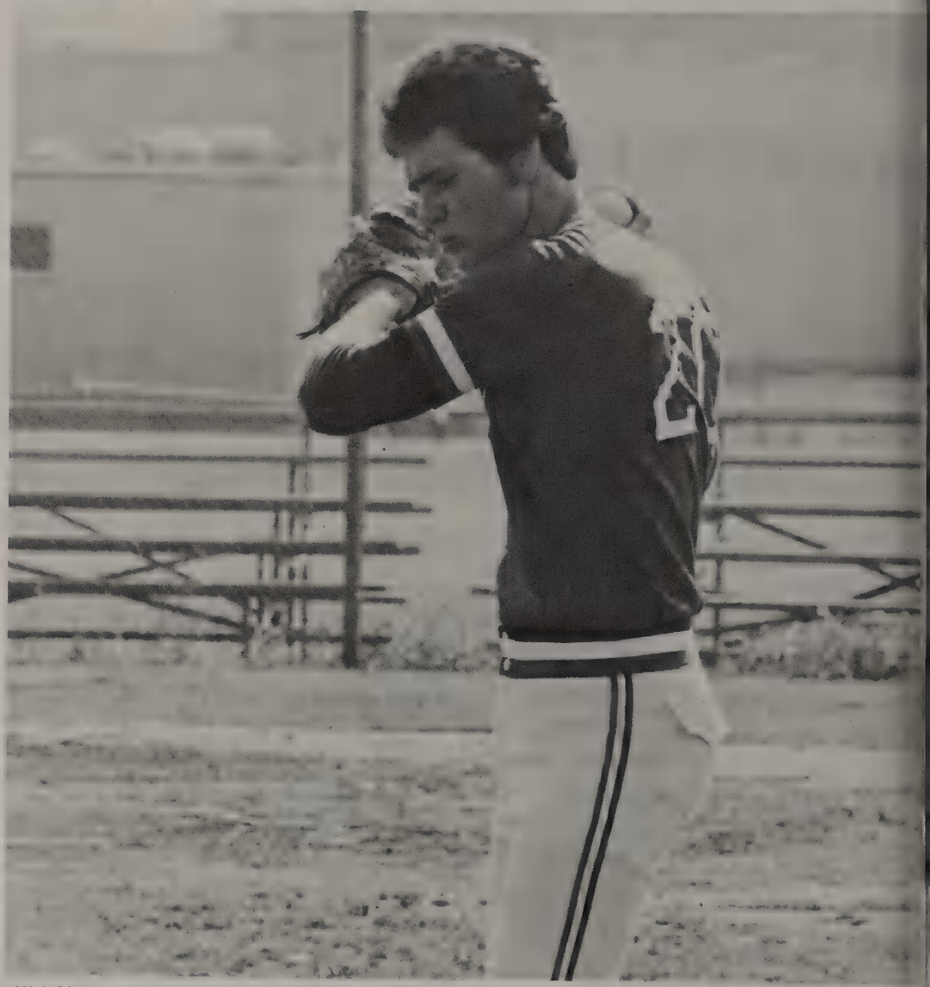
These festive days were prolonged one extra day by icy weather which restricted most students to their powerless houses. This confinement helped motivate students when they returned and classes enjoyed a brief upswing of students interest.

It wasn't but a week after that that spring break crept up and students found themselves with nine consecutive days for themselves. Some people spent these days soaking up the sun between job shifts, while many found time for family vacations or graduation trips. Senior Lisa Whitworth claimed to have the best vacation in Hawaii, where she went for graduation.

Kyle Martin also claimed to have the best vacation with the Drama Club in New York City, where they visited Staten Island and the Rockerfeller Center as well as saw a show every night, including Neil Simon's They're Playing Our Song with Lucy Arnez and Robert Cline.

Not all students travelled during the break, but those that stayed home had fun with friends. Some popular places to congregate were the pool, the shopping mall, and Six Flags. Despite minor inconveniences such as research papers, most LHers thoroughly enjoyed the vacation and returned ready to battle their way through the remaining seven weeks.



Kirk McJunkin catches and prepares to throw the ball in a Lake Highlands Wildcat baseball game during spring break. While most students had vacation, the baseballers had to report.

Senior Lori Mallory used extra time she had during her vacation to try out new things, such as riding a unicycle. Lori's face reflects the concentration required, even with the help of Cindy Zikos.

Sandra Mickelson, Elaine Brown, Tracee McKee, Tina Lamb, Sonya Pleasant, Colby Clark, Monica Grosz, Traci England, Cindy LeRouax, Melanie Strange and Stephanie Grosz pose in front of the Empire State Building.

Clubs Gain Support With Ingenuity

The various clubs and organizations did everything to raise money in 1979 except plant money-growing trees.

Rather than breaking open student's piggy banks and depleting life-time savings, clubs raised money in numerous ways. Among some of the more popular fund-raisers were after-the-game victory dances, bake sales and pay assemblies.

The Student Council started the lucrative projects with their stick pin sales. Other Student Council money-raisers included two victory dances and an arrangement with Pizza Hut on Audelia and Kingsley. For every pizza bought by LH students with a dollar off coupon, the Student Council received a dollar for their treasury.

The Student Council was not the only successful government group in the money hunt. The senior class raised more than $900 with a victory dance, the juniors sold Noel-o-Grams and sponsored a hard rock concert featuring the band 180 Proof, and the sophomores got a good start on their bank account by selling popcorn, as they have in the past.

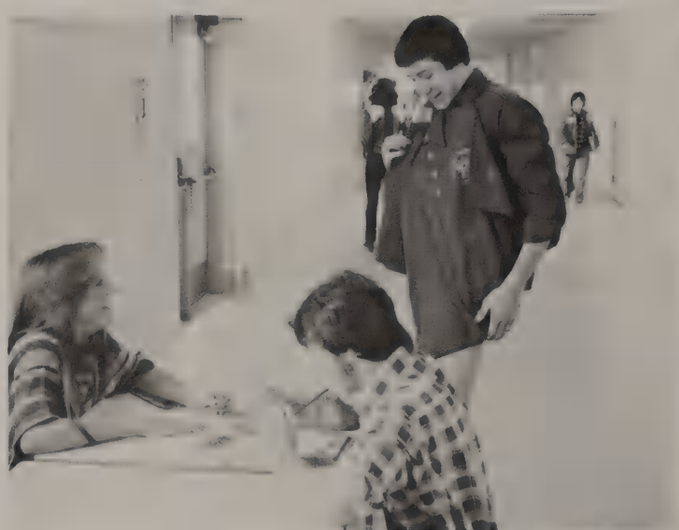
Other selling projects were tackled by the Girls' Service League and the Highlandettes. The GSL began their struggle for money by selling LH sponsorship stickers, posters that illustrated activities at LH and sport shirts with various insignias on them. The club finally resorted to a cake sale after the sport shirts only raised about $80. The Highlandettes also sold sponsorship stickers as well as hand-made items in their annual bazaar.

Special projects included the soccer assembly in which the Dallas Tornado challenged LH coaches in basketball, the girls soccer team in volleyball and the boys soccer team to a quarter of indoor soccer. Belt buckles were sold by the VOCT, and the HOCE sold coloring books and key chains. The Drama Department raised funds for props and expenses by presenting previews to their productions in assemblies.

Candy sales enabled many of the smaller clubs to raise their funds. All the selling projects were successful and most clubs raised needed money for their special events.

If money did grow on trees, many LH students would have had green thumbs.

During the FTA annual money-raisers, sophomore Lisa Agnes sings a Val-O-Gram to Mr. Fountain in the teachers' lounge while Mrs. Passmore watches in amusement.



The GSL sold sport shirts as one of their major money-making projects. Sophomore Penny Haddock works during lunches to sell them to seniors Jim Vorlop and David Strickland.

Senior David Lemmons blocks a Tornado soccer player's goal attempt during the soccer team sponsored assembly. The Tornado challenged LH coaches and players to basketball, volleyball and soccer.

Ken Adams, lead singer of the band 180 performs to the crowd who supported this class sponsored assembly. The class a total of $1,700 through the project.

y dances after football and basketball s were a favorite fund-raiser for many clubs. more Sabrina Schillaci dances at the FCA ed dance.

Clubs Gain Support With Ingenuity

Clubs at LH devoted a lot of time and energy to all the fund raising projects. Toward the end of the year, the NHS Red Carnation Day, the GSL assembly featuring D.C. Kow and the AFS Olympics highlighted some of the fund raising projects.

The National Honor Society sponsored the annual Red Carnation Day on March 20. The club's main money raiser was the sale of carnations, providing a $400 profit. The profits made by NHS were fed directly back into the school on various contributions.

On Sunday afternoon, March 18, buckets were filled with water and Scope, and on the following Monday, while school was out, NHS members sorted and attached cards to the 9,500 flowers. The 300 carnations that were left over were taken to White Rock Nursing Home and brightened the day of many of its elderly residents. Wayne Mendenhall, president of NHS, stressed the cooperation and sacrifice that the Honor Society put into the project.

Another of the many club money raisers was the Girls' Service League assembly with a performance by the progressive rock group D.C. Kow. The band cost $225 and GSL profitted $975 on the assembly. The proceeds went to a long time commitment of the club, two $500 scholarships given according to financial need and scholastics. President Suzanne Wilson felt that the scholarships they finance are beneficial to the student body and she hopes that in the future, the administration will continue to let the organization finance the worthy cause.

The American Field Service had an assembly in the gym, familiarizing the student body with AFS and its purpose. The club made approximately $970 profit after they paid back individual members of the club for supplies in the Olympics. A class competition to see who could contribute the most money brought the total to $1,030. This money, as well as the resale of the extra 400 AFS Directories, helped bring a foreign student to Lake Highlands.

The Olympics gave people a better understanding of what AFS does and the students were impressed with the different exchange students. As president, Susan believed strongly in the cause of the American Field Service. Susan said, "AFS is a big promotion of world peace, and I'm thankful it is growing bigger every year."

Lake Highlands houses many outstanding clubs and each club exercised a lot of freedom when they raised money for their cause. The money raised was used in the better interests of the school and community.

The progressive rock band, D.C. Kow, entertains the student body at a GSL assembly which helped raise money for the two $500 scholarships given annually by the Girls Service League.

Red Carnation Day was a busy time for the NHS members. Senior Judy Schouweiler and junior Mary Miller hike back and forth delivering the 9,500 flowers.

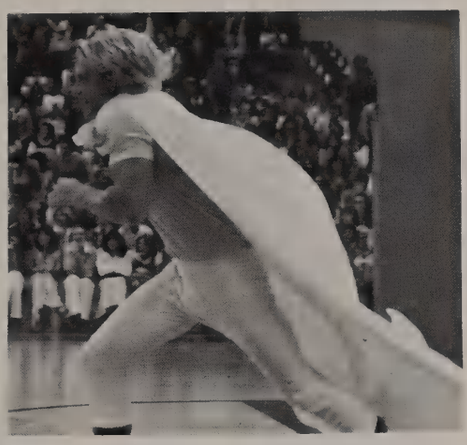
In the Superman relay of the AFS Olympics held on March 14, senior Jay Coppic flies out of the card board phone booth with superhuman speed.

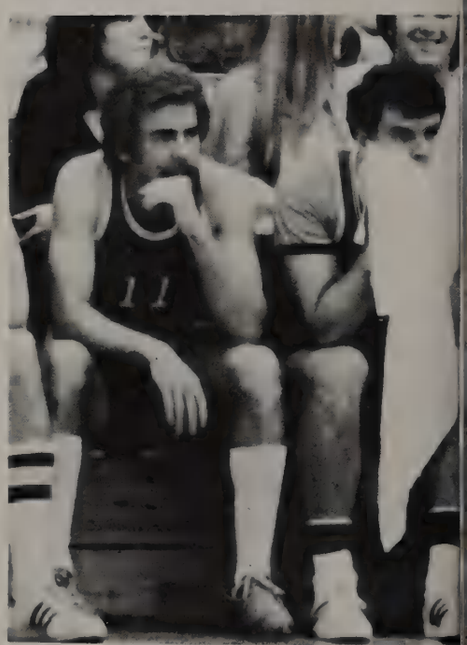


Teachers Mr. David Abercrombie, Mrs. Lynn Caldwell, Mrs. Jane Haltom and Mrs. Donna Matlock confer on their strategies before the tricycle race.

President of the Boy's chapter of Fellowship of Christian Athletes, Ronnie Marr, helps out in the money-raising car bash against Plano.

Seniors Mike Martin and Mike Brattlof jump for the rebound as Coach Gary Hetherington attempts to take the ball away during the Student-Faculty game sponsored by the FCA.

Students and Young Life leader Joel Householder look on as junior Nancy Blum feeds junior Evan Secor marshmallows in the skit at Young Life on a Monday night in the Student Center at the school. The meeting at the school was unusual in that the club usually met in churches or at individual's homes.



Coaches townsend and Stroble watch intently as they sit on the bleachers at the FCA basketball game. Members of the club annually play brave teachers in an assembly.

Religious Activities Benefit LH Students

With the popularity of Godspell, religion at Lake Highlands was brought into the spotlight. Religious activities have always played a major role in the lives of many LH students, but the show focused attention on the many Christian organizations in the school.

Among the various clubs serving in the community and school was the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. Among their many fund raising activities, the Student-Faculty Basketball game and the Plano Car Bash attracted the most attention.

Melanie Strange gives Clint Martell the wine from the Last Supper in the touching production of Godspell performed by the Drama Department this year.

Mrs. Eve Dunigan, junior office secretary and mother of football quarterback Matt Dunigan, prepares to hit the FCA Plano wreck with competitive zest.

The club also provided entertainment for their members with picnics and progressive dinners. One of the memorable events scheduled was Mike Ditka speaking in the LH Auditorium. This and other fund raising events aided in sending seven members to Hawaii for the annual summer FCA Conference.

Young Life and Campaigners also served as inspiration to the school. Although they did not have a formal roster, the club attracted many students regularly and welcomed newcomers. Featuring skits, songs and meaningful words, the club reached out to all students.

Somehow, the Christian faith infiltrated the school. Bible study groups formed and met before or after school in the park or in private homes, such as the group that met every Wednesday morning at Ronnie Marr's house.

79 Seniors Hear A Different Drummer

Auditions for Senior Show on Wednesday, April 4, began the first of many busy senior activities. After only ten rehearsals, the Senior Show, 1979--"Shine It On"--presented its 26 talent and comedy acts on May 11 and 12. Stacia Goad and Michael Jackson opened the show with their rendition of "Shine It On" followed by Denise Thomas and Dan Zelios in "Don't Fence Me In."

Seniors Lee Bridges and Chris Campbell then performed an "Arguments" skit from the Month Python show, and a seven piece band played for Greg Dulcie and Stacia Goad's duet "Be on Your Way." Traci England displayed her excellent tap dancing talent followed by Glen Roberts' comical piano rendition of "Beethoven's Sonata," and the varsity cheerleaders, in raincoats and umbrellas, danced to "Singing in the Rain."

"Feels So Good" was then played by Charlie Stimson, Kyle Martin and a five piece jazz band, followed by the senior men, dressed in tootoos and thermal underwear, dancing a ballet to "Swan Lake." Closing Act I was the senior girls' dance number to Stacia Goad's solo, "City Lights."

The big band sound, which served as a format for the show, opened the second act and was performed by the LH Stage Band directed by Lisa Whitworth. Senior Campaigners then sang "Pass My Love Around," followed by "Duelin' Jugglers" Carter Moore and Ronnie Marr. "When I Grow Too Old To Dream" was sung by soloist Julie Hester and "Macho Men" Mark Balda, Mike Brattlof, Bret Frantz, Mike Martin, Art Stricklin and Van Walker pantomimed a routine to "YMCA." "Sophisticated Ladies," the senior women's number, was then followed by the senior officers singing "Happiness Is." Michael Jackson and Brent Hardaway closed the show each with a solo while a slide show of the past year's events was given.

Comedy acts throughout the show included a Password skit, "Dejavu," "Breakfast with the Pipperson's," the Oscar Meyer tune related to LHHS, Disco Zeke House, Beaver Cleaver and Bob Kodd's graduation.

Ronnie Marr served as emcee and senior Tiger Dawson helped Miss Ferguson as student director.

Kim Henson and Michael Jackson perform "Breakfast with the Pippersons," a sound effects comedy skit in "Shine it On."

As a closing act, the Senior Class Officers Robi Eubanks, Jeff Holland, Suzanne Wilson, Cynthi Blum and Kyle Felts sing the song "Happines Is."

Dressed in too-toos and white thermal underwear, the senior men performed a ballet to the song "Swan Lake," which won the audiences at both shows of "Shine it On."

Stacia Goad and Michael Jackson perform the opening song "Shine it On" in Senior Show '79 held May 11 and 12 in the auditorium.

The senior women's skit entitled "Sophisticated Ladies" consisted of over 65 girls who sang three verses of a song satirizing their high school years.

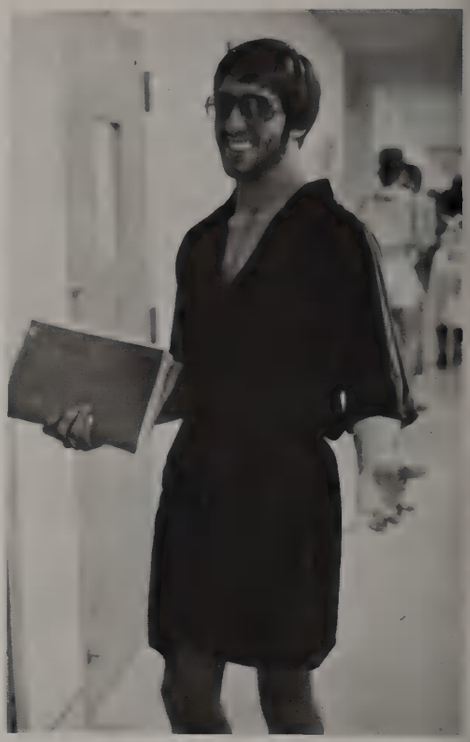
At Friday's Awards Assembly, Carey Smart received the Northlake Exchange Club's scholarship from Mr. Bo Bauereis. The $500 amount helped pay for her tuition at the University of Texas.

Seniors Mike Morris, in torn blue jeans and sleveless shirt, and Brad Kellar in T-shirt, shorts and bath robe, enjoy Senior Casual Day as did many others who participated.

May 18, a busy day for seniors, was Dress-up Day. Senior Raleigh Freeman participates by wearing a three-piece suit as did many senior guys. Raleigh clowns around with history teacher Mrs. Mary Russell.

Seniors took advantage of May 17, Casual Day, to wear comfortable clothes such as Mark Campbell in his bath robe. Others wore shorts, ratty T-shirts and other grubby attire.

Many senior girls wore hats to accessorize their Dress-up Day outfits. Suzi Souter wears a straw bonnet with her dress, as did many of the other senior girls.



Senior Wayne Mendenhall leaves the stage after receiving the National High School Award of Excellence at the Awards Assembly on May 18. Wayne was only one of many outstanding seniors honored at the assembly.

Couples line up out the door to sign in at the Senior Prom. Tornado damage to the LeBaron Hotel caused the dance to be moved to the Marriot Hotel on Stemmons.

About 490 couples attended Prom on Friday, May 18. Free h'ors doeuvres and drinks were served and dance music was provided by the band "Phyreworks."

A week after Senior Show, Casual Day was held on Thursday, May 17. Seniors wore costumes ranging from threadbare jeans and half shirts to bathrobes and shorts. Everyone enjoyed a relaxing, comfortable day which offered a nice change from the routine.

The following day changed everything with Dress-up Day giving seniors a chance to express their fancy ideas. Many girls wore straw hats with their dresses and pants suits, while three-piece suits dressed up the senior guys from the regular blue jeans.

At the Awards Assembly held second period, numerous scholarships, honors and departmental awards were presented to many who attended.

Ending the exciting day was the Senior Prom, held at the Marriot Hotel on Stemmons after tornado damage caused it to be moved from the previously scheduled LeBaron Hotel. About 490 couples attended the four-hour affair.

Music at the Prom was provided by the band "Phyreworks," and free drinks and hors d'oeuvres were available. Senior Principal Mr. Olen Pyles handed out prom favors--crystal wine decanters with an LH emblem.

Miss Susan Ferguson, one of the many teachers who chaperoned the Senior Prom, enjoys a drink while watching couples dance. The dance, which lasted from 9 p.m.-1 a.m., turned out to be an all-night occasion for many who attended.

Senior men await the arrival of their breakfast of eggs, bacon, sausage, hash browns, rolls and biscuits during the Senior Breakfast held at Lakewood Country Club.

Over 560 seniors attended the traditional senior breakfast. All enjoyed a fine meal and the opportunity to get together before graduation rehearsal at 10 a.m.

Sponsored by the Greenville Avenue Bank and Trust, the annual Senior Breakfast was held at the Lakewood Country Club May 18 at 8 a.m. Seniors Katie Gill and Colleen Crudden enjoy their meal of bacon, eggs and biscuits.

The long awaited graduation date, May 30, finally arrived with a hectic, activity-filled agenda. Starting the day off early, the Greenville Avenue Bank and Trust sponsored the annual Senior Breakfast at Lakewood Country Club at 8 a.m.

A full meal was served to the more than 560 seniors who attended. After eating, the bank officials were introduced and the senior class officers presented gifts to their principal and sponsors.

Mr. John Williams and Mr. Bryant Wolf, experienced in commencement procedures, help organize the ceremony by figuring out the order in which the graduates will file out during the Wednesday morning rehearsal.

Kyle Felts awarded Mr. Pyles with a trophy, a blue china vase was given to Mrs. Kitzmiller by Robin Eubanks, and both Mr. Williams and Mr. Moore received $50 gift certificates from Brentano's Book Store from Suzanne Wilson and Cynthia Blum.

From the breakfast, the seniors traveled to Moody Coliseum for graduation rehearsal. Mr. Wolf explained procedures, and the graduates practiced filing in and out and receiving their diplomas. Prom pictures were handed out by school photographer Bill Bunch immediately following the rehearsal.

The two-hour long commencement ceremony held at Moody Coliseum on May 30 completed three long years of high school for the Class of '79, numbering 709 strong. The ceremony was highlighted by a humorous welcoming speech from salutatorian Mike Lanoux, a standing ovation for senior president Jeff Holland's graduation, and valedictorian Linda Fernicola's farewell address.

After singing the Alma Mater, a few graduates tossed tennis balls into the air as a reminder of the past year's experience when Mr. Fountain removed pep rally priveledges due to such actions.

Beginning at midnight, five hours after graduation, close to 600 people converged upon Don Carter's All-Star Bowling Lanes to enjoy a full night of free bowling, pool, movies, arcade games and dancing in the Coo-Coo's Nest disco upstairs.

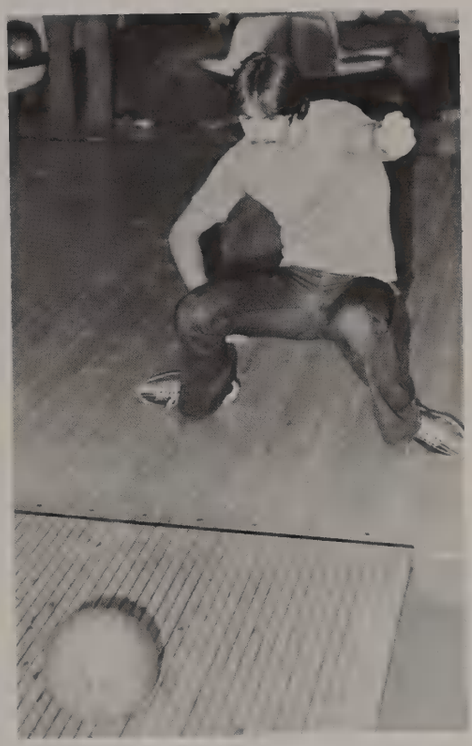
Completing the All-Night Party, breakfast was served at 4 a.m. Numerous door prizes, cash gifts, and gift certificates were given away including the grand prize, a 10 inch color, portable TV--which was won by Laurel Anderson.

By 6 a.m., an exhausted group of people--graduates and chaperones alike--left behind the debris of a fun-filled night.

Bobby Baker and Toni Galloway lead the procession of robed graduates into Moody Coliseum. 709 seniors graduated in the two-hour long ceremony which was highlighted by a standing ovation for senior president Jeff Holland's graduation.

Shelley Wall, honor graduate and NHS member, receives her diploma and congratulations from a Richardson School Board member at commencement exercises May 30.

Lynn McCarty and Don Williams enjoy a slow dance in the Coo-Coo's Nest Disco which was open to those seniors who wanted to dance the night away. A disc jockey provided continuous music.

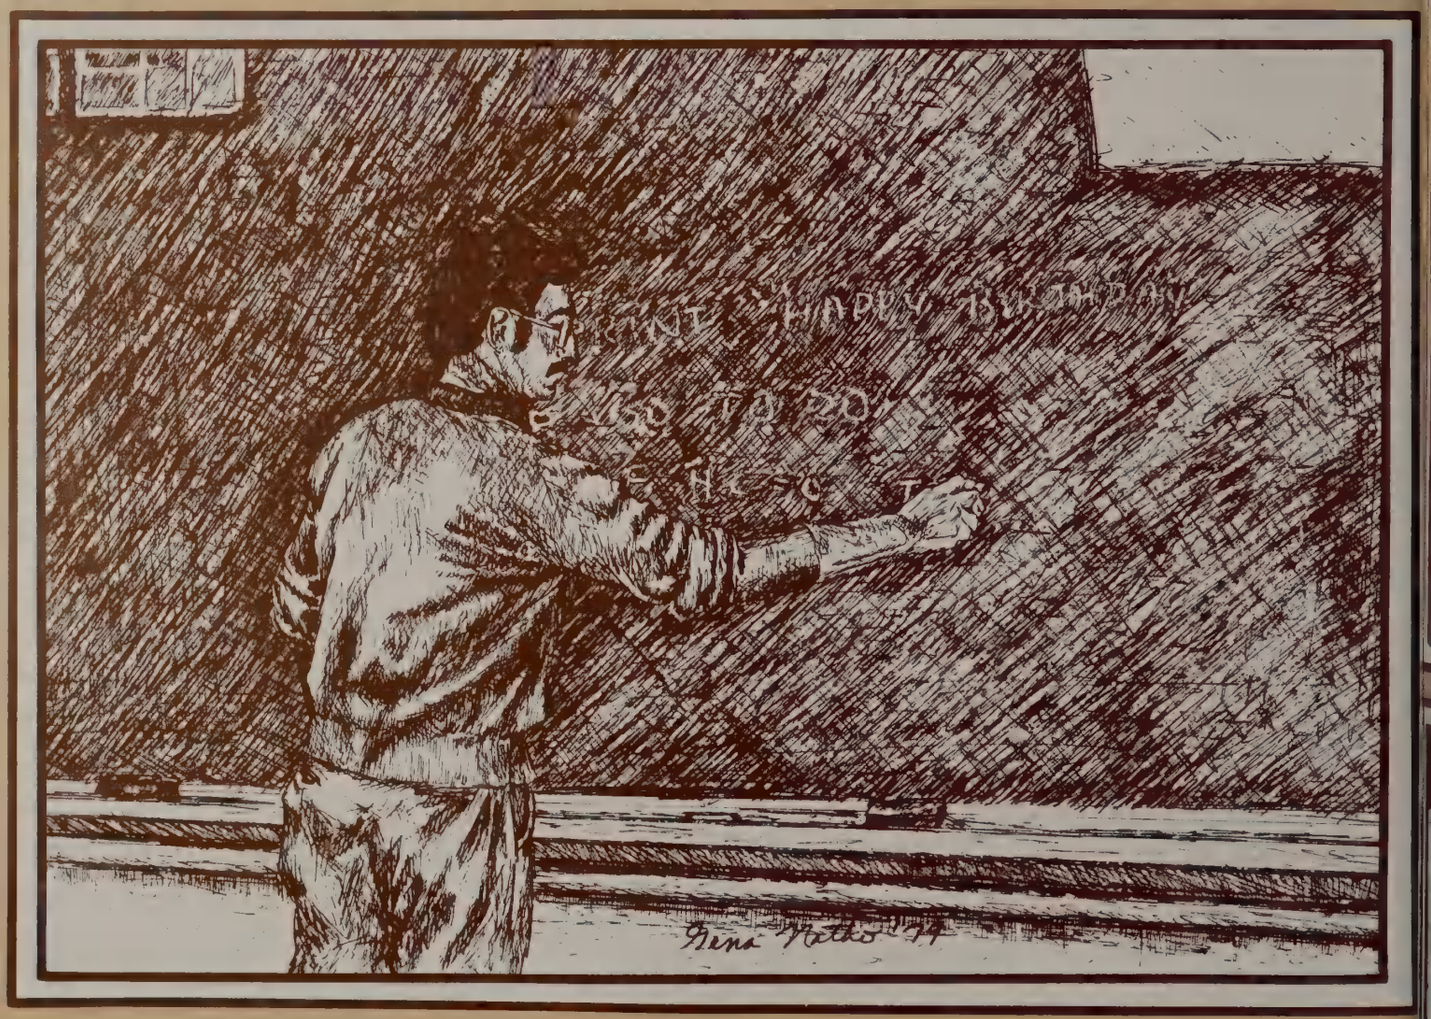


A full breakfast of bacon and eggs was served at 4 a.m. at the senior All-Night Party. Bethann Hunt and Charlie Brown show their full plates.

George Hefner and Allen Grusendorf fight it out in a car race at the All-Night party. Free bowling, dancing, pool, movies and arcade games were available from midnight until 6 a.m.

Drafting students learned basic functional design and acquired an eye for detail and accuracy. Seniors Danny Brewer and Chris Ceganero discuss their project.

Junior Steve Tacker, a student is Mrs. Barringer's Advanced Ceramics class cleans the potter's wheel in preparation to throw a clay pot.



Computer Math was one of the many advanced math courses offered to students who were interested in higher math. Coach Wade graphically displays an equation on the chalk board.

Up at the top in

was a nice place to be

We finally realized that somewhere between all of our activities and clubs we had to go to a few classes.

Everyone had to take the basic required courses. Sophomores realized that they seemed to be taking more while juniors and seniors seemed to be taking less and less. Of course, that's just the way it was--the juniors and seniors had taken the basic courses when they were sophomores.

LH was recognized as a strong academic high school by colleges across the state, so when seniors applied for acceptance to colleges, the strong academic background made a difference.

Electives were our favorite courses and they were the courses we looked forward to attending. It was in these classes, like the vocational programs in which we learned skills we would need in the job world, like the advanced academic courses in which we sampled knowledge in subjects we were considering for career fields, and like the classes such as drama, band and choir, in which we had fun while developing our talents.

Whether required, vocational or elective, academic excellence made us tops, and up at the top was a nice place to be.

The Physical Education Department offered a wide variety of courses to fill graduation requirements. Senior Gerald Skinner bowls at Don Carter's Bowling Lanes during Coach Clark's bowling class.

Sophomore Elaine Hamel sews a gown for Mrs. Pritchett's Home Economics II sewing class. Students learned pattern layout and cutting techniques beside learning how to sew.

English courses come to life; History inspires varied feelings

Somehow back in the spring no academic subjects sounded interesting and choosing courses did not envoke much enthusiasm within the student body. Students constatly changed their schedules trying to find courses to suit them. By the first day of school most students were reconciled to their fate and settled down with the chosen subjects. As the year progresses however, the dreaded subjects came alive and students found themselves if not enjoying the classes at least enduring them, although most would not admit it.

There were some required courses but students also had a wide variety of choices in each academic area and several classes also offered unique experiences. English, in particular, had special activities such as students in Mrs. Pittman's Humanities class who took a cultural trip to the Greek food festival. The participating students had a chance to sample delicious food, while as jumior Nancy Blum said, "We learned about the Greek Orthodox religion and had a chance to watch folk dancing." Other classes such as Southern Literature, Shakespeare, American Novel, and Humanities in the Southwest brought classics alive through indepth studies.

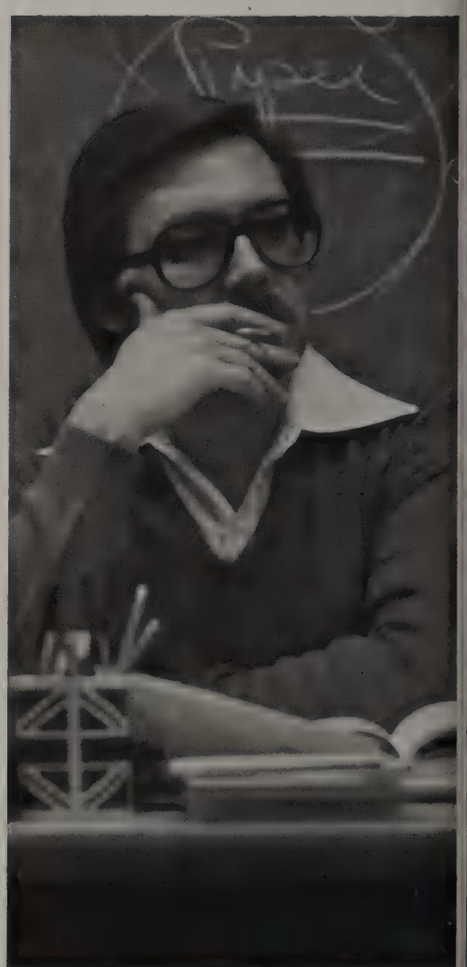
English courses ranged from the practical courses such as Composition and Structure of the English Language to the thought provoking classes such as Crisis in Critical Thinking, Satire, and Western Literature. Specialty English courses included Modern Drama, Modern Fiction, Myths and Legends and Modern Poetry. Also available were the regular sophomore, junior, and senior English classes along with Practical English. For students who excelled in English, Honors and Advanced Placement classes were offered.

Feelings about the required two quarters of Government were mixed. Junior Sue Slocum stated, "I feel that government is a very important course for the high school student. You need to be aware of how your government works so you can be more responsible in activities like voting." Other students such as senior Danny Brewer felt that government was a summary of what he had learned in junior high.

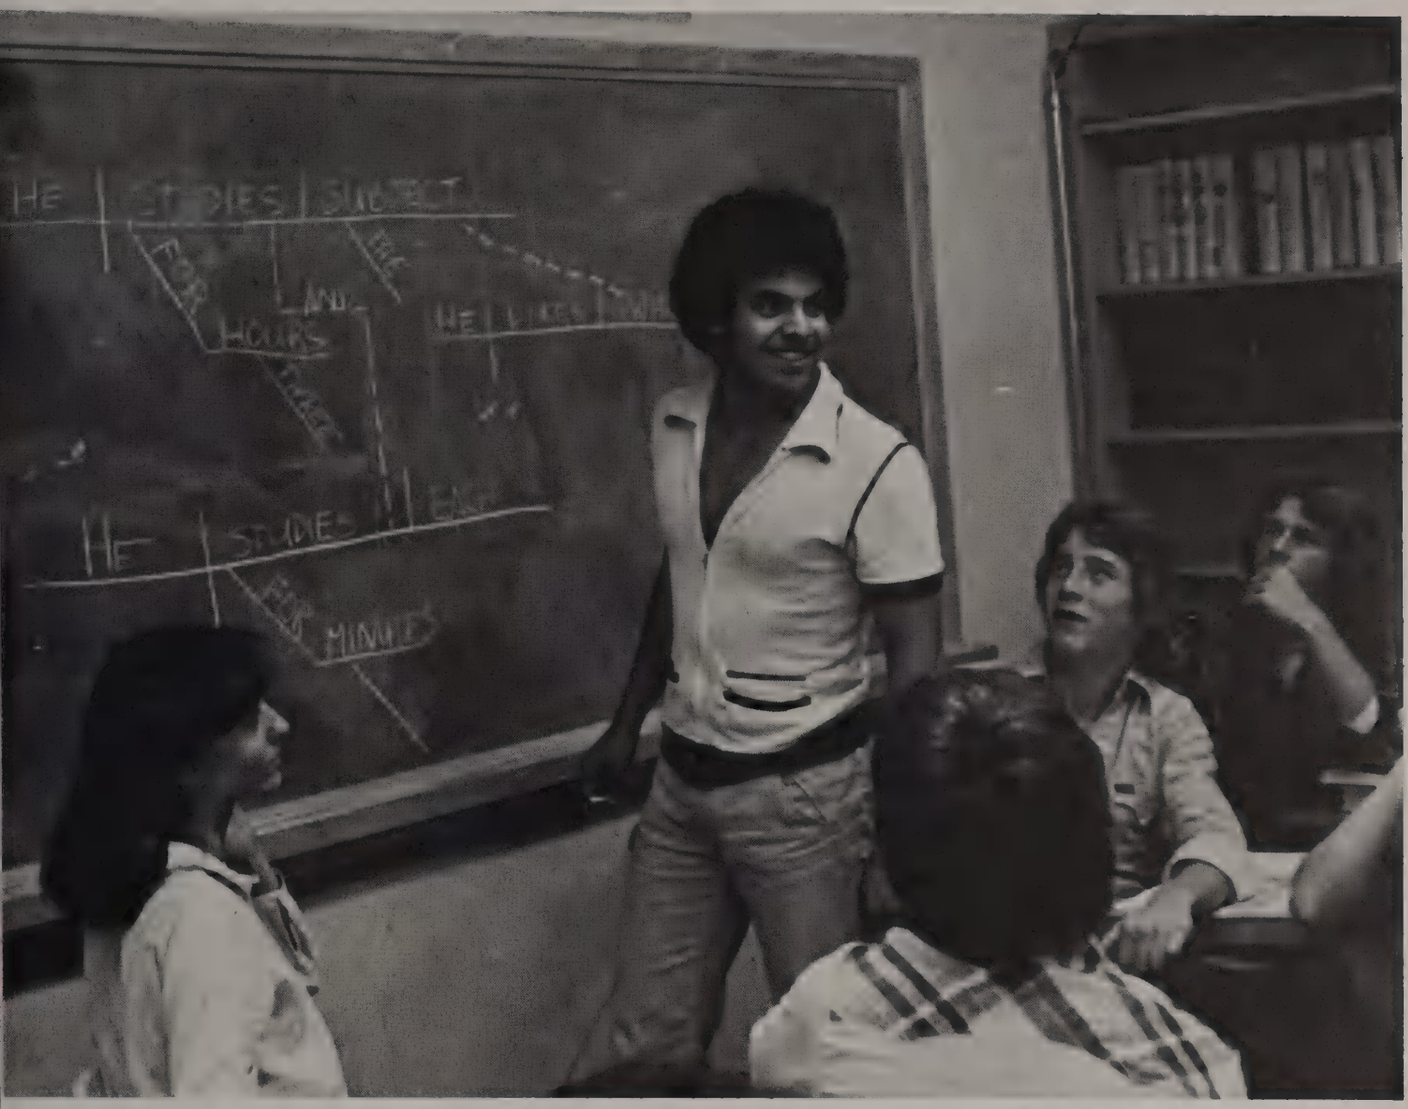
Also required was a year of American History which studied the American society, along with either World History which reviewed revolutions, religions and movements which shaped today's society or World Geography which studied current development throughout the world which affected physical and cultural settings.

Junior Philip Romo grins triumphantly as he correctly diagrams a difficult sentence in Ms. Fitzpatrick's composition class. Composition is a two-quarter course comprised of grammar, and a major term paper.

Master Sergeant David Lewis, from the United States Air Force gives a film presentation on a comparison between American and Soviet Union nuclear capability in a unit on the importance of maintaining a democratic government in this country.



Mr. Williams, Advanced Placement English teacher, listens attentively as students discuss an interpretation of a selection of Metaphysical poetry. Their ciscussion includes the comparison between Romantic, Modern and Metaphysical styles of poetry.



Junior Kirk Sides, portraying King Creon in Sophocle's Greek tragedy, Antigone, swears an oath of truth before taking the stand in the trial of Antigone. The presentation took place in Mrs. Pittman's Humanities class.

In Dr. Carole Buchanan's World History class, which is mainly comprised of sophomores, the students experiment with meditation during their study of comparitive religions. Meditation is "turning inward to find truth" which is one of the major aspects of Hinduism.

Health and physical education draw renewed interest at LHHS

With the number of joggers and health food nuts reaching epidemic proportions, the Health and Physical Education courses enjoyed increased interest. While there were a few who still considered the twelve minute walk-run detrimental to their health, more and more students were learning to enjoy staying fit.

The various physical education classes offered help to those ambitious students in their quest for a more fit body. Lake Highlands offered the most variety of physical education classes of any school in the area. Educators from all over came to observe the highly successful program.

Sophomore Shelby Hastings was excited that there were so many classes available to fulfill the five quarter physical education requirement. A student could choose from classes in dance, tennis, golf and soccer as well as weightlifting, gymnastics and volleyball. The diverse PE classes not only filled graduation needs but also introduced students to new sports and at the same time trimmed waistlines.

The importance of keeping fit was learned in the two quarter of required health. First aid, drug and alcoho abuse and mental well-being were also discussed. For a change of pace, speakers from Alcoholics Anonymous and a unit of cardio-pulminary resuscitation were brough in. Family living and the much talked about sex educatior were also a part of this important course.

Although many students enjoyed the health educatior classes, some did not. Senior Holly Reick felt that "The health course was not really necessary.

Judy Hefner, school nurse, demonstrates the cardio-pulminary resuscitation unit in Miss Jones' health class. This is the first year the Richardson Independent School District has offered CPR in high school. CPR is a basic life support instruction which includes mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and pressure on the heart. Miss Jones states, "I feel it is one of the most important things to learn. You never know when you'll be in a situation where you might have to save someone's life."

Sophomores Lee Ann Jacobs, Cathy Thorogood and Veronica Miliara prepare for a volleyball game. "It's an excellent opportunity to learn the basic skills related to both soccer and volleyball and to learn to play with some skill and understanding," commented Coach Bill Robbins.

Gerald Skinner, senior, demonstrates his notorious bowling spin. Behind him are juniors John Davis and Ronald Tol. John comments, "It's one of the better classes that you can take because you get to bowl on the taxpayer's money."

Junior Leanne Hester demonstrates a "scale" on the balance beam for Ms. Denise Jones' gymnastics class. Leanne comments, "I like gymnastics because it helps keep you in shape and it gives you a feeling of accomplishment. You can keep learning and progressing in your skills, which makes it a challenge."

Junior Alecia Merlick and sophomore Martin Grant demonstrate their frontiersman skills as they cook some homemade donuts for Mr. Bruce Baird's outdoor education class. The class offered many worthwhile activities such as building muzzle-loader rifles, firing guns at one of the local firing ranges and spending time camping in New Mexico.

LH students find variety in their science and mathematics classes

To many students, math was regarded as an uninteresting part of the academic curriculum and taken simply to fulfill college requirements. But to others, it was an exciting challenge.

The Lake Highlands math department offered a variety of courses ranging from the basics of arithmetic to college level mathematics. Fundamentals of Math was designed to associate the study of math with daily living. For those students not yet prepared for the regular Algebra I class, Introductory Algebra I and II were provided. Algebra I and II were offered for students to develop a deductive reasoning process and to learn to apply numerical concepts in solving arithmetic problems. For those students particularly skillful in algebraic concepts, an Honors Algebra II was offered.

Many students who excelled in algebra found geometry a difficult course because of the three dimensional concepts and reasoning processes involved. Students were taught to prove equations through the use of theorems and postulates.

"This is the only course I've taught in which motivation is not a problem because of the excitement created by the computers," commented Mr. Tommy Wade about his computer math class. The computer math class was an excellent preparatory course for those students interested in a computer-oriented field. Each level of the three-part course progressed to a more advanced level of computer programming. Some of the prime objectives of the course were to provide a fundamental knowledge of the computers and to acquaint students with the problems and limitations of computer programming. In addition, the class was designed to motivate logical thinking methods and stimulate creative imagination. "I like it a lot and it has taught me to think logically. I've used the thinking processes in all my math and science classes," explained senior Bill Byrd.

For the students who enjoyed math and wished to continue its study, advanced courses such as trigonometry, probability and statistics, elementary analysis and calculus with analytic geometry were offered.

Since the field of science covers such a broad spectrum, the LH Science Department offered a variety of courses for those students with many interests.

"The study of life and how organisms carry on in their environment" was Mrs. Anna Parker's definition of biology. The class examined the basic structures of cells and organisms by using the microscope. Genetics and organic variation were also included. Experiments in dissection of invertebrates and vertebrates were performed by the students. Dissections included such organisms as the worm and grasshopper and progressed to higher forms of life such as the fish and the frog.

Chemistry classes studied matter, its composition, the changes it underwent and the energy that accompanied those changes. Through experimentation, students studied the physical and chemical changes of matter and their properties. Mrs. Bernice Bonner felt that chemistry was the most important of all sciences "because it is the foundation of all matter and all science."

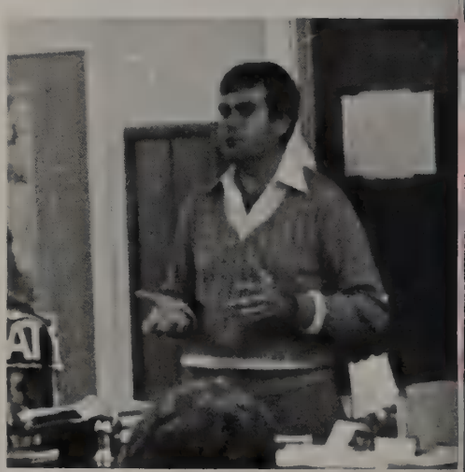
Physics classes studied the branch of science which governs the universe by involving the relationship between matter and energy. Students conducted experimentation involving the structure of the atom, motion, gravity, magnetism, electricity and mechanics. Light, heat, sound and the physical states of the matter were also included in the experiments to better understand the complexities of the science.

Physical Science combined the studies of chemistry and physics and was offered as a prerequisite to the more advanced laboratory sciences.

For those students who were interested in pursuing a medical career, anatomy and physiology was available. This course studied the inner structures, functions and internal composition of the body.

In addition, geology, the study of the earth, was also offered as a part of the LH Science Department.

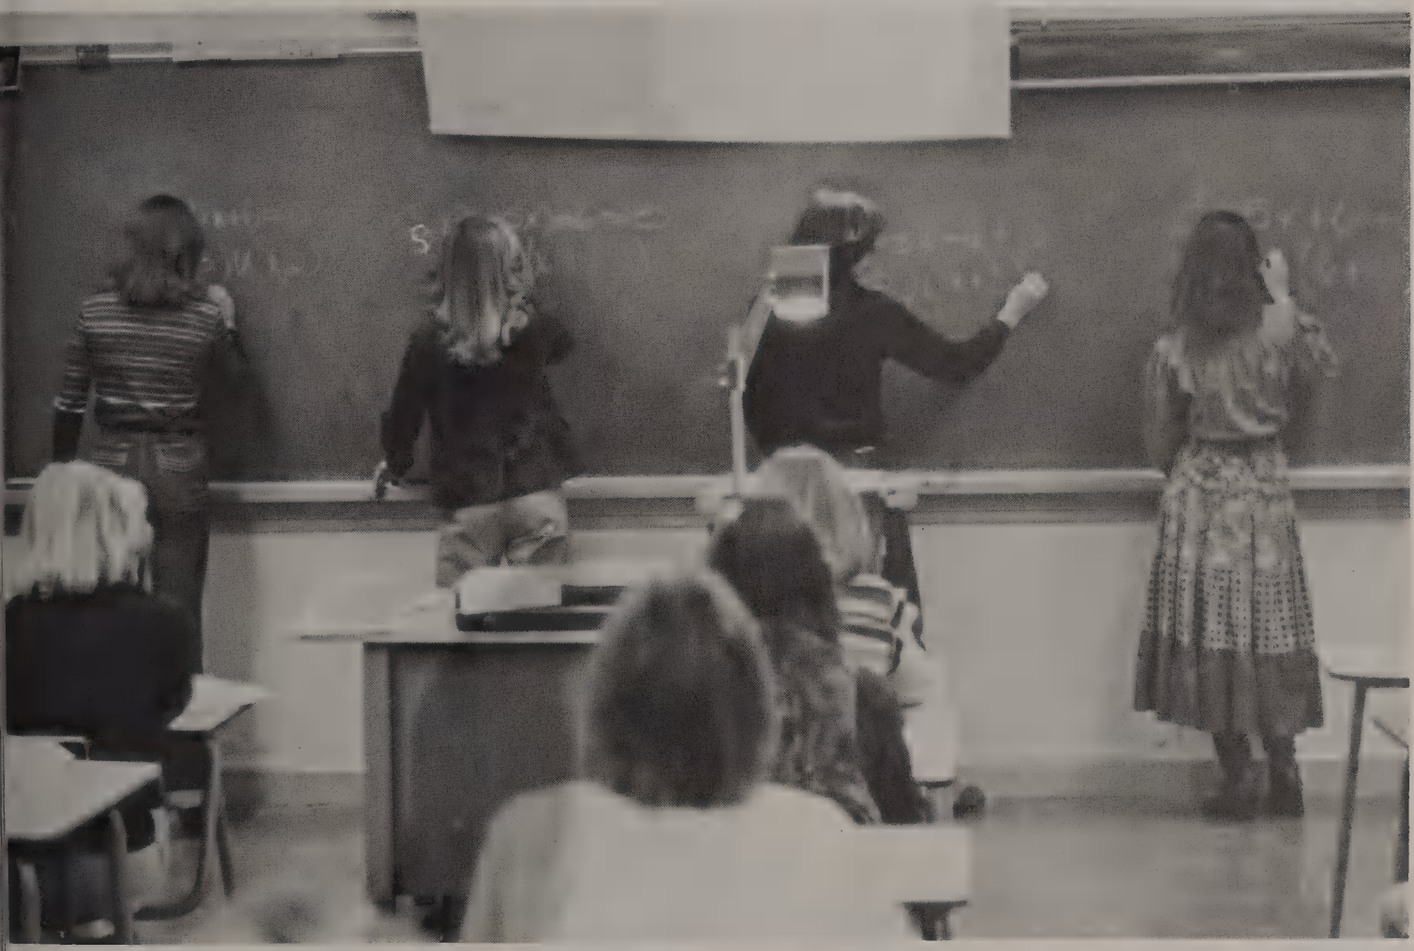
Mr. Winstead's fifth period biology class applies their laboratory techniques by studying microscopic slides for traces of one-celled organisms such as the amoeba and the paramecium. Sophomores Mike McCowan, Ken Wilson, Melissa Sorenson and Mark Caldwell take part in the experiment in which the entire class participated.



Professor Hedrick, who earned a degree in mechanical engineering from Texas Tech University, is the guest speaker discussing possible energy sources for the future.

Junior Ali Ettefagh skillfully performs a cat dissection for Mr. Winstead's anatomy and physiology class. Although most students find the class interesting, senior Wendy Condiff has a look of objection as she discusses the dissection with Dan Zelios.

In the computer math class taught by Mr. Tommy Wade, Senior Jeff Holland demonstrates his technique as Ann Tyree looks on. As Ann comments about the computer math class, "I've learned a lot of basic math functions that I didn't remember how to do."



n Mr. Tommy Wade's fourth period Algebra II class, a student representing ach row works at the chalk board. Junior Tracey Lokey, Jill Woodring, lecia Merlick and Debbie Lacey try to arrive at the correct answer for their ow. Jill Woodring comments, "I like it because it's logical and you have to do a lot of thinking. With a mathematical background, you can go into many fields." On the other hand, Tracy Lokey says, "I don't like math, and the only reason I'm taking it is to get into college." These two comments seemed to sum up students feelings about the course.

Electives Relieve Students of Routine

To relieve the routine of school's required subjects, the elective academics program was introduced so that students could broaden their insights into a wider range of subjects than just the conventional English and math classes. The most favorable aspect of the program was that the elective courses offered at Lake Highlands met almost every student's needs.

FINE ARTS

The Fine Arts Department symbolized the more creative side of school activity. A myriad of talented students participated in the Fine Arts courses, and some of them were able to receive scholarships to colleges.

For creative students who enjoyed art, there were many courses available. Crafts was designed for students interested in activities such as enameling, jewelry and leathercraft. Ceramics was a good course for students interested in pottery. Advanced courses in both crafts and ceramics were offered.

Art I enabled students to develop drawing and painting techniques, while Art II focused on printing and fiber crafts. For very talented art students, advanced courses such as Art III and Art IV were available.

The Drama Department was divided into three courses. Students in Drama I studied the history of the theater and the fundamentals of acting. Drama II and Drama III were more advanced levels of acting which focused on theatrical productions.

Students who enjoyed oral presentations had an opportunity to develop their talents in the Speech I course. In Speech II, students were allowed to engage in both speech and debate tournaments.

Stagecraft was offered for students interested in set design, costumes and publicity for play productions.

The history of the mass media, writing techniques, variations in layout and design and advertising were some of the topics studied in Journalism I. Students in Journalism II were able to apply their talents by participating on the newspaper or yearbook staffs.

Students who enjoyed singing had an opportunity to participate in the Lake Highlands choir. The varisty and sophomore choirs focused on performances and musical competitions. Students were allowed to compete in competitions such as UIL in solo, ensemble and group contests. For students interested in more than just choral singing, a pop group comprised of members of both the sophomore and varsity choirs was established.

One of the more colorful aspects of the Fine Arts program were the highly acclaimed Lake Highlands band. The band was divided into four parts, the marching band, Symphonic Band I, Symphonic Band II, and Concert Band. Students were required to audition and then they were placed into the class best suited to their talents.

The marching band consisted of all the members from Symphonic Band I and the best students from Symphonic Band II, many of whom had won individual music honors.

Symphonic Band I was the most prominent level that could be achieved by a student within the Band Department. Musical competition was the primary activity of both Symphonic Band I and Symphonic Band II, while

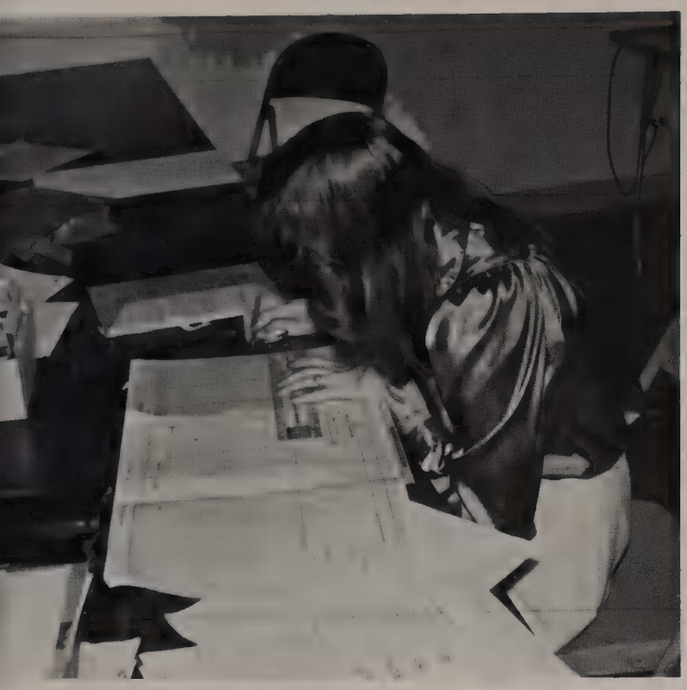
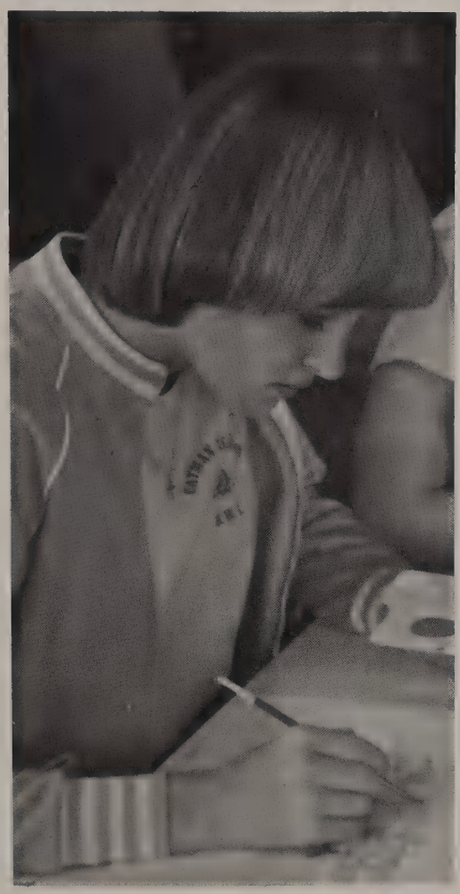
The talented Lake Highlands band practices for an upcoming concert performance. As Drum Major Jimmy Cox explains, "I think that band is the most important elective there is because it is so rewarding to know the judges like us. Along with the music, the program teaches us responsibility. Sometimes I don't like all the time it takes, yet it pays off."

"This year's orchestra is one of the best ever at Lake Highlands," comments maestro Larry Gebhardt, who discusses a musical piece with the orchestra.



Junior Robin Burden works laboriously to complete a yearbook deadline. Robin joined the yearbook staff "Because I enjoy recording events during the year, and the yearbook gives me a way of doing this, Most people do not realize the work involved in producing a yearbook."

Miss Debbie Pope accompanies the quartet of Denise Thomas, Monica Grosz, Tracee McKee and Lindy Williams as they rehearse for the upcoming Highlandette Spring Show. As Monica Grosz comments about choir, "It's challenging to see the different things you can do with your voice."



"I like active learning instead of passive learning," explains junior Kim Mantrom as she busily works on a watercolor painting while junior Eddie Mancuso observes.

Seniors Elaine Brown and Steve Argenbright demonstrate their acting talents by performing a one-act play. As Mrs. Pam Ellard states, "Drama is a creative field that's always changing."

concert band focused mainly upon the fundamentals of music.

Orchestra students were required to audition and then were placed into chairs, according to their musical ability. In addition, students were able to compete in both solo and group competition.

Music Theory, the study of harmony and ear training, was an ideal course for students interested in musical composition. Music History and Literature was also offered as a part of the Fine Arts curriculum.

FOREIGN LANGUAGES

Foreign Languages were offered to introduce students to various speaking and cultural aspects of different countries.

There were four languages available, French, German, Latin and Spanish. Students in first year concentrated on listening, speaking, and comprehending. Second year emphasized reading, writing and vocabulary, while third and fourth year focused on literature. For gifted students, a fifth year of foreign language study was available.

SOCIAL SCIENCES

The Social Science Department was available within the elective academics program.

Economics and the fundamentals of free enterprise system were designed to teach students the workings of the American business institution.

English history was the study of the English culture with particular emphasis on the English system of government.

Advanced Texas Studies covered the political, cultural and industrial development of the state.

The psychology course was divided into three classes. General Psychology I focused on the aspects of wholesome personality, motivation and intelligence. Personality disorders were studied in Psychology II while the ideas of personality theorists were discussed in Psychology III.

Topics involving culture, human nature, and evolutionary theories were studied in the anthropology course.

HOME ECONOMICS

The Home Economics Department provided a number of courses for students interested in domestic management.

There were nine homemaking courses. Homemaking IA, IIA and IIIA focused on foods, nutrition, ettiquette and kitchen design. Students in Homemaking IB, IIB and IIIB studied family planning, childcare, consumer education and interior designing. Homemaking IC, IIC, and IIIC were designed to teach sewing, tailoring techniques and pattern design.

Home and Family Living students probed decisions to be made during engagement, marriage and parenthood. Courses such as home furnishing, consumer education and home nursing were also available in the department.

Single survival was a very popular course among senior students, especially men. Nutrition, cooking, and budget management were some of the topics

Miss Fran "Mlle" Maples encourages her French class to watch "The Count of Monte Christo" as an extra credit class assignment. As Miss Maples explains, "Learning French is a fascinating luxary that may someday save students from losing out in the job market."

Homemaking teacher Mrs. Elizabeth Pritchett assists senior Debbie Dunlap with her sewing project. Mrs. Pritchett carefully explains to Debbie the guide sheet which provides the steps, directions and techniques of putting a garment together properly.

For the single survival class, Senior Merium Gillial serves Jeff Doman a beef dish that he has just prepared. In addition to cooking, the students also learn financial management.

For the Psychology II course, Juniors Danny Avenaim and Michael Bates work on a finger maze in an exercise designed to test the response of conditioned learning.

Kathy McPherson, Jackie Miars, Amy Deloney and Laura Fritz listen intently while Mrs. Carol Webster uses the innovative foreign language lab in teaching her first year Spanish students. Mrs. Webster feels that teaching a foreign language is rewarding "Because you can take students that don't know anything about the subject and watch them progress."

Although the artifacts are planned, senior Greg Dulcie uncovers an object on his anthropology expedition. This project was designed to expose students to various cultures.

studied. It was designed, as senior Chris Powers stated, "To aid in college when we're alone."

BUSINESS EDUCATION

The Business Education Department was designed for students to gain a fundamental knowledge of business practices.

There were a variety of secretarial skills taught in the program. Personal typing was provided for students who wanted to learn typing for personal use only. Typing I and II were advanced levels designed to prepare students interested in an office vocation.

General Business instructed students on the American economic system. Personal banking records, insurance taxes and installment buying were some of the subjects covered in the business math course. Business communications was designed to develop the writing, listening, speaking and reading skills of the students in order for him to become a competent employer in a business field.

Business Law I was designed to teach the essentials of civil law in order for students to become aware of their legal rights. Some of the topics studied were those involving contracts, warranties and title. Business Law II focused on business organization, property, insurance and employment. Reinactment of courtroom trials was just one of the methods used in order for students to relate the system of law with every day life.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS

An industrial arts program was provided for students interested in a technological field.

For students interested in architecture, there were three courses offered. In general drafting, students were taught the use of architectural instruments and the fundamentals of drawing. Architectural Drafting I was a more advanced continuation of general drafting while pre-engineering drafting was designed for students seriously pursuing a career in engineering, architecture or some other related field.

Courses such as power mechanics, machinery and shop were also available. Some of the areas studied in the shop course were engine building and woodworking.

Photography was comprised of three basic components. Photography IA focused on the principles of optics, light and chemistry. Students in Photography IB were taught the use of both simple and complex cameras and various photo developing instruments. In Photography IC, students developed various printing techniques.

ADVANCE PLACEMENT COURSES

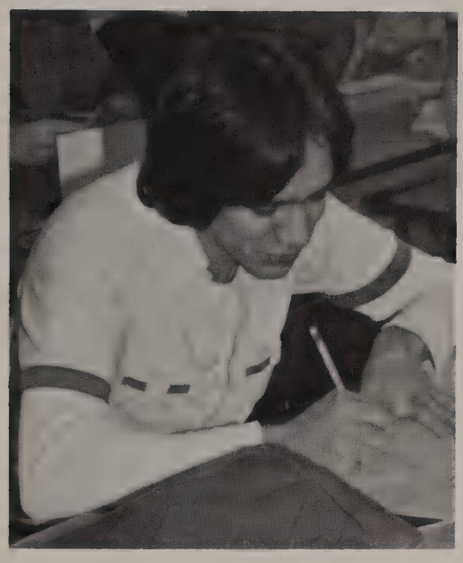
Advance Placement courses were offered for the very gifted student who wished to place out of freshman college hours. At the end of the course, students were required to pass a placement test in order to receive college credit. Advance Placement courses offered included English, American History, European History, Biology, Chemistry and Physics.

"I really enjoy the class, especially the labs. It enables high school students to experience part of the college world," comments junior Lisa Morriss about the AP Chemistry course.

Junior Harry Friedman and sophomore Rex Leonard Practice their typing skills in the personal typing course. "I took the course because my penmanship left so much to be desired. I went in typing 17 letters a minute and came out typing 35 words a minute. It is one of the most helpful courses and I would recommend the class to anyone going to college," comments Harry.

Senior Lance King scrutinizes a gram-stain of unknown bacteria for his AP Biology class. This course is designed for students who are interested in a scientific career or for those who wish to get ahead on college hours in high school. The class covers a wide variety of biological study, such as biochemistry, microbiology, botany and comparative anatomy.

"It's a good class for anybody who wants to go into management. It will help you keep track of your own home finances," explains senior Greg Groneman about the accounting course.



enior John Parks demonstrates his mechanical bilities by working on an engine in his power echanics class. The course is designed to each students the basics of machinery.

There's a lot more to it than just drawing lines," xplains junior Diane Graf as she practices the ndamental techniques of "dimensioning" in er drafting class.

As a member of the PELE vocational program, Senior Cathleen Traster addresses a group of kindergarten children at Wallace Elementary School.

Senior Robert Schwenn, a student in the VOE program, prepares a money ticket for a customer. Robert works as a drive-in teller at White Rock National Bank.

—Vocational Classes Offer Job Training—

Did you ever wonder what vocational cooperation really meant? To many students, it was a cooperation between the business world and education to train them in areas of their career goals.

Gerry Horton, career counselor, felt that the vocational programs were not only beneficial to students who wished to work after high school, but also to those planning to continue their education. Some college bound students were able to pay for much of their schooling through their job experience.

In the vocational cooperative programs, a student received seven quarter credits the first year and eight the second year. In addition to three classes of the basic high school curriculum, each student had one hour daily of class concerning general training, human relations, skills and job attitudes.

Under the vocational label were two programs in which the students were not paid for their work. These were Pre-Employment Laboratory (PELE) and Management Internship Program (MIP) Many students benefitted from these programs in that they experimented with their tentative careers in a laboratory situation.

PELE placed students in day nurseries and elementary schools for the laboratory portion of the course. Students prepared the lessons as well as providing discipline and learning skills. Senior Greg Grant commented, "It let me teach kids to see if I want to teach." He felt that this kind of program was needed and one could gain a lot of experience.

Many students wishing to investigate their specific job fields were involved in MIP, the Management Intern Program. The pay the students received was the experience they gained. Job locations ranged from gyms to court houses, from emergency rooms to department stores.

Regardless of the time-consuming work without pay, most students appreciated the opportunity to explore

The Management Intern Program, known as MIP, proved to be an extremely popular vocational course among junior and senior students. The program enabled students to explore careers that they were interested in through direct contact with experts in their field of pursuit. Junior Ronnie Marr, a student of MIP, gives some pointers to basketball players at Berkner High School.

As a student of the Management Intern Program, Senior Margaret Hume checks accounting records on the computer. She is an employee of White Rock Bank.

Junior Tracy Parkerson, Sophomore Julie Moser, Junior Jana Mars and Junior Vicky Lawson prepare guides on how and what to teach the children in the nursery schools they were stationed in. These students are all members of PELE, a home economics work program.

"My job gives me great experience in the legal field, and this helps me since I plan on becoming a lawyer. It has enabled me to learn about court systems and big businesses," commented Junior Doni Marquart who works as a legal secretary at an attorney's office through VOE.

Junior Basil Holt adjusts an engine part ■■ his manager Mr. Lee Puckett looks on. Basil is employed at Fishin' World and his occupation revolves around motor boat mechanics. His chief training objective is to get certified as a motor boat mechanic and CVAE has helped him get ■ good head start.

As CVAE coordinator Neil Patton explains, "The program provides a wide variety of occupational experiences for Lake Highlands students. Many students turn their part time jobs into full time careers."

The Vocational Adjustment Course, VAC, provided students with ■ variety of jobs. VAC coordinator Mr. John Love discusses junior Michael Brandon's job with him. Michael is employed at Hardy's Shoe Store in Valley View Shopping Mall where he works as a salesman.

Senior Ellen Newhall edits advertising layouts for The Dallas Times Herald. Ellen works as an ad copy clerk where she assists in editing and selling advertisements for the newspaper. She obtained her job through the CVAE vocational program.

Office occupations were included in still another vocational program. VOE, Vocational Office Education, was a high school course which trained qualified students for a career in office occupations. Not only did students receive classroom instruction, but also on-the-job training in an actual business office. In-class instruction included training on office machines such as typewriters and adding machines in addition to general office information.

For students with special learning needs, CVAE was available. The Coordinated Vocational Academic Education program provided the dual educational opportunities of developing a saleable vocation skill and a basic knowledge in the fields of math, science, English and social studies. Though job interests varied for each student, the employment placement was arranged according to the student's apptitudes, interests, values and career goals.

Individualism was the key word for VAC students. The two coordinators, Jerry Hunt and John Love, worked with each individual student in the Vocational Adjustment Cooperation to help place him or her in a job where he could gain experience and learn a trade. Mr. love stated, "While being exposed to the world of work, the student is finding himself."

For students interested in health occupations, HOCE, the Health Occupations Cooperative Education, was available. Some of the favorable points included preparation for an occupation in health care and development of good work habits.

HOCE also helped acquaint students with a wide variety of service careers within the health field. Students had the opportunity to receive training in careers such as diet clerks, operating room technicians and X-ray technician assistants.

CVAE student Roy Roy, junior, prepares to check the coolant level in the radiator of a customer's automobile. Roy is employed at Dan 'N Ted's Automotive where he works as a service station attendant. He performs routine, but a wide variety of duties as service station attendant, such as filling gasoline, checking motor oil and other fluid levels and checking tires.

Home Economics Cooperative Education is a program coordinated with jobs relating to domestic studies. Junior J.J. Chitwood, who is involved with HECE, prepares a patient for a dental examination. J.J. works as a dental assistant where she has a variety of duties such as mixing dental cement, developing X-rays and scheduling appointments.

Guest speaker Gean Jordon talks to the Distributive Education class on grooming. Because DE is associated with fashion merchandising, Ms. Jordan lectures the students on hygiene, skin care, makeup, and other beauty necessities.

For students interested in jobs involving skilled trades or health occupations, Industrial Cooperative Training or ICT was available. Junior Rocky Stanley, a student of ICT, works on a hotel cite as a construction worker for C.D. Henderson Company.

"I really enjoy DE because if you get a good job you will get a whole lot of training. The job enables you to become marketable. I like my job because I like clothes. There are a lot of interesting people and interesting customers also. I joined the program because I wanted to get into retail and DE is a good way," comments Junior Steve Turner. Steve was an employee of J. Riggings, a men's clothing store, where he worked as a salesman. Here, he marks a customer's pants to be altered.

Senior Kim King straightens a rack of clothing as she works as a salesperson for Joske's. Kim received the job through HECE, another home economics vocational program.

"I enjoy the DE program because you get to meet new people and experience new adventures," comments junior Stan Stanberry as he stocks the new fall merchandise at Red Cross Shoes.

Yet another vocational coop was Distributive Education (DE). This was course in which actual experience work was combined with classroom study for marketing, merchandising management and service occupations. Distributive Education also had their own social-professional club, DECA, with state and area contests in business skills offering challenges to those interested.

If you were interested in industrial, technical and health occupations, you might have been involved in ICT, the Industrial Cooperative Training Program. Students studied job skills and procedures, technical information and personal and social adjustment. ICT also stressed learning by theory in a classroom and gaining valuable experience at work, combined with leadership skills.

Another program offering similar training, along with other varied fields, was Home Economics Cooperative Education, (HECE). Senior Kim King, a two year participant, revealed though, that it had more career fields in which one could train. They ranged from child care to food service, from fashion coordinator to physical fitness aide. Miss King also stated, "You work in your individual area. I think the program is very good." One also learned about general business functions such as income tax and bank accounts.

Together, the vocational programs provided a unique learning experience for many students. In addition to their normal classes, they had the chance to explore the world of employment, which gave them the valuable opportunity to experiment with various career fields. Not only did students learn to deal with other people and situations, but also with themselves.

This cooperation between school and business directed many students toward their career goals and interests. Most of the students benefitted from the vocational programs and will continue to reap the benefits in the future. Through the help and encouragement of the sponsors, many young adults will go on to a very rewarding and fulfilling future in the business and industrial world.

Special Services

Administration Willing to Help

Principals with their licks, secretaries with their white notes, librarians and their constant reprimands and Ruby, the clean-up lady; all had one thing in common, a desire to be around students and to help them become mature adults ready to face either careers or college.

One person willing and ready to help students and improve their surroundings was Principal Jimmie Fountain. Mr. Fountain's duties included the carrying out of district policies as well as making certain policies which pertained to Lake Highlands only, such as tardies and detentions. Mr. Fountain felt that, "Everything is for the students, even discipline." He also encouraged a good, pleasant atmosphere, essential to proper learning.

Another of those special people was Mr. Tom Whitman, assistant principal for special services. Mr. Whitman was in charge of extracurricular activities, school finances and scheduling.

Did you ever look in your respective class office and wonder what exactly those ladies behind the desks did? Not only was their purpose to catch those who thrived on cutting classes and to hand out detentions, but they enjoyed being around students. They also had the opportunity to have vacations and holidays with their families. Both secretaries in the senior office stated that they enjoyed seeing the kids every day."

Another group of hard workers, who were usually hidden by their typewriters, were the workroom assistants. Their basic responsibilities were typing tests and running machines for teachers. Betty Chambers commented that she really "enjoyed the atmosphere at LH."

Counselors also felt that their job was worthwhile. They enjoyed the involvement in the growth of students. Mr. Chandler felt that "Lake Highlands students are of good quality and very outstanding, due to the excellent faculty." The duties of the counselors consisted of guidance in course choices and helping with personal problems.

Junior Debbie Hearne spends her study hall time aiding the counselors. Junior counselor Jerry McVay explains course choices for the next year to Debbie during a quiet moment in the office.

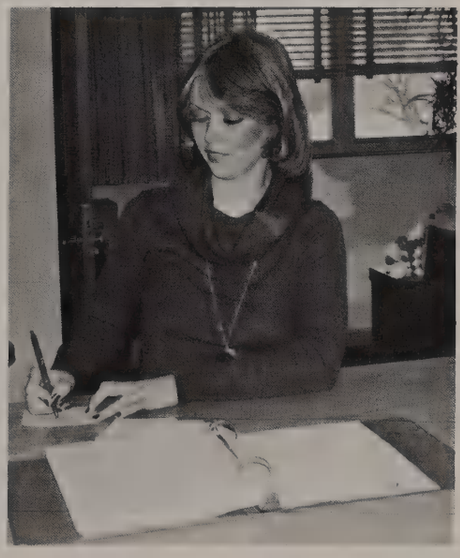
Lake Highlands Principal Jimmie Fountain smiles and extends his hand in thanks as he receives an award from Mr. Bauereis, head of the AFS adult chapter.

Mrs. Paula Hannon, ■ secretary in the junior of fice, looks up a student's schedule in order t send an office note. Other secretarial duties in clude checking students in and out and keepin records.

Special services principal Tom Whitman take time from the normal school schedule ■■ he sell jewelry which he makes in his spare time.

One of the duties of the class principals was to listen to teachers in their respective offices. Senior Principal Olen Pyles, listens attentively to Mrs. Freddie Clark, Singles Survival teacher.

Inside the workroom, Betty Chambers works at running off a test for a teacher. Though usually unseen, the workroom helpers prove very helpful to the school.



Senior office secretary, Barbara Scott, grins as she fills out a tardy slip for a senior student, one of her many responsibilities.

On a typical day in Lake Highlands, lunchroom lady Annie Hunt serves chili in the cafeteria line to the students. Many students complained about the cafeteria food, but they didn't know that there was a student tasting committee that met each month to taste potential cafeteria food.

Mrs. Libby Milton, one of the permanent substitutes, checks roll in one of her classes. The permanent subs were a new addition to Lake Highlands.

Ron Carman starts his work day about 6:30 a.m. picking up after students. One of his jobs is to clean the floors of the classrooms.

Special Service People Provide Variety of Aid for LH Students

Discipline, probably the most disliked word at school, belonged mainly to the class principals. This, though, was not their only responsibility. Senior principal Olen Pyles was in charge of building maintenance along with his obligation to attend his respective class sponsored functions.

Junior principal James Caldwell and sophomore principal James Taylor, also shared the responsibility of presiding over class functions. Another part of their their job was getting to know the students and helping students, especially sophomores in Mr. Taylor's case, get adjusted to high school life.

Head librarian Mrs. Fran Medlin, disclosed that her main purpose as a librarian was to help students find information and teach library skills, and that the qualities needed to become a librarian are the love of books and an investigative nature. The Lake Highlands library was also inhabited by secretaries. They spent their hours ordering films and slides, keeping files in order and checking out books.

Another person devoted to Lake Highlands and its students was Ruby Lee, the clean-up lady. She took care of cleaning the girls' bathrooms, windows, lockers and walls. She also explained that if any students ever wanted to talk to someone, she was available and willing to help them. She also liked being around younger people.

Ron Carman also shared this sentiment. He liked the atmosphere of the energetic students. Ron's job was to open the building, clean the cafeteria, and take care of minor repairs.

A new institution at Lake Highlands was perminent subs. These, though, were not submarines with curly hair, but rather they were six ladies hired by Lake Highlands as permanent substitute teachers. Mrs. Sue Dalzell liked the idea of being "permanent" because the students could learn what she expected of them and vice-versa. She said, "I lik having some part or influence on their lives."

Part of the non-ending job of school custodian Ruby Lee is to clean the walls and lockers. She helps to contribute to the admosphere necessary for proper learning.

Along with her other duties, librarian Mrs. Fran Medlin helps check out books to students. She shows Julie Dunn how to check out library books and equipment.

Mrs. Sue Dalzell substitutes for a government class. Not only does she watch over the class, but she also assists senior Todd McCally with an assignment.

Keeping with the German theme, the German Club's spring banquet was All Det Schnapps Und Snacks. Junior Mark Weaver and seniors Laura Hamra and Rob Flickinger enjoy a buffet dinner.

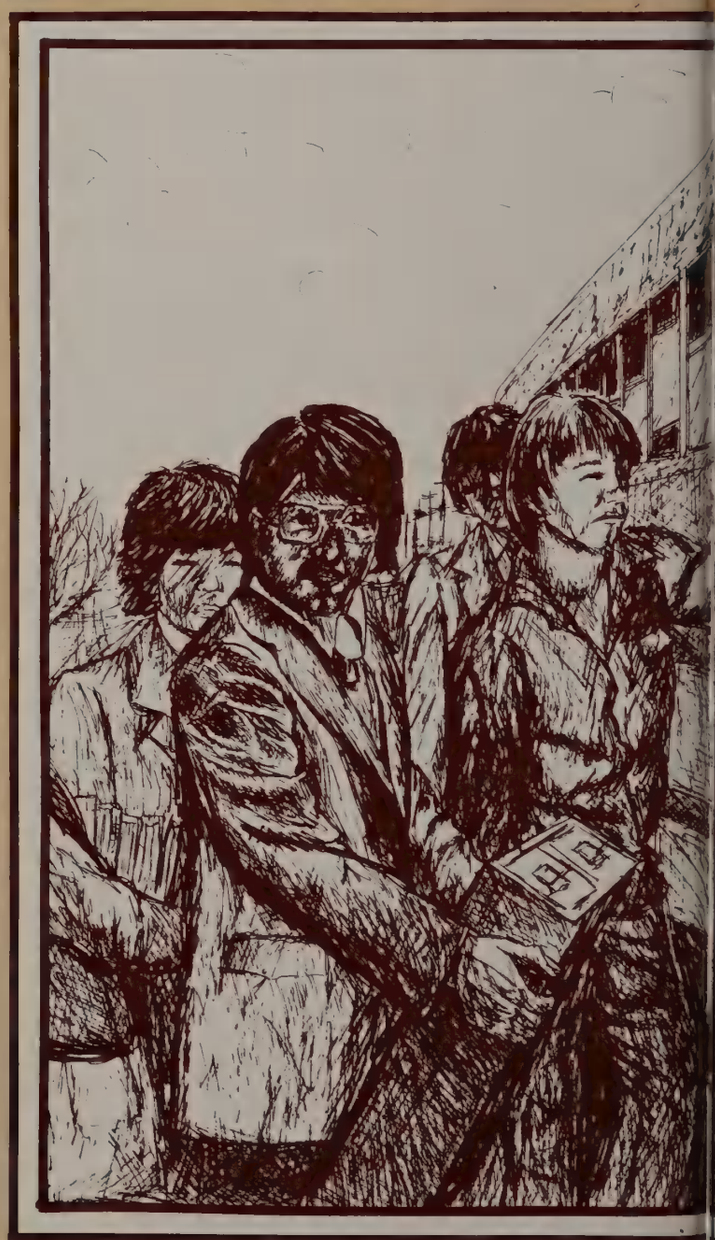
One word which seemed to sum up LH the best was "involvement." There were times when we realized that if it hadn't been for school, we would've had time to get all our extra-curricular activities done.

There was such a variety of clubs that there seemed to be something for everyone. Many of us found lots of organizations we were interested in. During the first part of the school year when we were joining all those clubs we didn't realize that we might be getting too involved. Nevertheless, as the year passed, we learned to make decisions on how to divide out time and set priorities.

The clubs were so diversified that it made it hard to narrow down our choices. Our clubs were involved in bettering our community, advancing in academic and vocational areas. and performing in many areas of the arts, only to name a few.

Whether we were learning to use calculators in the Math Club or cheering the football team as a member of the Spirit Team, involvement in clubs made us tops; and up at the top was a nice place to be.



Highlandettes displayed their outstanding spirit and showmanship which won them numerous awards. Some of their awards include the spirit-pom and the Show-Off award at SMU drill team camp.

The Ranch House in Wylie provided the setting for the annual GSL barn dance. LH ex Lynn Pepper and sponsor Mrs. Kitzmiller talk over old times during the 'Kicker Dance.'

Seniors Rachel Hartsell and Jeff Goldberg celebrate a country-western evening at the GSL barn dance. GSL provided a 7-piece country-western band and a DJ with rock music.

The LH choir and orchestra joined forces during the Christmas season. One of the concerts was a Christmas concert given during second period assembly. Here, Brad Kellar plays the bass.

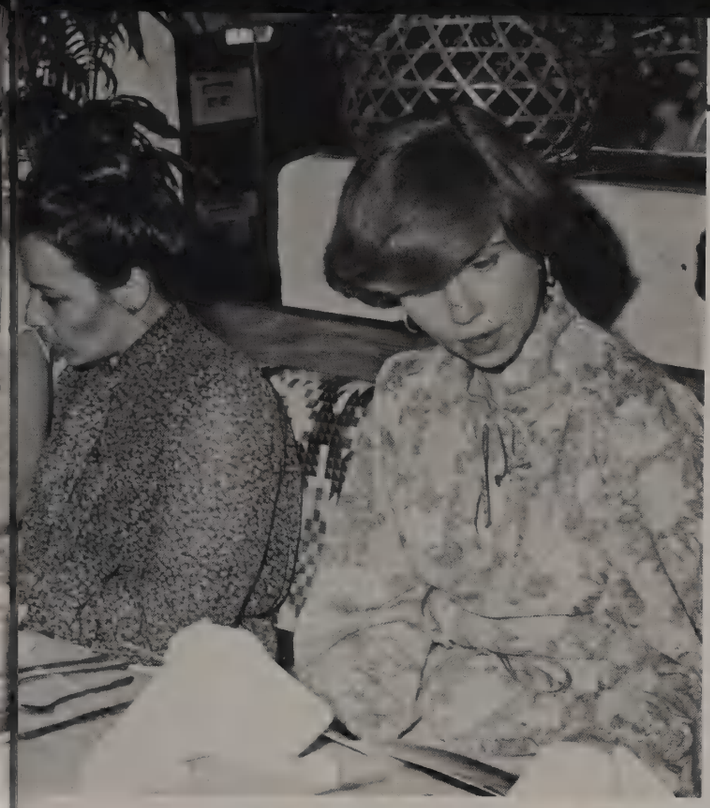
Stylishly dressed in his satin toga and cape, senior Latin Club member Cliff Luttrell relaxes and enjoys himself at the Roman Banquet.



Culture Differences Apparent In Foreign Language Clubs

The second largest club in the school, with Miss Fran Maples as sponsor, was the French Club. Officers were Clay Loney and Jody Bishir, co-presidents, Cynthia Zackey, vice-president, Susie Takamatsu, secretary-treasurer, and Liz Reaves and Cynthia Blum, historians.

A very successful bake sale was held by the French Club. Much of the profits earned were used to pay for their elegant end of the year banquet, held at the Fairmont Hotel.

Latin and English teacher Mrs. Gloria Hare sponsored the Latin Club, and officers were Mike Lanoux, president, Susan Hull, vice president, Carey Smart, historian, Lisa Wade, secretary, Mike Welch, treasurer, and Joan Hudel and Adele Campen, reporters.

Spanish teacher Mrs. Spurlock, student teacher from Spain, Mrs. Hotz, and Mrs. Omlor discuss the El Torito menu at the Spanish Club Banquet.

Senior Latin Club member Don Eisenstein orders food from one of the slaves at the club's annual Roman Banquet.

The Spanish Club Banquet was held at El Torito in Northpark. Seen here are several Spanish Club members reading their menus and deciding what to eat.

Spanish Club members ask the friendly El Torito waitress what she recommends from the menu. The Spanish club held their banquet at the restaurant.

Culture Differences Seen In Foreign Language Clubs

The Spanish Club, sponsored by Mrs. Montgomery, participated in many projects this year. The club had an egg sale at the beginning of the year to raise money for crippled children and needy Mexican families.

March 22-24 saw the club going to the Spanish Club Convention in San Antonio. Club officers were Kim Henson, president, Elaine Brown and John Tucker, vice-presidents, Mary Anne Farmer and Liz Lawson, historians, and Nancy Firra, treasurer.

The German Club made some outstanding contributions to the school also. Officers were Laura Hamra, president, Grady Quick and Ricky Hopkins, vice presidents, Linda Fernicola, secretary-treasurer, and Laura Nelson, historian. Club sponsor Mrs. Caroline Peadon says, "We had a record breaking bake sale, earning $200." The club also sponsored a candy sale, bringing their earings to $700.

At the Novemberfest, several students won prizes, including Brett Frantz, Dana Doan, Shelley Mooneyham and Laura Hamra. The club banquet was held at Der Schnapps and Snacks.

Participating in a French Folk Dance at the French Contest are Club members Monique Tirion, Vivian Harmon, and Jennifer Monroe.

Thoroughly enjoying themselves at the german Club Banquet at Der Schnapps and Snacks are several happy German Club members.

The second period Distributive Education class, dealing with Fashion Merchandising, listens to a summary from their teacher, Mrs. Maryette Griffin.

HECE teacher, Miss Beth Porterfield, aids Kassie Powell with Daily assignments in preparation for on-the-job activities.

Home Economics Cooperative Education student Kim King studies to better learn how to plan a budget and to also figure income taxes.

Vocational Programs Train Students For The Future

There were several areas of vocational programs offered at Lake Highlands. Each area was specially designed for certain occupations in different fields of work.

Distributive Education was designed to train those interested in employment in marketing, merchandising and management. The DE club, DECA, competed in area contests and state contests, with Debbie Pickett, Suzanne Green, Anna Clark and Laurie Jordan winning awards at the state contest in February. Laurie Jordan stated that she had become "fashion conscious, and had gained a better outlook on the fashion retail business." Laurie also intends to "persue the fashion career by studying to become a fashion coordinator and a part-time mode."

Health Occupations Students of America, HOSA, was a club made available for those interested in careers relating to the medical field. HOSA members competed in an area contest in February and a state contest in March. Through this club the students learned to work with the public, to strengthen their skills needed in the medical fields and responsibility and leadership. Members of HOSA also helped in activities outside the club by holding a blood drive and blood pressure screening. Sponsor Debra Powell said, "All of HOSA's activities are geared for the caring of others." Fund raising activities included the selling of key chains and giant coloring books.

For students interested in careers relating to child care, PELE was the answer.

Members of Distributive Education found that classtime work was important, as it aided them in developing a better working attitude. Students in DE worked in various fields of sales, including department stores.

Vocational Office Education students Mary Lou Findley, Jeri Carew, Cody Colquitt, Angela Maus and Cassie Wilburn take free time to balance a ledger, one of the vital operations learned in the VOE classroom.

Vocational Programs Train Students For The Future

Also, any student interested in employment pertaining to office work or any corresponding job could find satisfaction in the Office Educatin Association.

The Future Homemakers of America hosted an area-wide banquet which featured special guest Mary Williams, who spoke on communication. FHA members also attended an area wide meeting at North Texas State University. Fund raising activities included nacho and bake sales.

Members of Home Economics and Related Occupations received a taste of the joys and disasters of working with children. Students in this club were able to assist in teaching at elementary schools.

Voc½ational Opportunities Clubs of Texas was one place where students could learn about life skills, consumer education and human relations. Students attended class daily and then héld a part-time job. Also, VOCT proved rewarding for those students who were not planning to attend college. Money for this club was raised through the selling of M'n M's.

Vocational Industrial Clubs of America members learned essential elements in the working world such as getting along with others and responsibility. Students were expected to work approximately fifteen hours a week, but no more than 25 hours were allowed.

Marching Band Highlights Football Halftime Shows

The 1978-1979 Lake Highlands Marching Band, under the direction of Malcolm Helm, had a spectacular season. The band's half-time performances were highlighted by several solo performances by Kyle Martin and Glen Roberts. The songs selected for the many routines were the theme from How the West Was Won, "Manhattan Skyline," and a medley of "Oh Danny Boy." The band also played for Highlandette performances.

At the end of "Manhattan Skyline," for an added climax, senior Jimmy Cox performed a back flip from the director's platform. The choreography of the flag corps and the band's performances were so polished that they resembled a professional act.

Officers for the 78-79 marching band were Jimmy Cox, Charlie Stimson and Amy Phelps.

The marching band successfully concluded the season after many hours of before and after school practice sessions. The band's season was highlighted by a half-time performance at a Dallas Cowboy football game and the Parade of Champions competition at the State Fair of Texas. The band won a rating of "excellent" at the fair contest and was named outstanding band.

Also, this year, 43 band members were selected for the All-Region band. Nine of these students advanced to area tryouts and gained a chance to earn a seat in the All-State band. Among these students were Kyle Martin and Lisa Whitworth.

This year's half-time show was evaluated by junior Sandy Salmon as "the best she had ever seen." The general consensus of the school was that it was truly a spectacular show.

The 1979-80 marching band will be adding a new dimension, an all-girl rifle corps. This group will perform along with the marching band. The group was sponsored by Joanne Johnson. Tryouts were held in September, 1978. Those selected practiced every day during third period and Saturday mornings. The workout during third period was conducted by senior Robin Tabell. The group also attended a workshop during the summer conducted by Canadian Drum and Bugle Corps the Blue Water Bucanneers. Mrs. Johnson stated that, "They are doing great and learning fast, doing a super job and are highly motivated to do their best."

With this new dimension to the already superior halftime show, next year promises to be better than ever.

Art students, juniors Nancy Darcangelo and Kim Freeze work on the KZEW ZooLoo mural for the smoking area.

Arts Clubs Bring Culture To LH Students, Faculty

Art clubs offered opportunities for students to explore the arts. Encore was the Speech club, Red Masque was the drama club, and Creative Reflections was the art club.

After several years of low club membership and participaion, the LH speech club began anew as Encore. Mrs. Ann Kizer, head of the speech department was the sponsor.

Members of Encore participated in seven tournaments besides UIL district and regional competition.

Another art club was Red Masque. There were around 150 members in the club. The only membership requirement was that the student work in some position on one of the club's four shows for the year. This could be any position, ranging from house crew to leading actor.

Students interested in art joined Creative Reflections. Sponsored by Mrs. Boone, Creative Reflections was a service club as well as a special interest club.

Artists cooperated with the Student Council on the painting of the Wildcat mural on the band hall wall. Senior Bret Reel designed the Wildcat.

The major function of Red Masque was the production of four shows- "Dracula", "Godspell", and the club's entry in the UIL one-act play competition, "The Importance of Being Earnest."

Ted Wachendorfer, Kurt Streck, Jill Vibrock and Laura Hurley hold speech awards received at the Nacogdoches tournament.

Talented LH Students Bring Music, Culture To School

Among the many musical related organizations at Lake Highlands were the choir, orchestra and band. These organizations added a new dimension to the school during the 1978-79 school year.

The orchestra had a very successful year. Their year began with practice sessions several weeks before the school year began. The orchestra practiced fourth period every day of the school year. For additional practices, each string section came before school for sectional practices.

Conductor of the orchestra was Dr. Larry Gebhardt. Concertmaster was Rob Flickinger. Rob was Dr. Gebhardt's right-hand man, as he tuned the orchestra and helped with rehearsals. All the practice done by the orchestra students was very much in evidence at their combined Christmas concert with the Lake Highlands mixed choir.

The orchestra members also tried out for all-state orchestra. They not only participated as a whole unit, but often broke down into smaller groups for solo and ensemble contests.

The orchestra raised money for their trip to Corpus Christi by selling jewelry. In Corpus, the orchestra attended the Buccaneer Music Festival. In March, the orchestra won sweepstakes in the University Interscholastic League competition for the seventh year in a row.

Junior Elisa Echols stated, "I love music and I love to play the violin, and besides, we're the best," as her reason for being a member of the Lake Highlands orchestra. With these many accomplishments, the Lake Highlands orchestra was the best and had a great sense of pride in themselves.

The Choir season was filled with many performances and contests. The Choir season began with pracitice sessions during school fifth period. The Choir sold peppermints and held a newspaper drive. The money raised was used to pay for the many events throughout the school year. The Choir performed several performances. Two of these concerts were held in the Lake Highlands auditorium. One of the performances was given during a morning assembly for students and the othewr was at night for everyone who wanted to come. At these performances the Choir and Orchestra combined together for a joint Christmas concert. The Choir also sang Christmas carols at Medical City Dallas.

In January the Choir attended All-Region Choir at Richardson High school. This contest lasted all day. In February, the Choir helped with a musical and attended the UIL (University Interscholastic League) Solo and Emsemble contest held at Pearce high school. The Choir also attended another Solo and Ensemble contest in March at Richland Junior college. In May, the Choir took a trip to Galvestion and gave a combined concert with the Orchestra.

In December, the Pop Group caroled at Westminister Church, Olla Podrida and the Magic Pan. They also performed concerts at area junior highs.

The band at LH was divided into four groups, the stage band, Symphonic Band I and II, and the Concert Band.

The stage band, under the direction of Lisa Whitworth, performed during the Varsity Review, Spring Show and played a major role in the Senior Show.

Symphonic Band I gave several concerts throughout the year. These were taped and the tapes sent to Chicago. The result was that the band was invited to attend the Southwest Music Festival, with LH being the only band invited back for the third time.

Along with receiving this honor, the Lake Highlands Symphonic I band won sweepstakes in UIL competition and Best of Class at the Six Flags music competition. At the Buccaneer Music Festival held in Corpus Christi, Symphonic I received straight I's, a perfect score.

One of the major French composers, Ida Gotkovsky, wrote a special piece for the Lake Highlands band, which they performed at Caruth auditorium at SMU.

The Symphonic II and Concert bands also performed several concerts throughout the school year. Symphonic Band II attended the UIL contest where they received two I's and one II for their performance.

Junior Bobby McCoy, member of the Lake Highlands Symphonic one, plays his saxophone during one of the sectional practices held before school. Members of the Symphonic Band also practiced everyday of the school year during first period.

The Lake Highlands Orchestra and Mixed Choir perform one of their many selections during their combined Christmas concert. All tickets to the morning assemble were sold by Orchestra and Choir members for one dollar.

Orchestra member Carey Smart concentrates while she plays her cello during the combined Christmas concert with the Choir. The Orchestra also performed a combined spring concert with the Lake Highlands Mixed Choir. These concerts were performed in the school's auditorium.

Concert master Rob Flickenger plays his violin with great talent and ability during one of the Orchestra's many concerts. Rob helped Dr. Gebhardt by tuning up the Orchestra and helping them to practice some of their selections which they played in their concert.

The outline for the 1979 Wildcat began to be formed when staff members attended workshops during the summer.

With the beginning of school came the beginning of responsibilities. Layouts had to be drawn and deadlines had to be met. But with the completion of each section came the satisfaction of a job well done. Dana Dawkins expressed this same view when she said that the completion left a feeling of "pride and accomplishment."

The 23 staff members were backed by two qualified co-editors. Both Lance Blankenship and Liz Reaves were on the 1978 staff. Lance wanted to put together a "good, quality book" and Liz desired to learn more about journalism and publication. Ginny MacAskill, associate editor in charge of photography, said that the staff consisted of "creative people who were dedicated and responsible."

The yearbook this year sold for $13 when sales began, but as time went by, the price increased to $20.

By selling advertisements, Fang staff members barely made enough money to cover their expenses. Different advertisements were sold for each issue, for the Fang was a totally self-sufficient newspaper. Copies sold for 10 cents each and approximately 1,000 copies were sold each time.

Much work went into preparing each issue of the Fang. And, much of the work was done after school hours. Rachel Hartsell, Fine Arts Editor, said that the preparation of each issue consisted of designing and drawing layouts, writing copy, and writing headlines. After each issue was published, Rachel criticized herself by asking, "Was this as perfect as it could be?" Melora Zaner was the business manager for the Fang. Melora sent out bills, recorded advertisements, and cropped pictures.

Mr. Jim Davidson, adviser of the Fang and Wildcat, was very supportive of staff members. Mr. Davidson said he enjoyed working with students and liked for young people to become interested in the field of journalism.

Co-editor of the Fang, Markene Moore, said that the most rewarding part of the job was to find that people would look forward to the next issue and often would compliment the work that was being done.

"Because math was my favorite subject and because I wanted to be with a group of people who shared the same interest," was the reason Robert Golden gave when asked why he joined the Math Club.

This year, the Math Club entered competitions and joined the AFS for a combined progressive dinner. The Math Club also entered a group into intramural sports and won awards in the bowling division.

Another of the Curricular organizations was PRO. The Physics Research Organization was sponsored by Mr. Bryant Wolf.

This year the PRO members decided to make new an old tradition. That was one of painting the Zeke House instead of destroying it. Meetings were conducted during the second period of AP physics class, for all students who were involved in PRO.

Much work was involved in preparing the senior section of the 1979 Wildcat yearbook. Dana Dawkins receives help from Cynthia Blum in alphabetizing pictures and drawing layouts.

LH Service Clubs Find Helping Hand is Gratifying

The Girls' Service League had a very successful year with membership totaling more than 500 sophomores, juniors and seniors. The purpose of GSL was to do for others.

In 1978-79 items were collected for both orphans and for the elderly. GSL also provided its members with spirit projects such as decorating football player's rooms and lockers and making spirit lunches.

GSL also sponsored two dances, the Barn Dance, which was held at the Ranch House in Wylie and Presentations, held at the Registry Hotel. The GSL was sponsored by Mrs. Pat Kitzmiller. President was Suzanne Wilson.

The Key Club allowed girls to enter into its membership for the first time in history. Approximately 20 girls paid their dues and participated in Key Club activities. One special activity sponsored by the Key Club was a marathon especially geered to raise money for the retarded.

Bell Boys for 1978-79 were Howard Pace, Don Williams, Grady Quick and George Hefner. Mary Anne Farmer was excited about the new allowance made for girls and said, "It expanded the club and brought it more up to date."

very active year beginning with a dazzling Homecoming Dance. Then in February came the elaborate Favorites Ball at the Fairmont. Also sponsored by Student Council was the very successful Thanksgiving can drive, the energy conserving "Bike Day" and several teacher appreciation days.

The American Field Service held their olympics with the Superseniors winning the overall competition. The olympics are an annual affair for Lake Highlands students, and it also serves as AFS's biggest money raising project. The AFS also provides the school directories to students.

This past year, Lake Highlands was host to Kjersti Flatmark, a foreign exchange student from Norway. Kjersti resided with Sandra Mickelson.

Tradition was Changed, But Their Enthusiasm Continued

Cheering, performing pom-pom routines and many other activities combined together to make up the 1978-1979 spirit team's season. The spirit team attended and performed at all football games at home and also those that were away. These girls also attended several of the varsity basketball games.

The officers for the 1978-1979 spirit team were Michelle Barton, Tracey King, Lori Lee, Kayla Comstock, Debbie Romano, Karen Wilson and Joanie Jordan. Mrs. Betsy Vandament served as their faculty adviser.

The spirit team members raised money by selling Super Tuff all-purpose household cleaner. This money went for jackets and for a hayride and weiner roast. The weiner roast was held instead of the traditional formal Christmas dance.

"I joined the spirit team to help prepare me for drill team," was the answer sophomore Jill Eslava gave for joining the spirit team. This was one of the major reasons most girls joined the spirit team. These highly motivated girls practiced in the afternoon from 3:45-5:00 on Tuesdays. All of these dedicated spirit team members worked together to have a fun filled and very satisfying year.

Highlandettes Capture Crowd With Amazing Performances

Through many hours of long, before and after school practices, the Lake Highlands Highlandettes worked together and had a superb year.

Over the summer the drill team and its officers attended several workshops, among which was an officer's camp at North Texas State University. Representing the Highlandettes were captain Stacia Goad, First Lieutenant Cindy Hurst, Second Lieutenants Nancy Devaney, Susan Golding and Ruth Milton.

The entire drill team attended a workshop in August at Southern Methodist University. At SMU the entire line left with awards in dancing and marching. The "Most Outstanding Girl" award was achieved by Captain Stacia Goad and runner-up was First Lieutenant Cindy Hurst.

The Highlandettes performed routines which were learned at camp and those that were choreographed by the officers. These routines were performed during the halftimes of varsity football and basketball games. Among the routines performed were the umbrella, gun, mop and lighted baton routines. The senior Highlandettes performed a routine to Disco Duck at a varsity basketball game.

Senior Highlandettes shocked and amused spectators when they performed a duck routine at the Pearce basketball game.

Highlandettes Capture Crowd With Amazing Performances

The girls tried out weekly to determine who would perform in the halftime shows.

Special events that happened during the year for the Highlandettes were performing in the halftime show of a Dallas Cowboy football game, the annual Christmas Dance, the Christmas Bazaar and the Spring social.

Another major event which occured during the year was the Spring Show, which carried the theme "The Times of Our Lives." In the Spring Show, each officer's rank performed a routine and then two ranks combined together to perform another routine. By dancing in the aisles, the senior Highlandettes performed a routine to show their future dedication to many colleges.

For Spring Show, the Highlandettes practiced after school from 4 to 10:30, sometimes until 11 p.m. during the two weeks preceding the performance. Many ranks also practiced before school as early as 7 a.m. The money raised from the tickets sold went toward the purchase of props, backdrops, costumes and for the bus trip to San Antonio.

For the first time, the Highlandettes were honored with an invitation to march in the Fiesta Flambeau on April 28. The Highlandettes performed their lighted baton routine during the parade. They also marched in the Christmas Parade for the City of Richardson along with the four other Richardson schools' bands and drill teams.

Clubs Cater to Student's Unique Hobbies

Not many students list film making as a hobby. And how many students consider mastering war games a hobby? Well, the answer to that is simple. Three of the newest clubs offered an outlet for unique hobbies, namely the War Games Club, the Famous Composers Remembrance Society and Fantastic Cinema Productions.

In order to become a school sanctioned club, interested students must present a logical charter and purpose, as well as locating a faculty adviser.

The Famous Composers Remembrance Society is sponsored by Dr. Gebhardt. With 15 active members, this club's major goal was to deepen an appreciation in music, and to familiarize students with famous composers. The sociaty was not limited to Lake Highlands. Branches of it extended throughout the world. Several activities were planned during the year. Birthday parties for Mozart, Schubert and Korsakov were planned as well as pizza parties after orchestra concerts. A final awards banquet closed the year with new and old members reminiscing about the year.

Awards given at the banquet included the athletic award for the longest pass which was given to Julie Cobb, the memorial award presented to Dr. Gebhardt, outstanding secretary Lisa Gayle, and an award for parliamentary work for Jean Merriell.

Officers for the club were Eric Best, president, Brad Kellar, vice president and public relations, Jean Merriell, parliamentarian, Lisa Gale, secretary, and Julie Cobb, treasurer.

Introduced to Lake Highlands in 1978, the War Games Club gained popularity. News of club meetings travelled by mouth and all were welcome. Members helped to raise money by staging a chess tournament. The proceeds of the tourney went to purchasing more games and equipment.

Some of the most difficult games played were Dungeons and Dragons, Third Reich, and Risk. Often long in length, the meetings would last until 6 in the morning. The War Games Club journeyed to Austin where they attended a convention on War Games and learned new strategies.

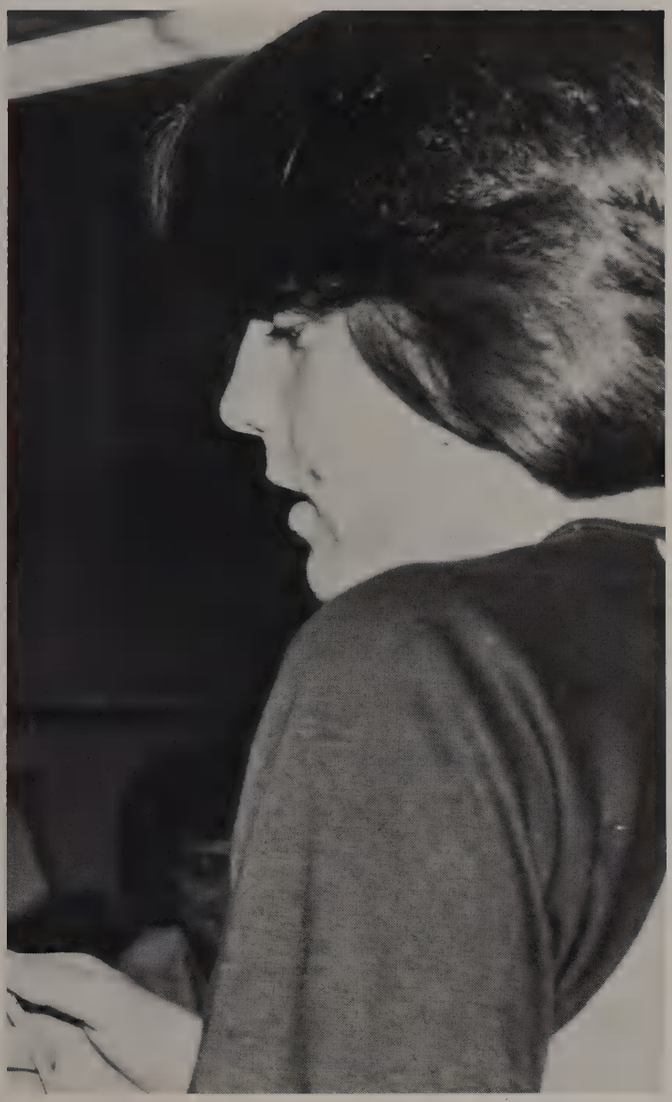
Finally, Fantastic Cinema Productions rolled in. Cinema Club officers included John Davis, president, and Kim Kearby, secretary.

The primary purpose was to familiarize students with the film industry; and, it provided them with an opportunity to. learn about film making.

The club was chartered during the second quarter of 1979 and it began making big plans. With the election of new officers, the club managed to raise money with nacho sales and began the time consuming task of film making.

Future money raising ideas include renting movies for the school in 1980, so that students may view good films inexpensively.

The secretary for FCP, Kim Kearby, is responsible for the usual correspondance and books, as well as her primary job of working with the scripts.



FCP president John Patterson discusses various techniques of film production. John provides some of the equipment for FCP.

Senior Suzi Riddle concentrates during an after school discussion for plans for fund raising activities for FCP.

Members of the newly formed Famous Composers Remembrance Society for the 78-79 year were: FRONT ROW: Eric Best, Laurie Weinreich, Brad Kellar. BACK ROW: Julie Cobb, Jean Merriell, Sally Bolinger, Lisa Gayle , and Karen Lattimore. Dr. Gebhardt was the club sponsor.

Senior Pubber Grady Quick is astonished to see that the PUB finally arrived. Difficulties locating a printer caused a delay.

The PUB. You first learned of its existence when an older brother or sister brought it home and sat reading for hours with a smirk on their face and a few sporadic laughs. Then, upon your arrival to high school, you were curious.

In the usual soph fervor you might have even filled out an application and placed it hopefully in Mrs. Kitz's box; waiting for the day when your name would be called over the intercom. You found out too late that only seniors filled out the applications and the realization that your name wouldn't be called slowly sank in.

As your junior year rolled around, you found yourself one step ahead: from past experience you knew not to apply for the PUB. However, that didn't keep you from silent day dreams of how your PUB would look. You knew that yours would be different. None of that silly baby picture stuff would slide by you, HUH?

Finally, after several long years of abstinence you found yourself a senior, and it was similar to being turned loose on Fantasy Island. As applications were completed and staff selections made, the thrill of PUB left you with something to look forward to. Even if you weren't selected to PUB staff, your two cents worth stood a good chance of getting in after filling out idea sheets.

And, after the normal pressures of selling ads, meeting deadlines and distribution were relieved, the senior class as well as the school, parents and faculty were left with the Pub.

Pub co-editor Peggy Hughes can finally relax. Working daily after school, before school, on the weekends and spring vacation were some of the sacrifices made by diligent Pubbers. The Pubbers were rewarded with an evening at Bobby McGee's.

English teachers Pat Kitzmiller and Donna Matlock co-sponsored the PUB. Both show looks of relief at the final PUB celebration.

Seniors Eve Johnson, Cheryl Finfrock, Markene Moore, Laura Hamra, Traci Cannizzaro, Ginny MacAskill and Mary Anne Farmer toast a job well done.

Members of the Lake Highlands Symphonic Band dressed in formal attire are visiting socially, while waiting patiently to be served at their banquet which was held at Lakewood Country Club on May 15.

The Banquet Season At LH

Banquets at Lake Highlands are a time to dress up and spend money. Many clubs and organizations at Lake Highlands have their annual Banquet season around the later spring months during the end of April and all through the month of May. Banquets reflect a club's style and hospitality.

Often times club banquets are held at their various members' houses. Such as Encore, the speech club whose banquet took place at Liz Smith's house on Saturday, May 19. There they enjoyed a roast beef dinner and they announced their new officers for the 1979-80 school year.

The Future Homemakers of America sponsored a banquet on Friday, March 9 in the living room of the Home Economics Department. The FHA members invited other FHA chapters to the banquet and among them were the Lake Highlands Jr. High and the Forest Meadows Jr. High school chapters. The guest speaker for that night was Mrs. Gene Williams, a communications major. FHA president Shelia Perry quoted, "We had an excellent banquet and our guest speaker was very informative and beneficial."

The lake Highlands French Club had their banquet at the Fairmont Hotel in the Pavillion room. At the banquet, the new officers were elected and announced, and many worthy awards were given.

Members of the LH German club sit at their banquet table, visiting and preparing to eat.

LH senior athletes Carter Moore, Tom Hendrickson, Raleigh Freeman, Phillip Walton and Stanley Redwine wait to receive honors at the All-Sports Banquet while others look on. The banquet featured awards for all athletic programs at Lake Highlands.

Lake Highlands French Club members sit and enjoy various presentations to club members at the French Club Banquet which took place at the Fairmont Hotel's Pavillion Room. The banquet was attended by approximately 100 French Club members and their dates.

Math club members enjoy various snack foods while sitting casually and visiting. This club party took place at the home of junior member Ramine Ettefagh. The party was held jointly with the American Field Service Club from Lake Highlands.

Der Schnapps Und Snacks gave a unique outdoor setting for the end of the year banquet sponsored by the German Club.

Very hungry Key Club members choose the best dishes for their meal at their club banquet which honored their fathers.

Pub staff members Eve Johnson and Mary Ann Farmer make a toast to the long awaited end of school at Bobby McGee's.

The Banquet Season At LH

Sports awards trophies were neatly set on display at the All Sports Banquet. These trophies were previously awarded to very to very deserving participants active in LH sports.

Creative Reflections sponsor, Mrs. Boone quoted, "We just get together to have a good time and enjoy each others company." Their club members earn money to have a yearly banquet. This year it was at the Royal Tokyo restaurant.

Formal dress and technical awards were only a part of the exquisite Red Masque banquet which took place on May 20 at Chandler's Landing at Lake Ray Hubbard.

Members of the Lake Highlands Spanish club got together for an enjoyable evening of 'Mexican Style' food at El Toritos' restaurant. The Club banquet took place on May 15.

Lake Highlands band members enjoy a meal at their annual banquet at the Lakewood Country Club. The band also presented awards for the year at the banquet.

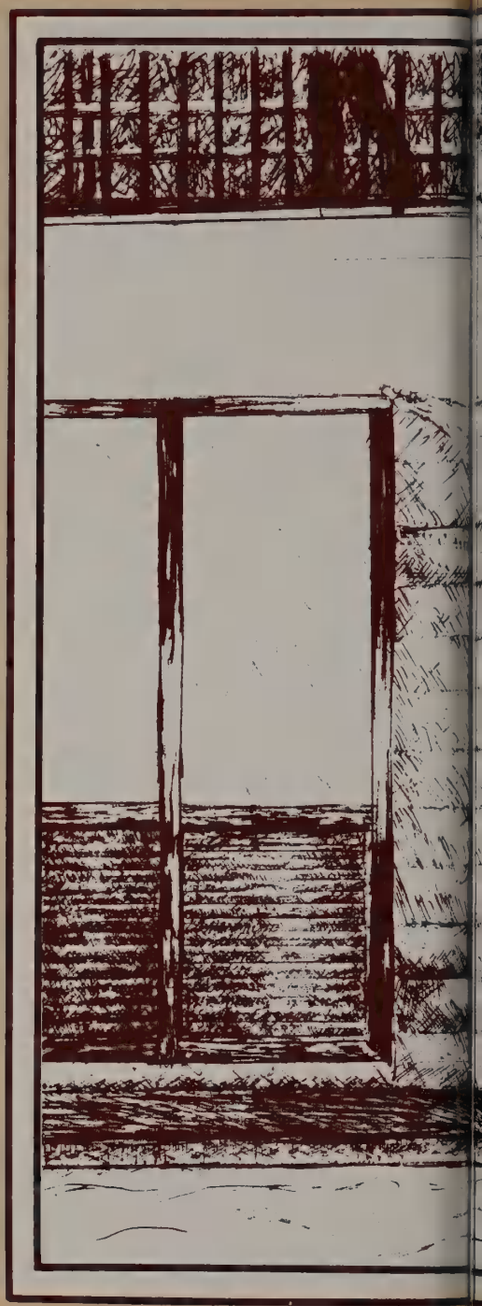
The Future Teachers of America had an old fashioned supper at club member Lisa Young's house on Saturday May 19. At the supper the members socialized and installed the new officers for the next school year.

The Lake Highlands All-Sports Banquet took place Monday night, April 23 in the Lake Highlands Cafeteria. There was a great deal of honor and recognition given to very deserving LH atheletes. Later, Senior Chris Snow presented his parents with a gift of appreciation. Also present at the banquet were many Coaches from various colleges. Among those in attendence were head football coach of Southern Methodist University, Mr. Ron Meyers.

Sophomore JV volleyball member Julie Harper spikes the ball during the LH-Pearce volleyball game while Junior Lorene Nelson moves into the play.

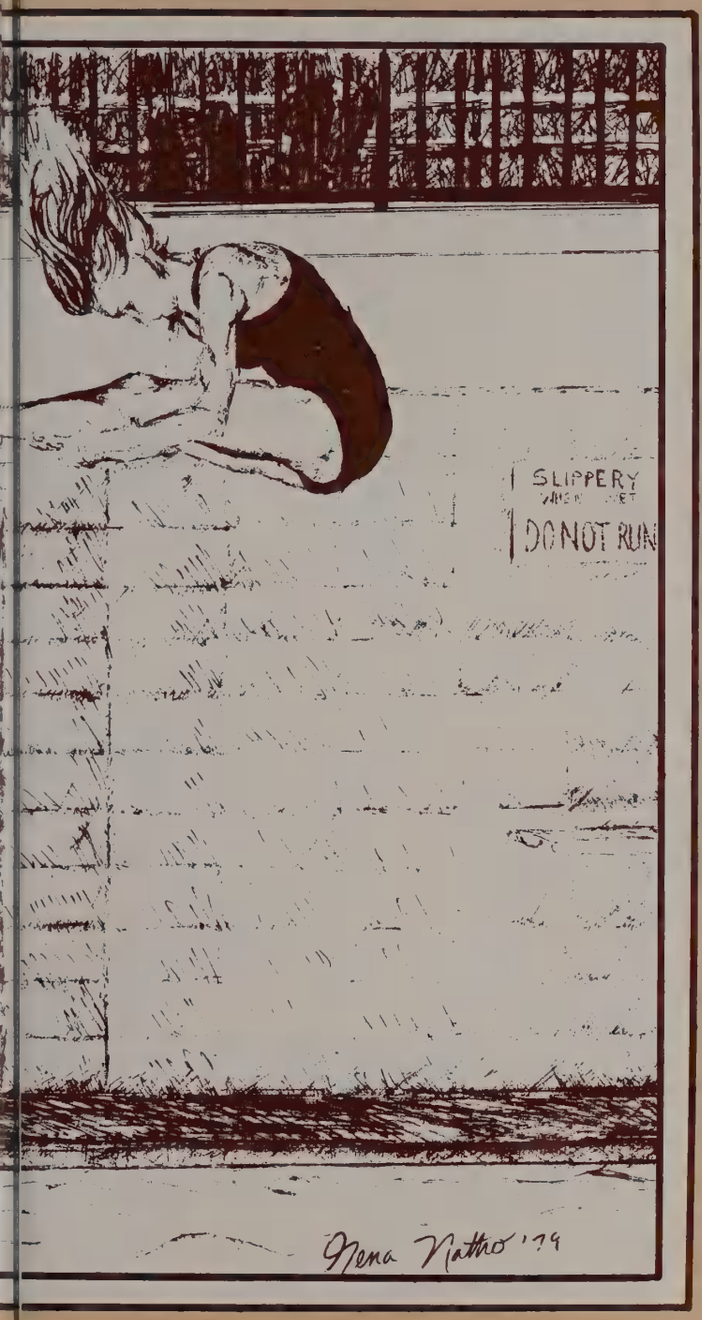
Outstanding dives were a specialty for LH divers. Senior Nancy Ford performs a forward flip with a half twist at one of the many meets swimmers participated in.

The Lake Highlands wrestling team travelled to Plano for the 13-AAAA District meet where they finished with a final score of 8-5. Junior Tim Rigsby battles for a take-down against his Richardson opponent.



The Wildcat swim team finally beat plano at the Plano meet. Backstrocker, senior Don McMahan, gets dressed after the meet. Later, the boys swim team broke three school records at the Coaches' Association meet.

Varsity cheerleaders juniors Liz Smith and Cindy Boner lead the Wildcat basketball fans in a cheer. Roundballers enjoyed an outstanding season, finishing second in the district.



French club president senior Clay Loney, band member, sophomore Mike Conlin, and french club member, senior Todd Robinson battle out a controversial overtime Intramural football game which the band won 14-12.

Up at the top in

was a nice place to be

Sports deserved a lot of support. We were near the top in almost every sport. Unfortunately, there were so many different sports that they couldn't all get the support they deserved.

We won a lot; We lost some; but more often than not, we won.

We won as a team and we won as individuals. All our team victories were the result of individual efforts and when all the individuals pulled together, we won.

Those of us who didn't participate in sports supported those who did. When we weren't competing against other schools, we competed against ourselves in intramurals.

Some of us participated in athletic events outside of school. Among other things, we jogged, ice skated, boxed and skate boarded. And our people won at those events too.

Sometimes a record didn't do us justice, like when we lost the district championship race in football in a crushing defeat to Plano after a sound and unexpected victory over Highland Park. And our district basketball record of 9-2 couldn't say "second in district by seven points."

Although we lost a few here and there, we were proud because we were up at the top, and up at the top was a nice place to be.

Varsity players Steve Young, Gary Grant, Mike Martin and Eric Vance celebrate their victory by proclaiming, "We're number one!"

Senior quarterback and team captain Matt Dunigan hands the ball off to Thomas Crane as the Wildcats near the Denison goal line. The LH offense continued the drive for a score, and the defensive dogs turned in a sterling performance as the Cats defeated the outmanned Denison team 28-7. The win on Denison's home field kept the Cats hopes alive for at least a first place tie in District 13-AAAA.

Junior running back Michael Brown takes a pitchout from quarterback Matt Dunigan and heads of on one of the Cats well-known power sweeps.

You couldn't help but feel it in the air, the second Friday night of the school year when Joe Bob Johnson's boys (make that men) took the field and demolished the Spruce Apaches with every possible scoring threat combined with a defensive effort that allowed less than 100 yards. And, when a crowd of faithful followers when a crowd of faithful followers followed the Cats on the four-hour road trip to Nacogdoches, feeling confident after the 56-0 win over Spruce. Soon, however, their enthusiasm turned to disappointment as the physically and mentally fatigued Wildcats were corraled by the Dragons 24-7.

Brian Flook holds for Mark Balda, the place kicker of one of the best specialty teams in LH history, according to Coach Joe Bob Johnson.

But it was back to Wildcat Stadium where the Cats showed more character than ever before as they "came of age" in Coach Johnson's words, during the second half to take the come-from-behind victory over the Pearce Mustangs.

Another road trip provided for another thrilling come-from-behind win as the Cats swept past the Sherman Bearcats 35-25. The happy Wildcat followers burst over the walls and flooded onto the field, surrounding their weary team with cheers of contratulations. Here was the birth of Wildcat Mania. The entire student body was united.

On Friday night, Highland Park came to town, confident after their win over Plano, and were surprised to find the Wildcats were for real as the packed crowd at Wildcat Stadium cheered their home team to a 25-15 upset victory in the best game of the year, with a combination of offensive and defensive supremacy. Again the crowd flooded onto the field in a show of sportsmanship never before seen.

Only one more time were they required to do the impossible--beat Plano.

But Plano's powerhouse knew they had only to knock off the Cats to jam the race into a three-way tie. One of Plano's best efforts of the season met one of the Cats poorest as the high from Wildcat Mania diminished. But playoff hopes still remained as the Cats romped over the Richardson Eagles in a 34-24 Homecoming win in what may have been the best offensive effort of the season. A tie for first was still a possibility as another road victory, this time 28-7 over Denison, stretched their district record to 5-1.

A win over Greenville would set up a first place tie, but that win never came. On their home field, the Cats were man-handled by the Lions 25-7.

With their pride on the line, the Cats "traveled" to Berkner and finished the season with a 7-3 record as they whipped the Rams 34-28.

Now it will be up to the new recruits to work with the same dedication and will that the graduates had. Fourteen players will be back, but the process will still be a building one. It will take a lot of hard work, but it will be done. You can be sure of that. You can be sure that Lake Highlands won't be without a fighting and winning team next fall.

Junior Wendell Norris and senior Barry Hunt converge on the Sherman running back in a come from behind victory.

JV, B-Team End Season With Winning Marks

Carrying out the tradition at Lake Highlands, both the JV and B-team football teams had good seasons and succeeded in their main goal--to prepare the underclass athletes to play varsity football.

The JV squad, under the direction of Coach Bill Robbins, finished the season at 5-5, a satisfying year by Coach Robbins standards. Several games were lost early when key players were sidelined with injuries, including Mark Thomas, the starting fullback lost for the entire season, and Jimmy Stewart, the quarterback, out for four games.

Through the first six games the Cats were a struggling 2-4, but due to the efforts of such players as walk-on quarterback Scott Henderson from California, and Mike Reed, walk-on running back from Missouri, and an excellent defense led by, among others, Kerry Bradley, brought their record to a respectable 4-4.

In response to questions about the mystifying fact that LH B-teamers seem to do so well while the JVers do not do so well, Coach Robbins explained that the major talent from the junior class plays varsity football, while the rest, along with the walk-ons and the move-ins, play for the JV. The B-team is made up of all sophomores, who, for the most part, have played together before. Coach Robbins did seem optimistic that this years' players would be able to fill the vacancies left in the varsity team, and build it to another contender.

As for the B-team, Coach Leonard Cary noted that they finished an excellent season, ending with an 8-2 record. While the team was composed of few standouts, they played well together, and, especially in the first part of the season, played with almost no mistakes. When the season started, the group was well prepared, and complete concentration gave them the confidence to beat teams like Sherman, Highland Park and Plano.

By mid-season a bit of complacency had set in and against a string of four weak teams, the Cats played poorly. In the final three games, they lost two, to Denison and Greenville, two of the weaker teams in the district.

Coach Carey noted that there were a few exceptionally talented players on the squad, but gave the credit simply to a super defense and an outstanding offensive line.

Overall, the underclass football teams had successful seasons and are looking forward to good ones next fall. The JV and B-team fotball players continue to suppliment the varsity team and in the progress compile winning records.

Teamwork Pushes Varsity To 17th in State Polls

The 1978-79 varsity basketball team was made up of six returning seniors and a good group of past B-teamers. Three of the returning seniors were in the 1977-78 starting line. They were Kelly Clayton, Raleigh Freeman and Ronnie Marr. The other seniors on the team were Wayne Mendenhall, Jim Vorlop and Bob Thompson.

The winning tradition for the 78-79 Wildcats started with the first game against Spruce High School with a 73-62 win and continued through twelve non-district games until they lost to Woodrow Wilson 45-44.

District games started with an 86-72 victory over Highland Park and continued through Sherman, Richardson, Denison and Pearce. Then, on Jan. 26, Plano broke the Wildcats winning streak by beating them 53-49.

The Cats didn't let it get them down, however, as they went on to defeat Berkner and Greenville, scoring a record high points in the latter, defeating the Lions 110-91.

The district tournament also started with a win for the Cats, an 83-56 victory over Denison. Then, on Feb. 9 the most emotional game of the year was played against Highland Park in the Scots gym. The Wildcats came out victorious by one point, 57-56, as Jim Vorlop scored the winning basket with only six seconds left on the clock. The finals of the district tournament, however, was another matter, as the Cats fell to a three-point loss to Plano.

Coach Jerry Wells led the Wildcats through their season and stated, "They were the best team Lake Highlands has had. They were a very close team and played well together."

Many honors and broken records went along with the 78-79 season. During the Greenville game, Raleigh Freeman and Bob Thompson tied the school field goal record with thirteen each. The team assist record was broken in the same game as the Cats compiled 31. During the Highland Park game, Bob Thompson tied the record for individual assists with fifteen. The individual field goal percent record was broken by Jim Vorlop in the game against Sam Houston when he shot nine for nine for 100 percent.

The 1978-79 B-team was made up of all sophomores except Phillip O'Neal and Todd Kirkpatrick. They were juniors on the varsity team, but played on the B-team during the district games to gain some experience.

Coach Gary Hetherington felt they helped the team in overall strength and ball handling. They also helped fill in the large space in scoring that Mike Micarelli left when he broke his ankle.

The B-team Wildcats were a close team and played well together. They all worked together on their strategy for the year, which was to control the defense, get the rebounds and run the fast break.

The team ended their year with 14 wins and nine losses. During district play they lost only three games, to Richardson, Plano and Berkner. Plano defeated them 49-49 in the playoffs to end their season.

Wildcat Roundballers Pull Together For Winning Year

The girl's varsity basketball team for the 78-79 season consisted of experienced players. This year's squad numbered eight seniors and four juniors. Coach Ed Zackery emphasized team play and felt that despite their small size, the tallest player was 5' 7", they had a good year.

The high scoring members of the team were Shellie Collier, Sandy Lynn, Mary Tevis, and Shawn Asay. Behind Coach Zackery's strategy of pressing the other team and forcing them to make mistakes, along with trying to make a high percentage of their shots, the team ended the year with a 22-11 record. A key game may have been the loss to Plano in the second round of play.

A big victory for the Cats was their defeat of Sherman 54-52 in overtime. They also beat Richardson twice.

The team's spirit and their ability to hustle lead the Cats to the finals in three tournaments, placing second in one. For the past two years in a row the team has received a trophy.

Varsity player Shellie Collier (25) collides with an opponent as they jump for the ball in a game with the Pearce Mustangs. The Cats beat the Mustangs two out of three times this season.

6-12 Season Gives Valuable Experience to Volleyballers

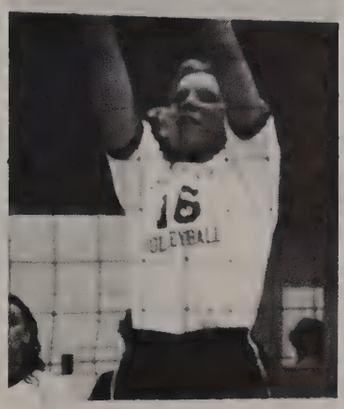
Betsy Thompson goes high to return a spike from her opponent across the net.

Most of us associate a varsity team with a squad of experienced, well-rounded players, and for the most part, with seniors.

For the Lake Highlands girls volleyball team, a lack of interest in the fast growing sport left Coach Jerry Stewart with a building program to conduct as he looked over the crowd of new girls that he had to make a team out of.

Oh, it's not that they weren't good--it was a room full of talent. But with a two-week delay in the start of workouts due to the unorganization of Coach Stewart's first year, and the lack of presence of a single senior.

Sophomore Diedre Young bends forward to hit the ball up and set up a play in the win over Pearce.



The carry over of defensive strategy from play in junior high, which consisted mainly of bumping the ball back and forth over the net, to an offensive game was the primary concern of the new coach. The team quickly adapted to the series of sets and spikes that made up their game plan and were able to capture second place in the Nimitz tournament, the high point of the season.

Hard work offered more improvement and the girls finished the season with a 6-12 record.

By next year Coach Stewart hopes to at least reverse that record and feels it can be done through the use of the foundation the girls built this year. Helping to build that foundation were Shelly Davis, this year's Sophomore of the year in the district, Julie Harper, runner-up for Sophomore of the year, junior Colleen Nichole, who coach Stewart says is the best spiker in the league, Betsy Thompson, the team's most improved player, Dedre Young, whose serve is termed excellent, and Heidi Jackson and Jenifer Tucker, who are being molded into next year's starters.

Through constant work and practice it can be done, and by next year and the year after, you can believe Lake Highlands is going to have a strong district contender.

THE RUNNERS:

Men's cross country team works hard to nab ninth in regional after capturing second in district ahead of Highland Park

Throughout the fall the stage was set for the Thursday afternoon when the district 13-AAAA cross country teams would meet to decide its champion. Week after week the men's team seemed to sharpen and improve. The workouts every afternoon were exhausting, but led by Tom Hendrickson, Carter Moore and Rob Herral, the dedicated members surged on, hoping to get a grab of the first place glory.

The women's cross country team also sported that same spirit and were just as determined, being led by Dana Doan and Patty McNeal.

The district meet approached and the men rose to the occasion. Tom Hendrickson finished sixth with Moore and Herral finishing eleventh and twelfth respectively. The team also collected enough points to sneak past Highland Park and capture second place in the district and move on to the regional meet in Arlington. The women collected fourth place, but were not able to advance.

The team prepared for the Saturday morning regional meet, and when the morning arrived, the team seemed ready.

Out of a field of 320 runners, Hendrickson finished twenty-sixth and Carter Moore came in forty-seventh. Overall, the team placed ninth in a field of thirty teams.

Although they ended the season on a unsuccessful note, hoping to go to state, the year was "excellent" according to Coach Norman Alsobrook. "I've never had a bunch that worked with me better," he said.

Junior Kevin Baum excellerates in an attempt to break away in the district cross country meet where he finished twelfth out of the field.

Junior Mike Fritchie strides near where the LH team is grouped together to warm up for the two-mile race.

Seniors Carter Moore and Tom Hendrickson wait for the chance to break from the pack, soon after the start at the district meet at Norbuck.

Senior letterman Rob Harrell puts forth an effort to pass several runners in the district meet. Harrell finished a strong twelfth.

Coach Norman Alsobrook talks over the race strategy with Charisse Stokely, Donna Baker and Patty Chaplin as they prepare to run in the district race.

Tom Hendrickson, one of the teams top ½runners, shows what he has on the back stretch of the district meet at Norbuck.

Junior Scott Taylor gives the back stretch an excellent effort as he passes runners on the last half-mile of the two-mile race.

At the gun of the district meet, LH runners sprint to get a place at the head of the pack. The team finished second in the meet.

THE RUNNERS: Dedication and leadership aid track team in capturing third place title, as seven qualify for regional meet at Mesquite

In keeping with traditional efforts and performances, the track team at Lake Highlands was a powerful combination of speed and stamina.

Out of twelve teams at Waxahachie, LH pulled out a first place victory that boosted them to a third place finish at the district meet at Mesquite. Coach Robert Iden was particularly pleased, as he saw seven members of his squad qualify for the regional meet. Of those seven, fine showings were made by Stanly Redwine and Chris Smith, as they fourth in the 440 and fifth in the 330 hurdles.

Other outstanding tracksters included Tom Hendrickson, who finished third in the mile at the district meet, Tim Tolson, who threw the discus, and Raleigh Freeman, the team's best high jumper.

Tolson and Freeman both finished first in their event at Mesquite, labeling them as the best in the district.

The mile relay team also had a good season, as Mike Johnson, Scotty Parks, Phillip Walton and Stanly Redwine were ranked second in the district and sixth in the region.

On the girls side of the track, a group of hard working, unselfish young ladies turned in a performance backed by a desire that could not be matched.

Raleigh Freeman displayus his style in the high jump which was good enough to give him first place in District 13-AAAA.

Although they finished seventh in the district, they obviously gave an outstanding effort. Coach Norman Alsobrook was pleased with their effort and claimed they could have in one of the Dallas districts.

Shellie Collier was one of the stronger runners, as she was named the most valuable member of the team. Cynthia Zackey was also an excellent addition to the team, setting a new school record in the mile.

Other fine runners included Melissa Sorenson, Chauton Sheppard, Pam Lyons, Allison Bullock, Kelly Davies and Patti McNeill, who all displayed leadership and willingness to work.

Mike Johnson runs the mile relay at the Lake Highlands Invitational Track Meet. Coach Bob Iden looks for Johnson to be a strong runner in 1980.

Chris Smith strains to reach the finish line as he takes home another victory for the Cats. Smith finished sixth in the region in the 330-yard hurdles.

Tim Tolson gives a good effort as he throws the discus. Tolson finished first in his event at Mesquite, meaning he was first in District 13-AAAA.

David Brown displays the stamina that characterized the entire track team. Because in track the total score is what counts, every member is important.

Danny Howell, the team's best pole vaulter, shows the type of vault necessary to put the Cats in contention.

New coach pulls team together

Wildcat Pride kept the 978-79 tennis team from ccepting "Love" from any f their opponents. The Cats completed their year vith a new coach, Mrs. Ann Derden, who replaced Karen Hughes in mid-season. Mrs. Derden came rom Lake Highlands Junior High.

The Dallas High School nvitational sent Lake Highlands home with first place in the B division, and hey took third place in the Plano High School Invitational tournament.

Amy Machin took fourth place in girls singles at district, which moved the teams record to seven wins and two losses and placed the Wildcats in the fourth place slot in district.

Captains Todd McCally and Beth Murphy provided strong leadership and kept the spirit high for the team throughout the year. A special effort was put forth by juniors Zack Stowe and Beth Murphy who were both recognized as the most valuable players in the Awards Assembly.

Young Wrestlers Show Promise for Future

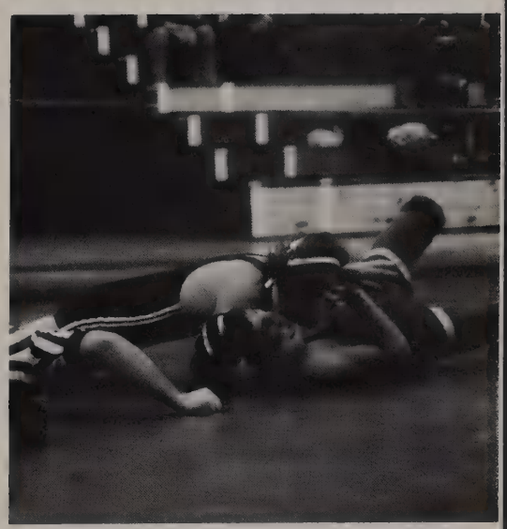
Although 1978-79 senior pride sent most LH teams to the top, the wrestling team found most of their power in several outstanding sophomores and juniors.

Sophomores Jack Delaney, wrestling at 105 pounds, and Jeff Singleton, at 98 pounds, as well as juniors Mike Simpson, weighing in at 126 pounds, and Keith Lee at 138 pounds, competed in the State Meet held in Amarillo.

Junior Louis Esquivel also qualified for the state meet but was unable to wrestle because of a back injury he received in the District Tournament. Delaney was the only LH wrestler who placed at the state tournament, coming home with a sixth place finish in his weight division.

Esquivel was one of the outstanding wrestlers in the state, and his injury was a big disappointment to the team and to Coach David Abercrombie.

Throughout the year, the Lake Highlands wrestlers placed third and fourth in most of the tournaments in which they competed. The highlight of the year came when the team wrestled their way to a first place finish in the Skyline Invitational Tournament at Skyline High School in Dallas.



Drew Franklin, a sophomore on the LH wrestling team, strains to pin his opponents shoulders to the mat at the Lake Highlands Tournament.

As the steam rose from the Skyline pool at 6:00 a.m. the Aqua jocks began the never ending process of conditioning themselves for meets which began in November. Working out at least twice a day, both on land and in the water, the team prepared for the '78-'79 season. Obviously their efforts paided off as the girls placed 1st in six of nine meets, and the guys placed in the top three five of nine. At the district meet the girls placed 2nd and the boys 3rd. In regionals the girls finished 3rd and the boys 4th.

Although they failed to qualify for state, individual efforts by Mike Laska and Don McMahan aided the team in record breaking. The boys free relay team of Mike, Don, Todd Hill and Greg Grant also set a record along with girl's medley relay of Joan Hudel, Lindy Lauderdale, Tracy Currie, and Julie Potter. Diver Colleen Nichol set a record with both her one and three meter dives.

...As Rodeo Stands Alone

Individual was the word that best described the Rodeo team at lake Highlands. Unique among all other individual sports, each person's accomplishments were his or her's alone. The members did not compete as a team; moreover, many times they had to compete against each other.

The team consisted of approximately fourty members including freshmen from both junior highs. Twenty of the members competed reularly. Rodeos were held every weekend and each participant was required to pay ten dollars to compete. The competition included such events as barrel racing, bull riding, pole bending, calf roping and bareback. At every rodeo the top six of the places in each event were awarded points. At the end of the year, the top fifteen places in each event went to finals at the State Fair Coliseum on May 24 and 25. This year three members qualified. They were Katie Bowdry, entering 7th in barrel, David hardy, 13th in bareback, and Patty Booth, 5th in girl's bull riding.

The team also worked to raise money. Receiving no funding from the school, the members had to raise the $3000 necessary to sponsor a rodeo. This year LH members sold candy and candles to help raise this large sum. They sponsored a rodeo on March 15 and 16 in the Joe Edwards Arena in Mesquite.

The Rodeo team contended with fifty different high schools around the state. Schools from as far as the Brazos River and Grand Saline attended competition whcih was usually held in Mesquite. When asked why she was involved with rodeo, president Patty Booth said "Rodeo is a one on one event, you and your event against everybody."

LH Soccer Team Puts Plano In Its Place

The Wildcat varsity knew what hard work was. They seemed to have plenty of it in 1979, working daily after school. Practice lasted two and a half hours, not to mention homework, jobs and other soccer clubs they participated in.

The varsity players were a dedicated group, striving to perfect their skills in America's fastest growing sport.

Besides their commitment to Wildcat Soccer, most players held positions on local teams, such as the Longhorns, Solar Soccer and SVAA. It was not unusual to find players refereeing games or assistant coaching on weekends in order to gain experience.

Varsity games took place at 8 p.m. with the Wildcats on the road nine games out of fifteen. In Zone One district playoffs, LH finished with a hard-earned 4-4 record, beating LH rival Highland Park twice, as well as Denton and Plano. Led by coach Tommy Townsend, the Wildcats turned in some impressive victories and hard work.

The varsity soccer players were not the only ones working hard and perfecting skills with a soccer ball. The JV were out there on the field working hard also.

An alumnus from Lake Highlands, Joe Taherzadeh, served as Coach Townsend's assistant. He worked with the JV so Coach Townsend could concentrate on the varsity team. Both Taherzadeh and Townsend stressed unity and playing as a team.

This unity helped carry the JV through their impressive season with nine wins, one loss and three ties. The 1978-79 JV soccer team was a well rounded team and gained a lot of experience for next year.

JV player Tommy Tucker concentrates on controlling the ball and moving it down the field to the goal.

Girls Soccer Teams Take First and Second

Coach Mark Adams led the 1978-79 JV and varsity girls soccer teams through a winning season. The spirit ran high as the varsity beat Highland Park 5-2 and the JV 1-0. Although the climax for the varsity came through an exciting game against Pearce when the Wildcats beat the Mustangs 5-1, the victory was thrilling because Pearce had beat the tar out of the Wildcats for the last two years.

This was LH's third year to include soccer in its athletic program, and the girls really made a place for themsevles. The varsity ended the season in second place with a 9-5 record.

Richardson, taking first, proved to be their toughest competition. The JV really did not have district play, but of all the teams, they ended up in first place. Through the season they won four games, lost one--to R.L. Turner--and tied three.

Playing home games in the LH Stadium added a lot of confidence, determination and spirit throughout the season. Along with getting to play in the stadium, the varsity acquired new uniforms and handed the old ones down to the JV.

Baseballers Finish Second in District 13-AAAA Competition

Typical for the 1978-79 sports scene, one of the best baseball teams in LH history was forced to settle for a second place district finish behind plano High School. Coach Jay Higgins ranked the team in the top three ball clubs ever to play at Lake Highlands.

With tremendous senior leadership, the Wildcats were able to make use of their abilities in pitching, hitting and base running, which combined to make the Cats an exciting team to watch.

The team finished the season with a 19-8 record, a fine year by any standards. It was the third best fielding team ever at Lake Highlands, with only 55 errors. This displayed their defensive abilities, which went right along with the club's excellent season from an offensive point of view.

Records fell like flies, as the Wildcats hit 45 doubles, which tied the old record, stole 45 bases and received 124 bases on balls. The total number of strikeouts for the season reached only 124, less than ever for the team.

They fell one percentage point behind the 1977 ball team, who had the best season batting average at .289. With these statistics, it was not hard to believe that the team was not shut out the entire year, the first baseball team ever to accomplish this feat in Lake Highlands history.

Other records that fell included Scott Henderson's 14 stolen bases in district play, Kirk McJunkin's 25 RBI's, including 21 in district play, and McJunkin's two strikeouts, three less than made by any other player in district history.

Even with all this proof that the varsity baseball team was invincible, there remained one obstacle that the Cats could not overcome. The Plano Wildcats managed to keep the sensational Cats from reaching first place ecstacy, and caused an LH trip to the bi-district playoffs to remain a fantasy.

Lake Highlands defeated every team in 13-AAAA except Plano, and although both games against the infamous maroon foe were quite exciting, well-played games, they both left good ol' red and white one run behind. And that one run was enough to put LH one game out of first place and one game away from the playoffs.

Coach Higgins and the entire team were able to remain quite optimistic throughout the season, as they continued to mount win after win. The lowest mark of the year occurred when the Wildcats hit a losing skid less than halfway into the season, dropping three in a row.

However, they recovered quickly from the poor breaks they suffered, and won four of the next five games.

The pitching remained fairly consistant during the course of the year, as Mike Holland went 6-0 with a 2.39 earned run average. Holland was 78's most valuable sophomore and continued to display the talent he held.

Paul Maturi was a pleasant surprise, as he went 6-2 with a sparkling 1.88 ERA, good enough to qualify him for the 1979 Sophomore of the year.

Other strong hurlers on the staff included Howard Pace and Brian Flook. The pitchers finished the season with a fine ERA of 2.24, allowing only 92 runs in 194 innings, shutting out the opponents five times while collecting 177 strikeouts.

On the receiving end of such blazing pitches, Kirk McJunkin led the way with a .348 average, as Scott Henderson helped with the offense, batting .337 and stealing 24 bases, as the two were a major factor in the attack that was unprecedented in LH history.

Following McJunkin and Henderson was shortstop Matt Dunigan who hit .320 and first baseman Mark Campbell who finished the year with a .312 average.

At the end of the season, the Wildcats elected their traditional four honorary members. Mark Campbell was elected Most Valuable Player for holding the fort at first base, committing only two errors the whole year. He drove in seven runs as he connected for 24 hits.

Mike Brattlof was elected Most Improved, as he batted .275 and drove in 13 runs. Paul Maturi received the Most Valuable Sophomore award and David Hemphill was voted Mr. Hustle for his continuous unselfish efforts.

Even though the Cats had so much offensive power, Coach Higgins blamed the majority of the losses on the failure to get the key hit. He noted the well-roundedness the team had, and the fact that the squad was very receptive to the leadership that many seniors displayed.

But just as these seniors came, they also left, as graduation left vacancies at first base, second base, shortstop and catcher, as well as scattered positions in the outfield. Coach Higgins must look toward a fine group of returners to fill the gap as Henderson, Holland and Flook will be back.

Also, several B-Team members will be expected to fill in, as Paul Maturi, Andy Falls and Daman Tanner will become permanent varsity players. Tanner, who caught, and first baseman David Benchot, led the B-Team to an adequate 7-8 record.

The team was hampered with pitching troubles as they started very slowly, having to win their last six games to even out the record.

Utility man Bill Johnson also made a strong contribution, batting .343. With these players and the returning varsity starters, Coach Higgins hopes to have a successful year in 1980, as he uses similar strategy.

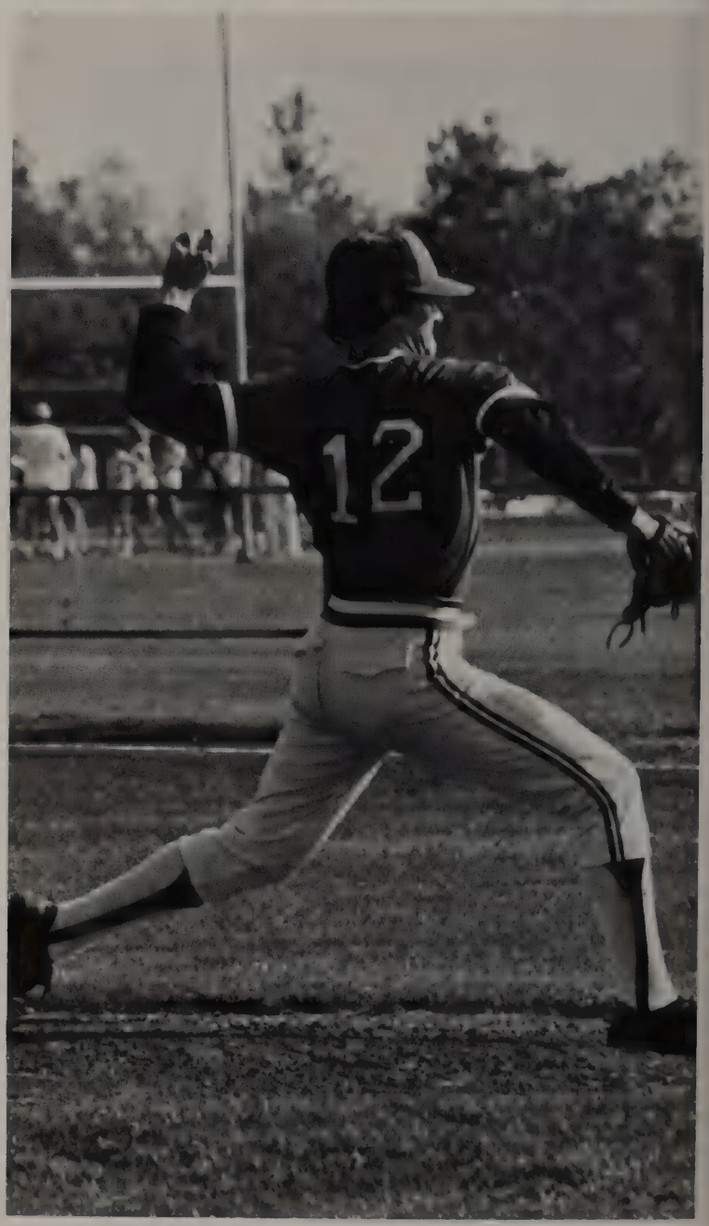
Scott Henderson will be expected to fill a major crevice in the infield, as he plugs the hole at shortstop. He will also be expected to display leadership for the rebuilt team, as well as Holland and Flook.

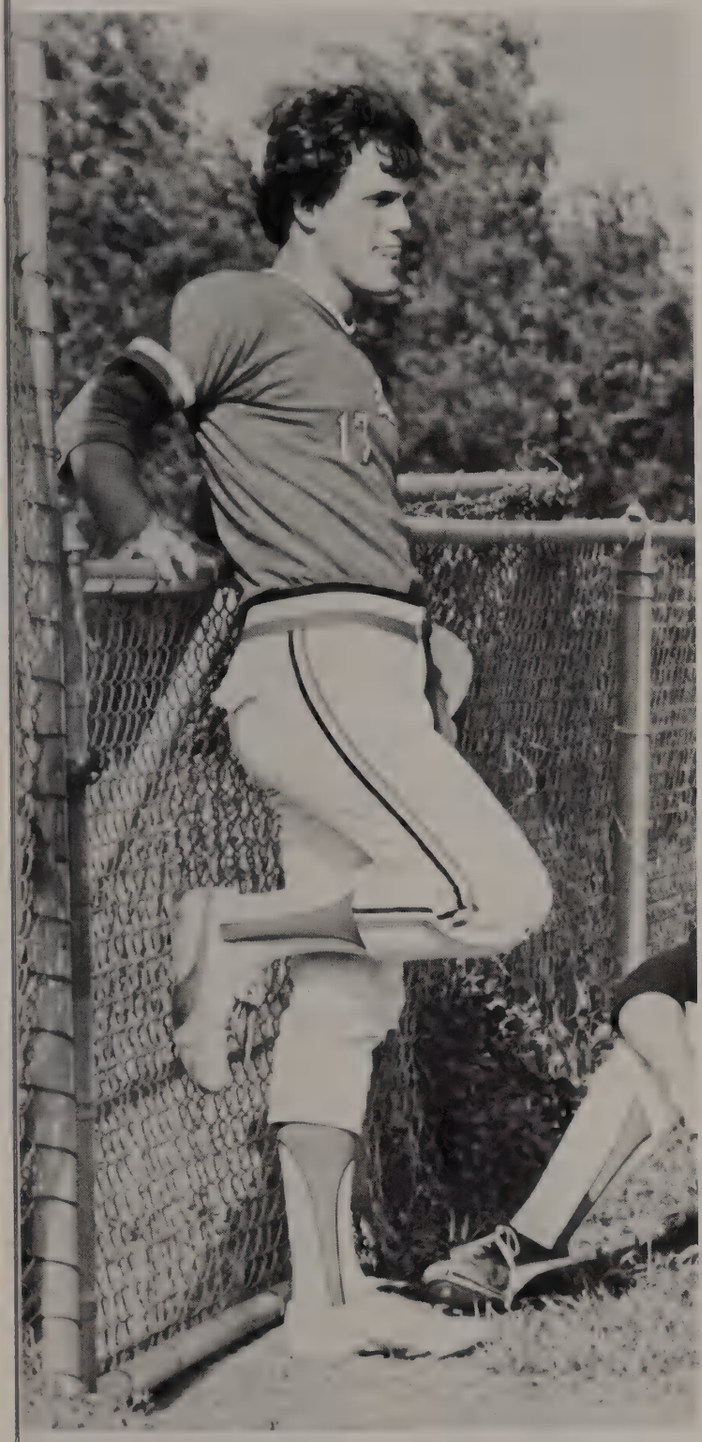
Although thoughts for a rebuilding program began early in Coach Higgins' mind, he could not help but reflect favorably on the 1979 ball club. They displayed a magnificent amount of courage and talent and showed the district that the winning ways of Lake Highlands High School will continue to prevail.

Senior Allen Grusendorf swings at a pitch and makes contact with the ball. Grusendorf made a considerable contribution at second base after moving from shortstop.

Southpaw Howard Pace fires the ball homeward, as he mounts a winning record for both the Wildcats and himself.

Junior Mike Holland takes an easy stride as a well-hit ball gives the Wildcat pitcher a free trip around the bases in another LH victory.





Senior Mike Brattlof and other members of the team talk things over before a game. Brattlof was voted most improved during his baseball career.

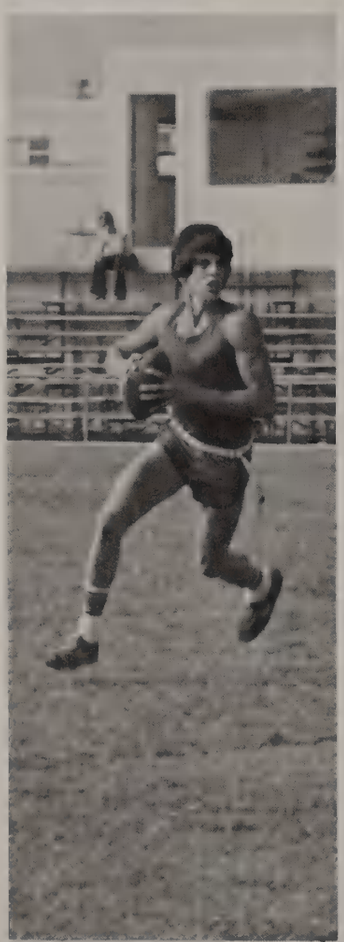
Mark Campbell, the 1979 Wildcat Most Valuable Player, holds a runner on at first base. Campbell committed only two errors the entire season.

David Hemphill looks on as he displays the unselfish attitudes that earned him honors as Mr. Hustle, voted him by his teammates.

Matt Dunigan leads off first base. Dunigan's quickness enabled him to get a good jump on opposing pitchers, a key factor in stealing bases.

Organizations Compete for Intramural Crown In Five Events

Robert Golden, a senior member of the Math Club, displays his left-handed style as the Radicals narrowly escaped the Senior Class in the bowling finals.



Senior Todd Robinson rolls out to complete a pass in a touchdown-ending drive, but the French Club couldn't pull out the game.

Clay Loney, senior quarterback for the French Club, sidesteps to avoid the oncomming rush of band member Jim Loftis, who is avoiding the block of Jody Bishir.

Changing from after-school seasons lasting about a month, intramurals began holding their events on Saturdays. Using a tournament style, the entire "seasons" were played on a single day, beginning in the morning and pitting the final teams by afternoon.

Approximately 300 Lake Highlands students participated in the program, headed, planned, organized and directed by English teacher Ms. Donna Guidry.

The nucleus of the year-long competition centered around the five sports used in the program--football, bowling, basketball, volleyball and softball, with the traditional ping-pong tournament canceled due to damaged tables.

The organization that places in a sport collects points for their team and whoever has the highest point total is awarded the grand championship trophy.

The senior class got off to an early start as the Pronouns dominated the football competition with an outstanding team performance. They defeated the ever-competitive FCA in the final game.

The Math Club quickly struck back as the bowling phase came around. Robert Golden, Ramine Ettefagh, Gary Towle and Maggie Fuge cashed in the highest team score to capture the first place trophy, but the seniors kept the lead in total points as Kyle Felts, Mark Campbell, Mark Smith and Greg Dulcy came up with a second place finish.

This was the first year that a team of girls entered the program, as well as a single girl on the Math Club team. The all female team comprised of Darla Erwin, Molly Fuge, senior, was the only girl to compete on a winning team in the first half of the intramural season as the Math Club won the bowling tournament.

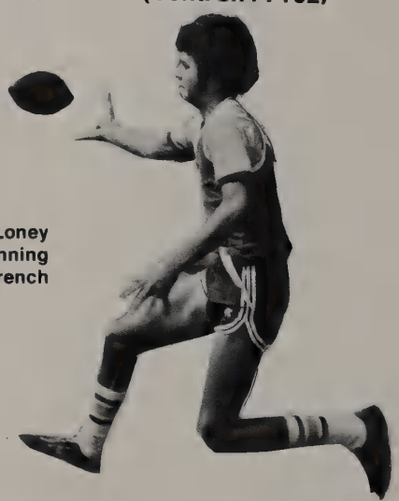
Pat Harrell, a senior receiver for the band team, looks back to watch his team's quarterback turn upfield with the ball to escape heavy pressure.



Senior French Clubber Clay Loney rolls out and pitches to his running back as the band routed the French Club despite a fine effort.

Kyle Felts shows his bowling skills as the Senior Class Pronouns finished a strong second in the bowling competition to retain their lead in total points.

Senior Walter Ralph looks back to see that his run has been stopped, as a member of the FCA "tackled" him, as closely observed by referee Eric Holmes.

Kevin Ormsby, junior, fires downfield for a fellow band member as his backfield is invaded by a host of French Clubbers.

Todd Robinson, senior, prepares to receive a pitchout as the French Club attempted a flea flicker in their loss to the band.

But these girls, along with all the other participants found the real reason Lake Highlands started an intramural program. It was to allow students to have a good time while experiencing real competition.

The program has allowed hundreds of students to actually participate in sports action.

Volleyball turned out to be one of the more interesting sports, as the Senior Onomotopias, captained by Kyle Felts, pulled out into the lead, after Walter Ralph's team, also sponsored by the senior class, swept the basketball tournament to threaten for first place contention. Ralph's team felt they still had a shot at the title even though they fell short in the volleyball phase, as softball was scheduled to be the final event.

However, the Onomotopias, or Pronouns, depending upon who you listened to, had luck on their side, as rain canceled the softball tournament. This left the Onomotopias with the highest total of points with no events left, and Mrs. Clark declared them the intramural champions. The team received a trophy in their name, which was placed in the trophy case, as well as individual trophies for each event they won.

Mrs. Clark felt as though the program was a complete success and looks for even more people to participate in 1979-80. She felt as though the enthusiasm gained by the basketball tournament, which was the most popular sport, will continue.

Sixteen rosters were given out for the basketball tournament instead of the usual eight, and she felt as though the program would continue to expand. This would allow the program to reach even more people and let more people actually be a part of the sports scene at LH.

Ralph Troup, a senior, jumps to spike the ball as his teammates outreached hand awaits to back him up.

After a powerful hit to the volleyball, senior Kirk Williams shows tremendous poise on the court.

Recreation Activities Satisfy Students Through Personal Sports

As well as through the intramural program, hundreds of Lake Highlands students found several ways to be active sports participants other than on school teams. Many preferred teams where they could be in the spotlight rather than on the bench.

Because of the tremendous amount of talent that Lake Highlands had, many truly talented people were screened out by the enormous amounts of hopeful athletes. Many did not even try out before the traditionally menacing coaches.

Instead, they retreated to church leagues or athletic organizations such as the YMCA or the SVAA. Through these groups, students were able to feel the thrill of catching a touchdown pass or turning a double play.

Then too, many found their satisfaction by participation in sports they could not find at school. Countless students escaped to the mountains to ski the slopes. Lakes and pools were swamped on those hot days of late spring. There were even those among the LH population that dared to take up activities that would seem quite bizarre to most.

Hang gliding and parachuting are two such bizzare sports. Many retreated miles from the city limits to back pack or mountain clumb. A few dared to compete in their machines in moto-cross or stock racing.

However, most were content to remain in the area, finding action on their own. Skyline Recreation Center became a shrine for the energetic set that was looking for a quick game of "hoop" on any given day.

Bowling became a popular form of recreation, as leagues popped up everywhere. Jogging remained a popular way to exercise, for those who dared to face the track or the streets.

Whether the motivation was to impress that girl or to show that guy, the majority of the student body was getting up off its duff and doing something about those who said we were doing nothing. The rewards were seen in the feelings of satisfaction and accomplishment. There was more to it than waking up the next day with sore muscles. Students at Lake Highlands began to appreciate the talents that they had, and with just the right amount of push, they used them.

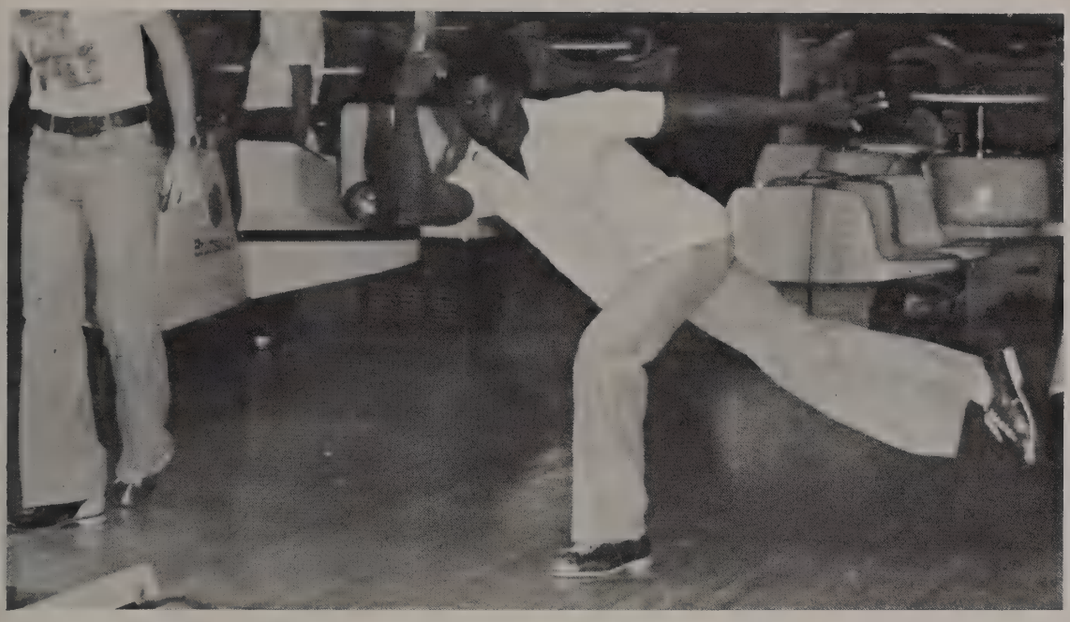
The Student Council sponsored "Bike Day" was an excellent opportunity for hundreds of LH students to display the recreational instincts they have.



Gerald Skinner displays his bowling skills. Skinner was probably the school's most avid bowler, getting perfect 300 scores several times.

David Benedetto jobs for the mentally retarded in a Key Club sponsored project. Jogging and runners became highly popular for all types of students.

Teri Wilson, Dede White and Cynthia Blum enjoy water activities. Very few students miss the chance to hit the pools and lakes during the hot summers.

Action on the Sidelines

The cheerleaders did much to promote school spirit at the Homecoming pep rally where they performed a cowboy skit.

Many hours were devoted to making and decorating varsity football players' lockers. Before the Plano-LHHS game, the decorated lockers added color and spirit to A Hall.

Varsity Cheerleading; not a one-season job

For the varsity cheerleaders, cheerleading was a year-round activity. Beginning July 1, they practiced every day for up to three and a half hours, preparing for the SMU Cheerleading Camp. At the camp, they received three out of four major awards; the NCA Award of Excellence, the Superstar squad award, and Mary Ann Rice was awarded outstanding cheerleader.

Some changes were evident this year. The number of cheerleaders was increased from the traditional four girls and four guys to ten girls. There were mixed reactions to the change. Leslie Adwan and Mary Ann Rice said they liked cheering with the guys, but wouldn't trade this year's squad for anything. When sponsor Ms. Susan Ferguson was asked how she felt about an all girl squad, she replied, "I found an all girl squad much easier to work with."

B-Team Cheerleading; "Just One, Big Happy Family"

Last year, Kirk Kelly added a new twist to the B-team Cheerleading squad. It was the first year LH has ever had a male B-team cheerleader. All the girls found it easy to work with Kirk and liked the extra "pizzazz" that he added. Laney Adams summed up everyone's feelings when she said, "We are just one big happy family."

The squad grew closer through the many practices over the summar and during sixth period.

A new addition to the Bellboys this year was Kimbo the bear. He was present at most of the football games and all the basketball games, promoting school spirit.

Lake Highlands Artists Contribute to School Spirit

The 1978-79 Run-Thru Crew was made up of a group of LH students that wanted to help contribute to the school spirit by using their talent in art. They met on Thursday evenings before football games on Fridays at Eve Johnston's house.

They gathered in Eve's garage about 4 o'clock and with Markene Moore head of the lettering and Eve Johnston organizing everything, they usually finished about 7 o'clock.

Due to problems getting paper, Mr. Fountain gave paper to the Run-Thru Crew as a present. But, the paint and brushes were supplied by the members, along with a lot of time and effort.

Flagbearers Promote Spirit Without the Traditional Destruction

There were many changes in the 1978-79 Flagbearers. The teachers chose only two Flagbearers, instead of three as they had in the past. Also, Mark Emard and Nick Naumovich worked hard at igniting spirit among the students without the traditional destruction involved.

There was more unity felt between all the spirit leaders down on the field (cheerleaders, Bellboys and Flagbearers). The Flagbearers joined in on cheers and added a lot to the spirit. Even when the team lost they would all work and try to keep the spirit up.

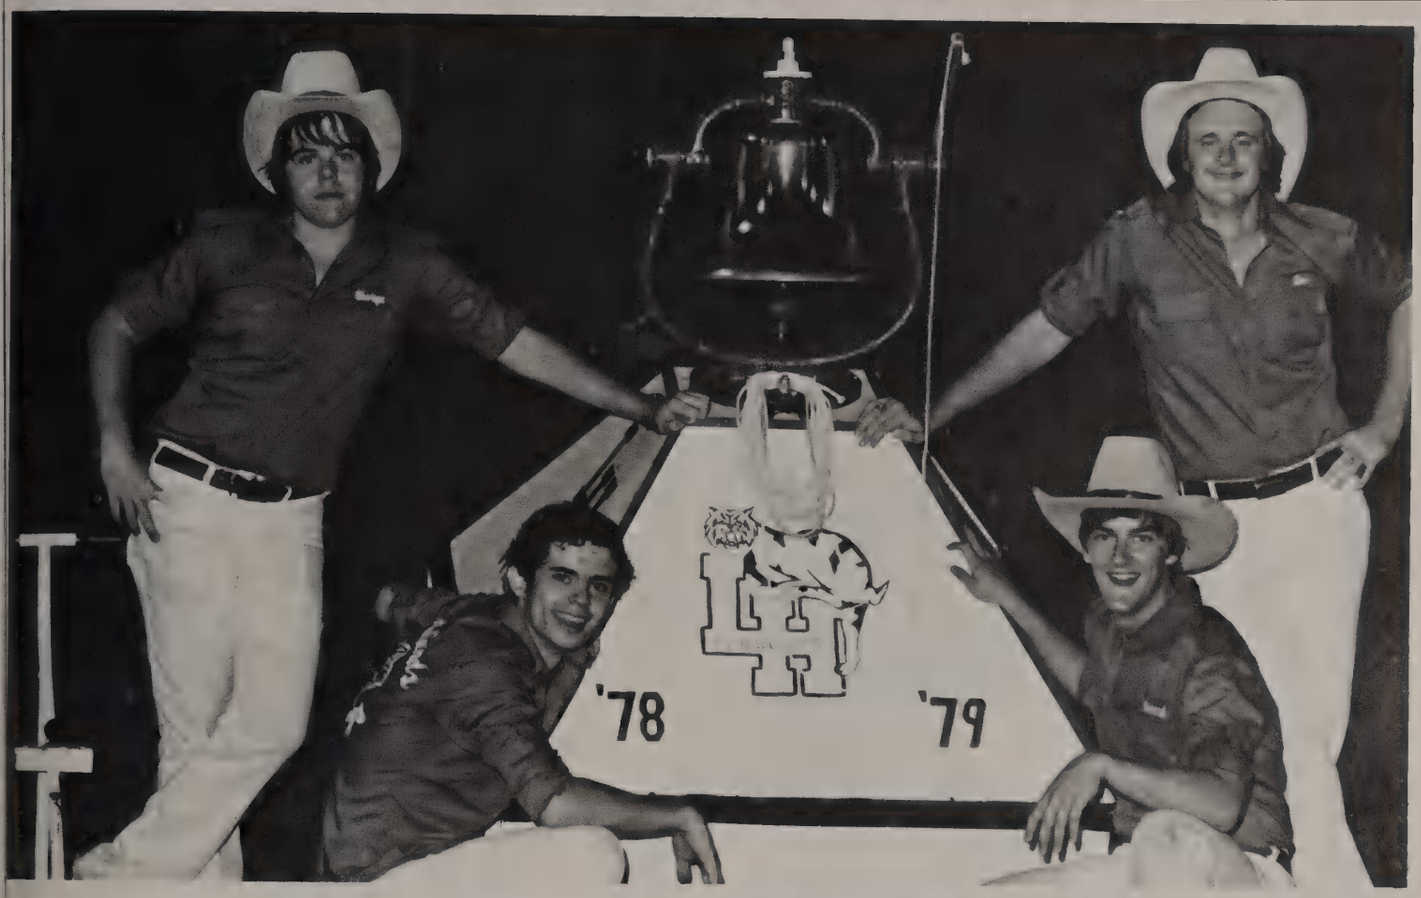
Ronny Marr and Wayne Mendenhall lead the varsity basketball team onto the court through the Superman run-thru sign, held by the bellboys.



The 1978-79 Bellboys were: George Hefner and Don Williams (standing), and Grady Quick and Howard Pace, kneeling in front of the bell.

Ding-a-ling-a-ling-a- ling; Here come the 78-79 Bellboys

The 78-79 Bellboys selected by the Key Club added a lot of spirit and humor to the pep rallies and football games. They carried over this spirit in the halls by helping in the Wildcat Mania. Howard Pace felt, "We were a go-between, between the cheerleaders and the students."

The Bellboys changed and added a few new traditions to better the group. Some of the new traditions consisted of a citation for the best Bellboy of the week, Kimbo the bear and new designs on the bell. Although with all the new changes, the Bellboys still kept the honor of raising the flag at all home games, building pyramids, standing on their heads, and practicing forward rolls on the sidelines.

Dana Dawkins, Anna Schultie, Diane Brown, Laura Vacalso, Karren Travis, Mary Schultie, Cindy Massengale, Lisa Gale, Debbie Short, Markene Moore and Eve Johnson were members of the Run-Thru crew.

Seniors Pam Milsap and Jody Huey and juniors Suzie Overman and Teri Smith join together in cheering for the LH wrestlers.

Matmates for the '78-'79 season were: Pam Milsap, Suzie Overman, Jody Huey, Dede White, Lorie Aldridge, Teri Smith, Pam Taruin, Mary Ann Farmer and Jane Malabanan.

Cheers, Spirit

Despite the dismal crowds the soccer and wrestlin teams had one other thin in common, two groups o girls who were interested i being involved in th school.

Both the Matmates an the Soccer Cheerleader became involved b decorating lockers cheering, and generally li ting spirit for their respec tive teams.

The two groups als gained an insid knowledge of their respec tive sports. As they gaine a better understanding o wrestling, the Matmate felt their cheer progressed. Each girl purchased her own uniform, with the minimum price being approximately $75.

Besides becoming more involved within the school, Matmates Pam Milsap and Mary Anne Farmer also said, "I feel this year we made the Matmates more acceptable to the school."

Even though the number of spectators at soccer games or wrestling matches may never equal that of a football or basketball game, the quality of the spirit is what counted, and both groups of cheerleaders had that quality.

Soccer cheerleaders for the '78-'79 season are: Mary Jane Staples, Anna Clark, Lisa Lee, Monica Carrillo, and Carol Coursey.

Strange expressions of spirit were rampant during Wildcat Mania week. In this instance senior Ronnie Marr ties up a dummy of Highland Park's Lance McIlhenny obviously foretelling the 25-15 victory over H.P.

We participated in many different programs offered to us: clubs, sports, academics, and activities. Of course, not everyone participated in everything, but we all found something we were interested in because there were so many things offered. But all the programs would have been nothing without us, the students and the faculty.

Everyone had a different role to fill. Through their leadership positions in the school, the seniors were preparing to make the transition from high school to college or the job world. The juniors were in-between, they had grown out their sophomorishness but they weren't ready to accept the leadership role of seniors. They were still learning. The sophomores were recovering from the shock of coming down from the top of the world-being a freshman to the reality of the lowliness of being a sophomore.

It was the job of the faculty and staff to take the hodpodge of students-sophomores, juniors, and seniors and mix us just right to mold us into adults, to take us to the top; and up at the top was a nice place to be.

Economics teacher, Jess Kirkley, perhaps one of the more whimsical faculty members, enjoys adding comedy to his classes. Here he impersonates Groucho Marx with a hand cut cheese mustache.

.isa Whitworth and David Sanders make final preparations for their halftime show at Nacogdoches. The marching band accompanied the football team to their first preseason game.

'hillip Walton gives his familiar "What's happening" look in his attempt at senior class president as once again the class officer elections became another entertaining break from class.

Amy Waller obviously did some homework for Cowboy Dress Up Day. This was one of three dress up days for Homecoming Week in which most of the school participated.

Key Word Among Faculty Is Involvement

Many events of the past year hold a special place in the minds of all who were involved with the school. The members of the faculty may not have been held in the fondest memory of all students, but where would the school be without the teachers, principals, librarians, counselors, secretaries, cafeteria staff, janitors, and last, but by no means least, the Zekes.

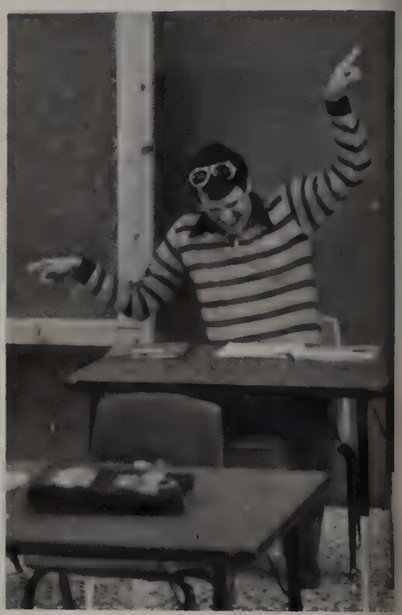
The members of the faculty have provided some rare moments. What anatomy student will forget Mr. Winstead's motley collection of cats. Mr. Higgins' geology class won't forget the day he read National Enquirer to them. Downstairs B Hall wouldn't have been the same without the aroma of nachos or lasagna floating by on culture days. Would honor students have been the same without enduring Mr. Wolf's calculus tests or Mr. Williams' AP English assignments. Remember when everyone's schedule was so messed up, and no one thought there could be help? Somehow, the counselors were always there.

Involvement in many clubs and organizations was at an all time high. Thanks to the teachers willingness, many clubs were able to gain members, raise money, host conventions, and do the many other things that clubs around LH did. The Encore Club sponsored it's first speech tournament in November. Mrs. Hare and the Latin Club hosted an area convention, complete with Olympics, in February. Mrs. Black organized and assisted in teaching at a Highlandette sponsored workshop for all interested girls. Several other teachers were also involved in similar activities.

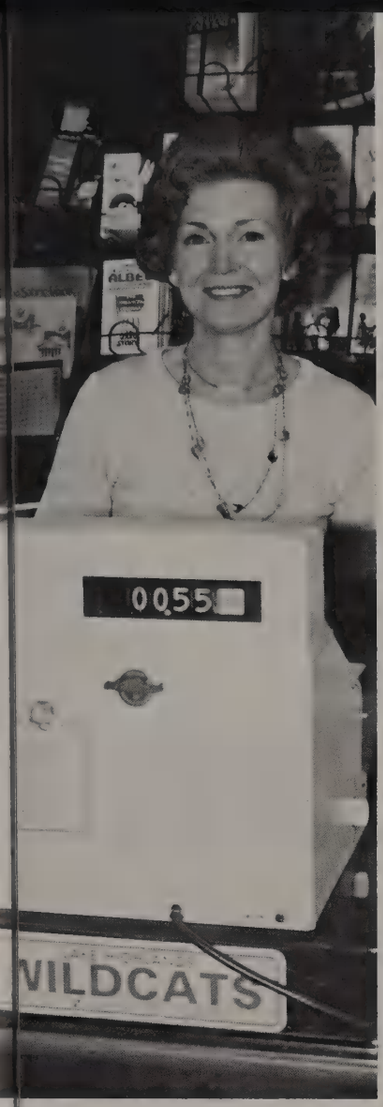
The faculty was also active within their own group. They played basketball, attended workshops and PTA meetings. Homecoming dress-up days and a Christmas party were also included.

The Dallas Tornado challenged the coaching staff to a game of basketball at the soccer assembly on February 10.

Swimming coach and health teacher David Stroble demonstrates a unique and rarely observed disco swimming stroke to a captivated health class.



Special services principal Tom Whitman assists Clint Howard with the screening of the LH based film Cotton Candy during Homecoming Week. The film was shown three times so that everyone had an opportunity to see it.



Student Council sponsor Nell Jennings works in the student book store selling supplies and early morning snacks.

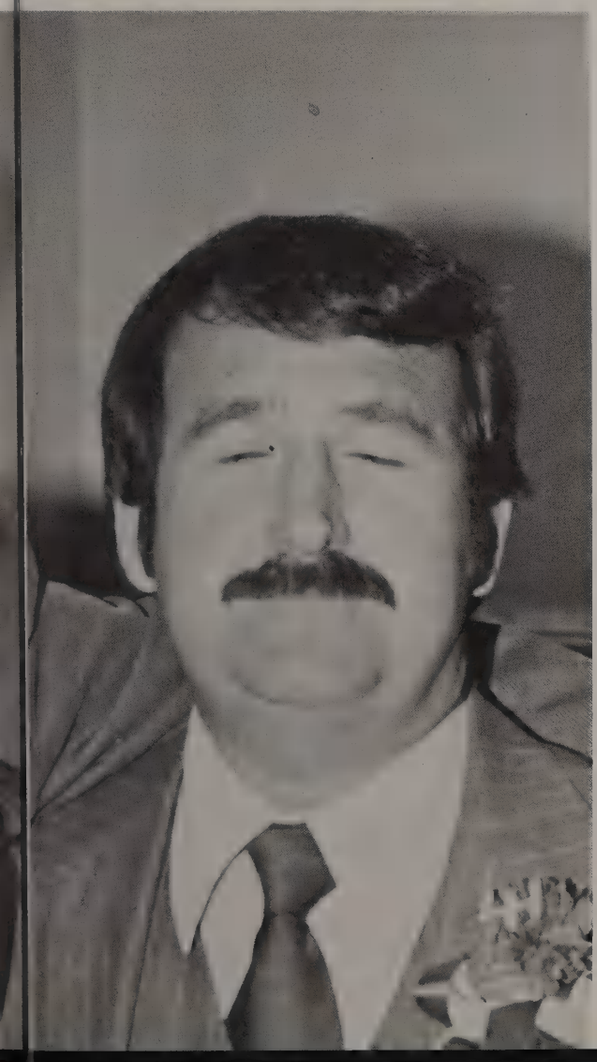
During the holiday season math teacher Mrs. Betty Aday prepares for the annual faculty Christmas party by setting out some food.



Jess Kirkley, government teacher, helps himself to a piece of cake as desert after sampling many of the other goodies available at the faculty Christmas party.

Mr. Tom Whitman, special services principal, and Mr. Olen Pyles, senior class principal, relax at the homecoming dance Oct. 27.

Grades Cause Concern Among Faculty

As the school year wound to a close, thoughts turned to graduation, exams, final grades, class rank, and above all, summer. Nevertheless, before the bliss came the chaos. The faculty was bombarded with paperwork and deadlines.

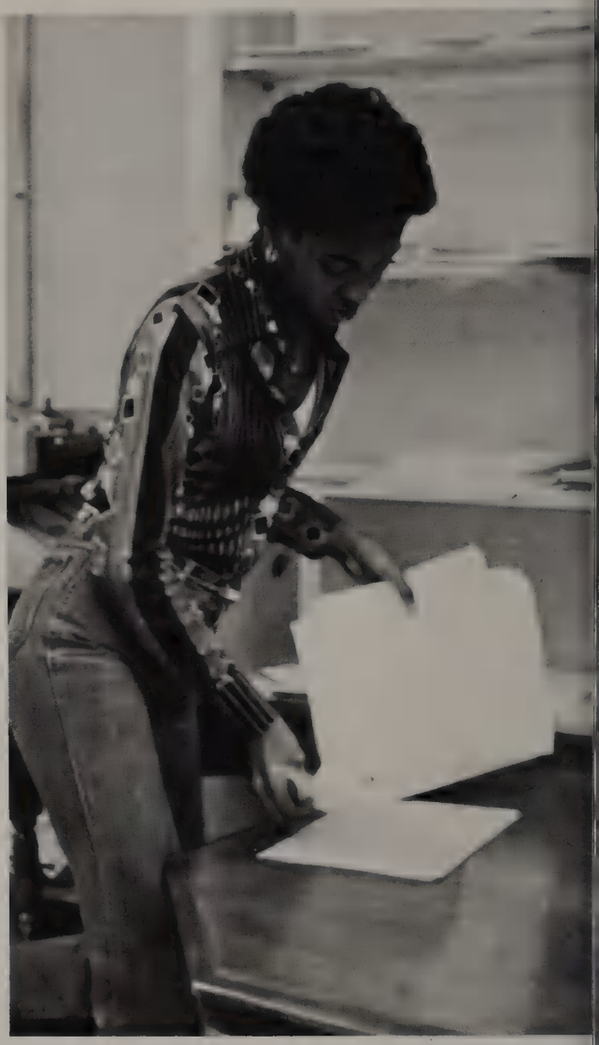
Looking back on the year, class rank turned to be of great importance to many. Not only did affect the selection of honor students but, combined with the ACT and, or, SAT scores, it determined college eligibility. Class rank is determined by all three quarters of the jumior year and the first two quarters of the senior year. The type of course taken did not affect the actual averaging of grades.

Counselor Kitty Brown felt that it was unfortunate that many students did not take classes of greater difficulty because of the effect they would have had on their class rank. Mrs. Brown also felt that a possible alternative to the ranking system in use, would be to include the sophomore year in the ranking.

Another concern of the faculty and students was the grading system. Some teachers used the point system, while others letter grades, checks and minuses, and the popular number grades. In response to a survey, one member of the faculty stated that only a pass or fail would have been ideal for many courses.

Exemptions were also a point of interest in the system. All students who expected to be exempt must have had an A in citi enship, no more than five absences, and required grade average for their classification. The majority of L.H. students relished the exemption policy. However, several teachers and many former students felt the policy may have been harmful to those students who chose to continue their education.

While most people realize that grades are important in determining the course their life will take, Mrs. Brown stresses that it is not the getting into college that counts, it is the staying there. As Lake Highlands students look toward the future, they amy be certain that the grades they earned will affect the rest of their lives.



Williece Williams, teacher's assistant in the workroom, helps the teachers prepare review sheets and types exams before the first quarter exam period.

Guidance counselor Mrs. Kitty Brown, a well-known member of the faculty, helps an LH student by offering some advice on schedule changes.

Senior Connie Stress and junior Leslie Young leave school loaded with books on Friday. A hectic weekend of cramming for first quarter exams lies ahead.

Spirit Runs Rampant Through LH Halls

The past year at Lake Highlands provided an example of what a school with spirit could accomplish. A combined effort by both the faculty and the students added an aura of excitement to the 78-79 school year.

In an unintentional way, the administration promoted spirit. On September 29 they cancelled all pep rallyies until further notice. It was around this time that a group of students got together and created Wildcat Mania.

Homecoming Week furnished a chance for the faculty to display some spirit. Several teachers participated in the dress-up days. Western day seemed to be the most popular.

The faculty also promoted an atmosphere of school spirit in other ways. Every one of the fourty clubs and organizations had a faculty sponsor. Thanks to a willing faculty, LH can ride with pride.

Even faculty members had Wildcat Mania. Junior secretary Eve Dunigan came dressed as a villain to show her homecoming spirit.

Martha Carona, a typing teacher at Lake Highlands, takes part in homecoming festivities by coming dressed as a cowgirl on Western Day.

Homemaking teacher Elizabeth Pritchett and Principal Jimm Fountain join teachers Jess Kirkley, Betty Aday, and Susan Boor among others at a pep rally before the Wildcats met the Pear Mustangs.

Faculty Offers Top-Notch Advice To Students

Ann Kizer

Maxine Amstutz

Kitty Brown

While the folks in Washington made friends with China, and the folks in Texas made friends with Bill Clements, the students here made friends with their teachers. This wasn't a hard thing to do since the teachers were unusually nice. Somehow, between school and personal business, they found the time to be a friend to over 2,000 students.

The advice they had to offer concerning success after high school was great. Kitty Brown, senior guidance counselor, said, "Work hard to be a credit to Lake Highlands and yourself. And don't forget us, come back to visit."

Ann Kizer, speech and debate teacher, suggests, "Learn humility and have an open mind." World history teacher Carol Buchannan says, "Try to make each day count. Time is a precious commodity."

Along the same lines, track, biology and health teacher Norm Alsobrook suggests, "If you take care of today, tomorrow will take care of itself." And English teacher Doris Williamson says, "Use your next four years in such a way that we can be proud of you. Drop in on us and let us know how you are doing. Keep in touch, we care."

It's hard to believe that there was enough time to go around, but somehow the time was found and the friendship was there. Their advice, spirit and intelligence helped, and they managed a few good jokes along the way.

The last piece of advice offered is from homemaking teacher Maxine Amstutz. "Rome was not built in a day, so don't expect to accomplish and do everything at once. Be realistic in your expectations; set goals and priorities. Put yourself in the other person's place and see things from their point of view."

Students may not have realized the importance of their friendships; however, they will become more valueable as the students leave Lake Highlands and face a whole new life.

'Behind the Scenes' People Enhance LH

The custodians, office staff and cafeteria workers have played an integral part in running Lake Highlands. Without them the year would have been chaotic.

The Custodians

Custodians do more than clean, since building maintanance is a major part of the job. Sweeping the floors and washing chalk boards weren't their only duties. They repaired broken desks, replaced light bulbs, and kept things running smoothly. And, while school was out for the holidays and summer, you could find the custodians working to keep LH in good repair.

Office Staff

The office staff supervised the coming and going at LH. In each office, secretaries were provided to preside over checking in and out, selling football tickets and checking on absentees.

Cafeteria Ladies

Finally, the cafeteria ladies. While many jokes were made about cafeteria food, without that food the days would have been mighty long. Junior Kim Kearby enjoyed going through the line for lunch because of all the workers being friendly and greeting her with a smile. Senior Patti Fulton expressed an opposite view, "I would rather bring my lunch from home."

Many students went to the student center to get the breakfast they didn't have time for at home. A cafeteria worker provides the student with his much needed nourishment.

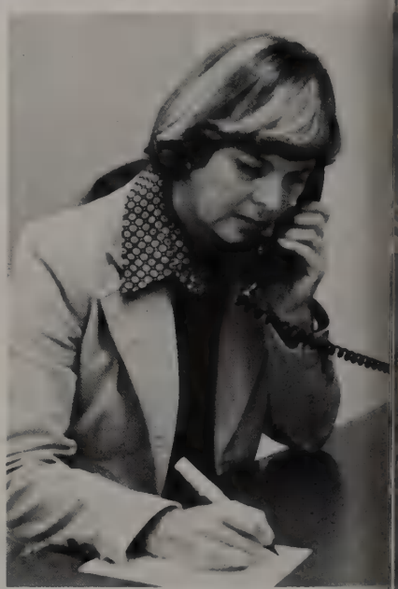
Lunchroom workers gather together in the main kitchen before preparations begin for the days hot lunches.



Junior office secretaries, under the direction of assistant principal James Caldwell, are busy checking absentees, detentions and parking lot violations.

This year's most popular food item seemed to be french fries. This cafeteria workers prepares hot fries before the B-Lunch crowd rushes in.

Custodian Ron Carman emptied trash cans several times a day. Here he is making his last trip of the day following C Lunch.

LH Faculty Members are People Too

Have you ever wondered where the Lake Highlands faculty could be found before eight o'clock and after three-thirty? The faculty at LH is one of the most diversified to be found in any high school. Many members took part in exciting and interesting hobbies and activities. Several members took up extra-curricular activities for profit, however, the majority of people participated purely for the enjoyment.

One member of the faculty who had an interesting hobby was Mrs. Bernice Bonner. Mrs. Bonner, who taught chemistry, has been growing orchids for four years. She originally became interested in orchids when her daughter gave her one as a present. She now has so many she is unable to count them. There are 25,000 different types of these flowers and she has approximately a hundred of them. Mrs. Bonner stated that the initial cost of the orchids is extremely expensive. This is partially due to the fact that the nearest suppliers are in Houston. She has shown her flowers at several shows and in the spring of 1978 she won a first prize in the Greater North Texas Orchid Show.

Mrs. Bonner was especially enthusiastic about the fact that the orchids are in bloom approximately five months of the year. She has not sold any of her plants, but reflected that the greatest reward has been sharing her flowers with others.

Lake Highlands is also privileged to have many other active among it's faculty. Three teachers have recevied their doctorate degrees. They are Dr. Buchanon, Dr. Kirkley and Dr. Beghardt. Mr. Tom Whitman, the special services principal, has been making jewelry for several years. Mrs. Patti Blide has become an avid runner. Many other members of the faculty are involved in activities outside of the school.

Mrs. Elizabeth Pritchett, an avid jobber, dancer and seamstress, manages to save money and wear quality clothing by sewing her own.

Chemistry teacher Mrs. Bernice Bonner raises exotic orchids in her time away from Lake Highlands.

Senior office secretary Carol Tubbs enjoys square dancing in her free time away from the office. A dress such as this is worn while she dances, for a group called the Lake Highlands Squares.

Dr. Jess Kirkley, government and economics teacher at LH, is one of the few faculty members with a doctorate degree. He holds a BD in Divinity, ThM in theology and a ThD, doctorate of theology. Each of these were obtained from Central Baptist Seminary in Kansas.

Active LH Seniors Receive Honors For Outstanding Achievement

The seniors of 1979 received many honors in their years at LH. The school had strong leaders and hard workers that were honored with various positions and awards.

Starting the year off, the senior class officers were elected on September 14. Elected to senior class president was Jeff Holland. Vice president was Kyle Felts, secretary was Cynthia Blum, treasurer was Suzanna Wilson and representative was Robin Eubanks.

The officers directed the function of a victory dance after the Highland Park game, chose the senior Board of Directors, helped with the Wildcat Mania craze and made the giant Homecoming sign and planned the Senior Prom.

On the 27th of October, prior to the LH-Richardson game, Leslie Adwan was crowned the 78 Homecoming Queen in front of a crowd of 8,000 home fans by Mr. Fountain.

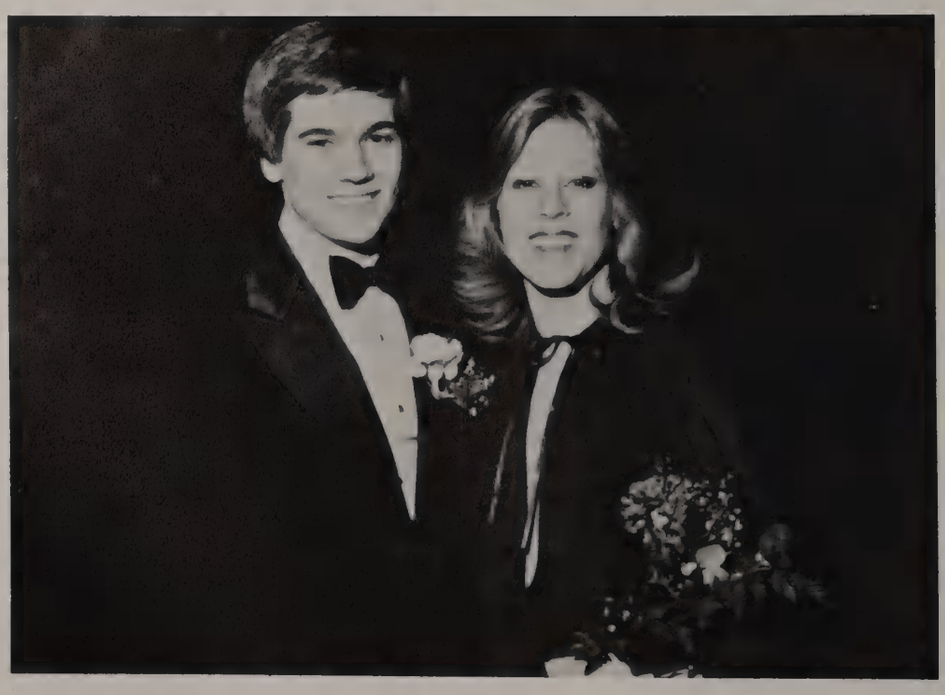
On February 3, the Favorites Ball at the Fairmont marked the presentation of the senior favorites. Mr. and Miss LHHS were Leslie Adwan and Mike Martin. Senior Favorites were Mike Brattlof and Shawn Asay.

Most Likely to Succeed were Karen Travis and Nick Naumovich. Seniors receiving the Most Talented award were Stacia Goad and Michael Jackson. Most Congenial seniors were Danny Brewer and Sherrene Asay.

Karen Travis and Nick Naumovich were selected as Most Likely to Succeed because of their determination and success in student government and Distributive Education respectively.

Mike Martin and Shawn Asay received the title for Senior Favorites representing all around congeniality, personality and outstanding in the mind of their peers.

Michael Jackson and Stacia Goad were chosen Most Talented by the senior class for outstanding performances in singing, acting and dancing.



The senior class officers (top to bottom) are Jeff Holland, president, Robin Eubanks, representative, Suzanne Wilson, treasurer, Cynthia Blum, secretary and Kyle Felts, vice president.

The 1979 senior class honored their choice for Most Congenial, Danny Brewer and Sherrene Asay at the Favorites Dance on February 4.

Senior Leslie Adway, 1978 Homecoming Queen, smiles at the crowd through her tears as she circles the field in a convertible T-Bird at the halftime of the Homecoming game.

Leslie Adwan and Mike Martin were chosen for Mr. and Miss LHHS at the Favorites Dance at the Fairmont Hotel. The entire school voted on the two people that they felt best represented the school.

Valedictorian Linda Fernicola and Salutatorian Mike Lanoux worked extra hard and finished at the top of a very competitive '79 graduating class. Linda finished with a 98.904 grade point average and Mike finished with a 98.807. Both had many honors and have been active in numerous clubs.

Seniors Tracee McKee and Kyle Martin were slected as Northlake Exchange Club Boy and Girl of the Year for outstanding participation and achievement at Lake Highlands.

At the Awards Assembly, various students were awarded for outstanding achievements. Valedictorian Linda Fernicola and Salutatorian Mike Lanoux finished at the head of the class. The National Merit Semifinalists consisted of seven students chosen after achieving exceptional scores on the PSAT. These persons are eligible to receive both college and corporation awarded scholarships.

The Northlake Exchange Club Boy and Girl of the Year was awarded to Tracee McKee and Kyle Martin. Tommy Bailey and Tracee McKee were chosen as All-Around Boy and Girl of the Year. Mary Ann Rice and Jeff Holland received the School Spirit Award.

The Superintendents Student Advisory Council, Mary Ann Rice and Carter Moore, visited council meetings and gave their opinions to help balance out the input of students that go unheard.

Many other awards were given at the Awards Assembly, too numerous to mention, each of equal importance and merit.

The LH seniors of 1979 excelled in many areas, some more visible to the public than others. The Awards Assembly was a time to recognize these outstanding seniors.

Lake Highlands seniors achieved high standards in whatever they did, leaving their mark and giving LH the prestigious name it deserves.

Carter Moore and Mary Ann Rice served on the Superintendent's Student Advisory Council and helped develop the weighted grade program which allows for the difficulty of a class in determining valedictorian, salutatorian, honor graduates, class rank, top ten graduates, scholastic letter awards and exam exemptions.

Mary Ann Rice and Jeff Holland were awarded the School Spirit Award for their promotion of spirit throughout the year. Wildcat Mania was a very positive addition to Lake Highlands pride and spirit and Jeff was in the middle of the craziness while Mary Ann contributed from the sidelines and in pep rallies as a varsity cheerleader.

Seniors Tommy Bailey and Traccee McKee were honored as the All-Around Boy and Girl of the Year, presented by Mr. Whitman and selected by the faculty and administration of Lake Highlands for their leadership, achievements and all-around personality during their years at LH.

LH Students Enjoy The Dating Game

Dancing at a disco, cuddling at a movie or dining at an exotic restaurant were among the favorite activities of LH students while on dates. Since most school activities such as football games, Homecoming, Favorites and after-the-game dances involved dates, dating was an important aspect of the lives of many LH students.

During the special school activities such as Homecoming, Favorites or the Senior Prom, Lake Highlands students often took their dates to dinner at exquisite restaurants such as Baby Doe's, Randy Tar, Madison's and Reunion Tower. Casual dates such as Saturday night out, after-the-game on Friday night or just out to lunch, saw many LH students going to places such as Chili's, the Filling Station and Red Bryan's.

Although dating for many students was going to movies, discos or fancy restaurants, there were others who considered dating just being with that special someone. Dating at Lake Highlands was very popular, and it was obvious to most everyone who walked up and down the halls during the morning break or between classes.

Dating was for all students, but all students didn't date. Some preferred to be alone, to spend their leasure time in quiet relaxation or going out with their friends.

The majority who did date, however, found dating filled with excitement, especially the popular double dating or the hesitant blind date. Students found that much was to be gained from dating, because it gave them a sense of freedom, of belonging, and of doing what "kids" were supposed to do.

Dating gave students a release from school, from home and from responsibility. It was a time when they could relate on a one-to-one basis, and for the most part, the students enjoyed it very much.

Getting away from the crowded hallways to be alone in the more secluded areas, sophomores Lawrence Seifert and Alice Farmer smile contentedly as they take time out from a normal school day to pose casually for a very "together" pose.

Juniors Paul Barret and Lisa Terrell take a moment during break to have a morning snack and spend some time together.

Seems like 'love at first sight' for senior Jeff Coates and his girlfriend Kim Whitworth as they sit outside together between classes, engaged in endless conversation.

Sitting casually with jeans rolled and legs crossed, junior, Lisa Daniels and her date, senior, Bill Heins take a moment to relax in the midst of all the excitement and fun at the Girls Service League barn dance. The dance was on December 1 at the "Ranch House," a private club in Wylie.

Not In School Program for Seniors Only

Amidst all the controversy of broken traditions and diminishing senior privileges, the Not in School program remained a blessing to busy seniors and a headache to the faculty and administration.

The average LH senior was in constant motion, both mentally and physically, throughout the year. With not a moment to spare, the NIS periods, first, fifth and sixth, were quite beneficial to the senior class of 1979.

First period NIS gave the senior a much needed hour of sleep. However, there were those who found that 8:30 was a good time to kick the old brain into action and study leisurely for an extra hour or cram for that big test. Approximately 100 students, averaged from the three quarters, were involved in first period NIS.

Fifth and sixth period NIS students were found at work, at leisure and at the books. The approximately 105 upperclassmen in fifth period NIS discovered that afternoon was a perfect time for appointments, lazy games of frisbee at the lake or possibly just a time to sit back and take inventory of too many jumbled events and thoughts.

NIS represented a remaining senior privilege at Lake Highlands, specifically for the convenience of the senior. Of course, there was always a few dishonest juniors that lied their way into the program, apparently too eager to wait for the senior honor. Each senior used his NIS time in a unique way, and the program seemed to suit the various needs of each individual.

On the other hand, its inconvenience for the administration and faculty caused several problems, and the result was the discontinuation of the fifth period NIS for the school year 1979-80. The series of events that led to this decision had been building up for several years.

The compiling of the master schedule was virtually impossible when each physical education elective, English elective and other multiple offerings had to be worked in. The subjects, offered throughout the day, had to be balanced with the heavy scheduling in second, third and fourth periods, due to the first, fifth and sixth periods of NIS. The elective system was hurt, and over the years some elective classes had to be eliminated because it was more desirable for seniors to leave school than to stay and take extra electives.

Assistant principal Mr. Tom Whitman pointed out, "It is imperative, if the elective system is to survive, that the student body think of the school and fellow students as a whole, rather than their own self desire to be out of school." In the long run, the teachers and students both suffered repurcussions.

The faculty and administration that worked so hard to produce an elaborate elective system, were confronted with more students leaving school than taking advantage of the one-of-a-kind elective program that LH had. Multiple electives were created, making the choice more restrictive and creating ease in scheduling the NIS students. They felt that students often hurt themselves because of their own blindness. However, the seniors still held the privilege of the NIS program, and in retrospect, the school catered to the needs of the Lake Highlands senior.

Like many LH students that spend their fifth and sixth periods getting experience in a certain field, Senior Kathy Burke works daily at an area orthodontist's office as an aid.

Sometimes the Not In School periods provide a time for students to work at various jobs and Anecia Drake's fifth and sixth periods are filled with a cashiers job at a local supermarket.

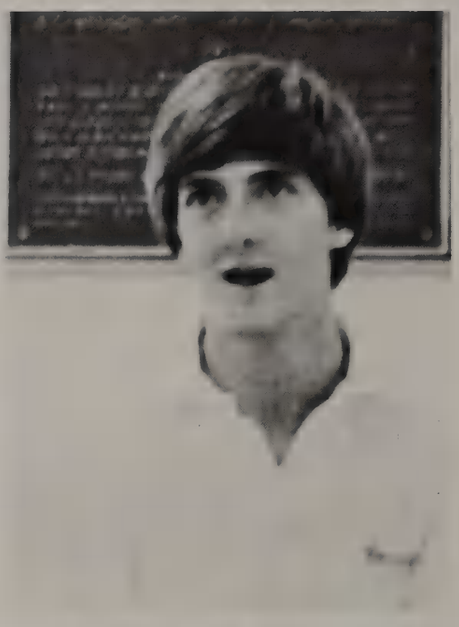
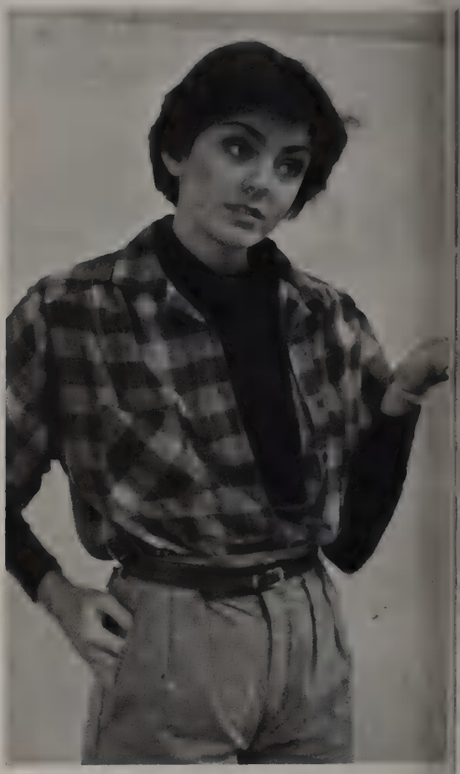
Many Lake Highlands seniors felt pressure to carry a heavier load of activities and responsibilities. Senior Jennifer Carr feels that "People expect seniors to do more and put out more."

Opinions varied according to how much of the senior expenses were payed by the student. Traci Cannizzaro said, "If I had to pay for it all myself I'd probably be a lot more upset."



On the whole, the 1979 graduating class had empty wallets and frustrated parents. Senior Howard Pace seemed to find the simple words to sump up the entire situation. "It costs too much to graduate."



Colleen Crudden spoke for many when she said "People go overboard. All I bought was thirty announcements. You spend as much as you want to and nobody forces you to spend anything."

Seniors Spend $$$

Announcements, senior portraits, achievement test fees, the notorious panoramic picture and the list goes on and on. It was all part of the extravagance of being a senior.

It seemed as though every time a senior turned around there was something else to pay for. Seniors were hit hard with the crunch for money and parents were up in arms over the constant request for the scarce green stuff. Those industrious people paying for all the expenses themselves, were up in arms also.

With the doom of inflation and unusually steep expenses, the unsuspecting seniors found cause to panic. Where did all the money to pay for senior year come from? Some came from generous parents. Some came from stingy parents. Some came from hard working, ambitious seniors and the rest was begged, borrowed and stolen.

Seniors had to pay for class portraits, announcements and cards, cap and gown, the wonderful panoramic rip-off and SAT, ACT and Achievement tests. If you so desired, memory albums, thank yous, graduation jewelry and appreciation folders could be purchased.

For those who were in Senior Show, extra props and of course, a t-shirt added to the National Senior Debt. Most clubs got t-shirts with slogans or names on them. Somehow, by senior year, one more t-shirt was not as meaningful as it was in the past years.

If involved with the senior publication The Pub, there were more t-shirts and all sorts of funny gags to buy. Sometimes, senior year seemed like one, big debt.

It it had simply been cost, the senior class of 1979 would probably still be sane. But constant mail orders and college catalogues, applications and various other information was frequently irritating.

Another large cost involved in a senior year was road trips to other colleges. Most of the time on an open weekend for LH sports or a parent's weekend at a college, transportation was not a problem, but on other weekends, finding a ride was no simple task. The bill added up quickly. Bus, plane or gas money, meals, even more t-shirts and souvenirs and entertainment costs were yet another money trap.

All in all, the memories cannot be bought, especially those from a senior year. The costs were a problem, but most seniors would not trade their senior year for anything. Of course, there were those....

Voting: Does Your Opinion Really Count

The November, 1978 election was a memorable one for several reasons. It was a vicious, slanderous campaign, filled with continuous bickering. The election was the first time for a Republican senator and governor to be in office at the same time since 1874. It was also the first opportunity for many Lake Highlands students to vote. The opportunity did not seem to be enough, because many LH seniors lacked the incentive to even register, much less vote.

The race itself was one of controversy. In the race for U.S. senator, John Tower and Bob Krueger struggled to come across with a unique view. While Krueger compared his campaign with the "party of Lyndon Johnson," Tower claimed he fought for "everything Martin Luther King died for."

The governor's race was regarded as a "race of contrasts," with Democrat John Hill and Republican Bill Clements in the running. In a combined total of campaign costs, the two spent over seven million dollars. Each vote cost the candidates approximately three to three and a half dollars. It was definitely one of the most expensive campaigns in history.

The campaigning was long, time-consuming and very involved. A great amount of apathy was generated among eligible voters at LH. Voting is a big responsibility, especially for a new voter. Somehow it seemed too big for Lake Highlands seniors. Teenagers have always been struggling with new maturity and responsibilities, yearning to be an adult. When legal age was twenty-one, they wanted it to be eighteen. Now that the new-found freedom from juvenile laws, drinking and voting privileges was eighteen, these legal adults found that it was much more than it was believed to be. Voting became a real responsibility, and it was scary.

Whatever the reasons, most eligible student voters did not make it to the polls. Some did not realize they could pre-register and turn eighteen on or before election day. Most of the seniors felt too uninformed while many were too uneasy or simply did not care enough to familiarize themselves with the candidates.

Sherrie DeLoach gave her reasons for not voting. "I was not well informed on all the candidates. It was a responsibility that I did neglect, but won't again since I'm registering soon. It is hard for a young adult to be familiar with politics when turning eighteen. The election is upon you and it's all so new. I was insecure about going into that little box and pulling the levers."

LH students were bombarded with political advertisements, radio, television, mail and all sorts of propaganda at election time. It took time to sort it all out and to make a responsible decision.

Involvement was not always easy, but past generations fought long and hard for the eighteen year-old legal age, and this generation was not sure what to do with it. Possibly the apathetic youngsters would not necessarily evolve into an apathetic adult. Their responsibility to elect officials in an election took a back seat to other involvements. Jeff Holland felt that, "Government was made for the people by the people, and the people must voice their opinions through voting for the candidate of their choice."

Senior Brenda Reagan was not eligible to vote in the '78 November election, but she wanted to get involved. She worked on the Henry Wade campaign, handing out literature at a voting precinct.

rs. Sue Passmore was the election judge for the ovember general election. She explains her esponsibilities as well as the voter's respon- bility to her classes by showing them voting rocedures.

It's all in a day's work for senior Phillip Walton, who neatly arranges a section of the produce in an area Safeway grocery store, where Philip was employed as a package carrier and a stocker.

Senior Diane Deloney, a sales clerk at Joske's Department Store helps a customer with a wide selection of ladies hosiery. Diane said, "I like my job and I do it well."

Work Pays Off

Rewarding work experience was provided for Lake Highlands students through jobs in department stores, grocery stores, fast food restaurants, service stations, hospitals, and even modeling agencies. These jobs kept students occupied 15, 20 and sometimes 30 hours a week.

Many students were employed at fast food restaurants such as Whataburger, Jack In The Box, Burger King and McDonalds. There were also students employed in department stores such as Joskes, Sanger Harris, Penney's and Sears.

When asked about the effects that these jobs had on school and its work, students reacted in different ways. "It doesn't affect me at all," stated senior Angela Reed. Sheila Perry, senior, said, "It has a tremendous affect on me, because working and going to school is all I ever seem to have time for."

"It doesn't bother me at all, because I never have any homework,"stated junior Wardell McCoy. Junior Highlandette Vikki Wells said, "I can't work because of my school activities and loads of homework." "I enjoy working most of the time, but school work seems to work me even harder," said sophomore Sheree Herbert.

"Working really doesn't have a very bad affect on me because I work mostly on weekends and sometimes after school," stated senior Maureen Maloney.

Some students had very promising jobs. For instance, senior Maureen Maloney was a fashion model, junior Sidney Turner was a record sales clerk and sophomore Reggie McIntyre worked at the Medical City Hospital of Dallas.

Although there were many Lake Highlands students who worked while in school and felt it was tiring and hard, there were others who worked mostly on weekends who felt their jobs had little or no affect on their work or performance at school.

At Lake Highlands, many students worked to occupy their time, some worked for school credits as a result of being in one of the many job programs, and others worked to help themselves get through financial situations such as the high cost of being a senior.

Regardless of the reasons that the many students at Lake Highlands had for working, the students found it to be very exciting, rewarding, tiring and filled with many opportunities because jobs benefitted students in many ways.

LH Fashions That Spell S-T-Y-L-E

Whether in straight-legged jeans and high-heeled shoes or in Quiana knits, Lake Highlands students loved to dress in style. If the occasion was a formal date, a casual date, a dinner out, a late-night party or just going to school, Lake Highlands students were dressed in style.

Fashionable clothing played an important role in most schools, particularly at Lake Highlands since the students preferred to dress according to what was in style. For many, clothes shopping became an art because of the careful inspection it took to find clothes which were tops in fashion, a quality fit, easy care and for a reasonably nice price.

Most students knew what to look for in clothing, and knew how to choose when deciding on a style resulting in quality products that were worth the money that was spent on them.

When asked if clothes make people or if people make the clothes, responses were varied. Senior Julie Hester said, "Clothes definately make people." Junior Rhonda Smith said, "I think clothes help make people look as well as they do," and junior Lisa Heitman replied, "Clothes make some people while some people make some clothes."

In most high schools, everyone seems to follow a ceretain trend or style, and despite the fact that most clothing styles changed from year to year, many students changed in different ways to fit those styles. Changes such as new haircuts, new wardrobes, new cars and many times, weight losses to fit the slogan "Thin is in" were some ways students kept up with the trends.

At LH, many students didn't limit themselves to what they wore to school. Students dressed in a variety of fine garments such as suede, silk, twede, and often times, Quiana. On the other hand, there were many students who wore mostly the every day clothes of jeans, sweats and sneakers. Ironically, both groups remained right in style in their dress.

Many times, people dressed in style to keep up with others or to fit into a certain group, while others were dressing to avoid certain groups. Lake Highlands students knew the styles and how to keep up with them, so whatever the occasion, LH students were always dressed right.

Senior Jeff Doman dresses in corduroy slacks, a ribbed stripe shirt with loosely fitting neck tie and an unbuttoned vest as he models his style of a very sleek men's fashion. Jeff accents his style with cuffs rolled up wrist high.

Gina Barbero, a junior, reclines in a pair of cream colored satin pants and a loose fitting coordinated blouse. Satin pants were a popular item on the LH fashion scene.

Senior Patti Segar and her date Dudley Matthies sit comfortably while waiting to be served steak dinners at Bobbie McGee's restaurant. Patti and Dudley offset their evening after dinner with a movie.

A Taste of Class

Whether it was a special occasion or just dining out, Lake Highlands students loved to dine in style. Many students enjoyed dining out at finer, more exquisite restaurants throughout Dallas.

On occasions such as Senior Prom, Favorites or Homecoming it was common to see LH students at fine restaurants throughout the city.

Among favorite dining places were Reunion Tower, where a view of the entire Metroplex came along with the meal, the Royal Tokyo, which served a delicasy of Japanese style foods, and the Railhead, which specialized in various types of steak entrees.

Never a dull moment for seniors Karen Travis and her date Wayne Mendenhall, as they sit comfortably while about to be served an exquisite dinner at Don the Beachcomber restaurant. Eating out at some of the nicer restaurant's in Dallas proved to be a popular thing to do with Lake Highlands students, especially before or after important dances throughout the year.

Seniors Grady Quick and his date Susan Golding, sit together in a booth at the Railhead restaurant. Grady and Susan began their evening with dinner and continued with dancing and a movie.

There was also Daddy's Money which served rack of lamb and steak dinners, the Randy Tar, which specialized in prime rib and lobster and beef or chicken en croute, and the Baked Potato, whose novelty items such as steaks cooked inside baked potatoes were very popular.

The finer restaurants ranged in price from moderately expensive to expensive. The moderately expensive restaurants served entrees ranging from $4 to $7, and the expensive restraunts charged more than $7 for their entrees. The expense and quality of the restaurant depended mostly on its features, such as its quality of entrees and its atmosphere.

Unlike fast food restaurants, the more expensive restaurants were quality oriented--quality in the service, quality in the food and particularly fine quality in the atmosphere.

At the Royal Tokyo Restaurant there was an oriental type of atmosphere; at the Reunion Tower there was a uniquely rich atmosphere; and at the Railhead there were surroundings of an old-fashioned Railway station.

Lake Highlands students enjoyed dining out at many of these exquisite restaurants for many reasons such as the food, the service, the excitement of many of the restaurants which featured live entertainment, the dance floors, the stars who appeared at some of the more elegant restaurants or dinner playhouses, and because of the atmosphere, a nice place to be alone for a while.

Whatever the reason, most students attending such funotions as the Prom, Favorites, or others, found their dinner quite often was the highlight of the evening.

The '78 Homecoming was a casual dance, giving students an opportunity to show off the latest in disco clothes. Lydia Felts enjoys the disco tunes in a popular disco fashion.

The New Craze: Disco

For a while it looked as though it would fizzle out in a few months. There was a certain risk involved for those who supported the fad. It could have been a financial disaster for some, but instead, it gained popularity quickly.

Individuals as well as companies made huge profits off the craze. The movie Saturday Night Fever was held over for many months. John Trivolta biographies, posters and dolls came out. Dance lessons were on the rise with ads in magazines, newspapers and on television. Booklets on how to do the Latin and New York Hustle were in every book store. The two-record album, Saturday Night Fever Sound Track, became a triple platinum record. Almost overnight Disco captured the interest of people everywhere, every age.

Then the market for disco paraphenalia broadened its scope. Saturday Night Fever "Disco Pants" hit the young men's stores as well as disco shoes. The ladies fashion merchandisers capitalized on disco dresses, disco purses, lighted disco shoes, disco makeup, jewelry, and the list goes on. But the extravagant disco attire was not confined to the larger department stores. The small convenience stores, drug stores and, of course, the mail order firms began carrying a variety of disco items. The novelty took a long time to wear off, and the consumers were ambushed with even more innovative ideas at Christmas time.

The actual disco scene was for an older crowd than Lake Highlands students, or at least some seemed to think so. However, many devout boggie fans slipped past carding at the door and managed to stay long enough to disco down. Once inside most discos, the lights and the atmosphere created that magnetic force. The liquor prices were steep since that was where the discos made their money. Sometimes that alone was the only thing that kept students from the disco scene, but some simply did not want to risk the embarassment of getting carded.

An alternative was offered at the Bijou and at Skateland. After two o'clock in the morning, when the bar closed, the Bijou allowed minors in their disco. Skateland added disco lights to their skating rink for an interesting roller disco concept. The students at Lake Highlands usually found a way to get into discos if they really wanted to. Fake ID's were used frequently by those lucky enough to have one. The rest of the kids had to get by on their good looks and charm.

The type of disco that appealed to Lake Highlands students varied greatly. Dallas offered many choices and the age group also varied. Several of the clubs that required a membership were Da Vinci, Disco Inferno, Elan's and Jabberwocky. Many clubs required only a cover charge of one or two dollars and a few required only that their patrons be eighteen years of age. A few of these were After the Gold Rush, Bijou, Carlos and Pepes, Coo Coo's Nest, Flannigan's and Scotland Yard. Most clubs had disc jockeys, but a few had live entertainment.

Disco was no longer just a way to dance. It was a kind of music, a new concept, and to some, a way of life.

Hidden among the barrage of night spots along West Northwest Highway, After the Gold Rush is popular with LH students as well as many other high school and college age disco fans.

The Bijou is a unique disco offering a choice of two life bands. It is often frequented by Lh students after two a.m. when the bar closes and the Bijou features after hours rock.

Appropriate for a night out on the town is a pair of pencil thin high heels and a slinky disco dress. LH sophomores Annette Earhart and Scott Jackson typify disco fashion at Homecoming.

Physical Fitness: The Best Way to Better Health

Jogging, swimming, bicycling and daily exercising were ways to keep in shape for LH students. These students found that there was a great difference in keeping a shape and keeping in shape. They found that keeping a shape went far beyond having extra strenth or vitality. It helped their personal appearance, challenged their cardiovascular system and helped build self confidence which in turn helped many other aspects of their lives.

For many people it took self discipline to follow strenuous exercise programs such as jogging, swimming or bicycling, but even those without the self-discipline found help in health clubs, spas and in fitness centers.

There were numerous places to keep physically fit, such as Nautilus Fitness Centers which were open to both men and women. Pat Walker's, a figure perfection salon for women, weight reduction Medical Centers for people who had problems with their weight and National Health Studios for men women, a fitness center for weight reduction, were all popular with LH students and faculty members.

At most of the fitness centers, professional instructors were available to counsel club members who wanted to accomplish personal fitness goals. They guided the participants through vigorous exercise courses and answered questions about fitness and exercise in general.

Instructors also helped the club members to effectively operate the equipment and facilities for maximum benefit in minimum time.

Many clubs offered luxuries such as messages, saunas, whirlpool baths, swimming pools, tennis and racquetball courts, sun rooms and inhalation rooms. Whether students were generally happy with their physique or desired physical strength and stamina on a permanent basis, many students got into the health revolution. Keeping physically fit was not an easy job. It took proper eating, sufficient sleep or rest and of course, daily strenuous exercises, but many students at Lake Highlands were glad to pay the price.

Life at Lake Highlands, Before and After School

At 3:30, students at Lake Highlands ame to life. Many students engaged hemselves in various activities away rom as well as on the campus. hese were activities that required me as well as much effort.

Such activities as band practice, rill team practice, club meetings and arious other activities took place af- er school. Many students had plenty of time to relax, exercise, engage in athletics, or work at various jobs.

There were also students who had to be at school before 8:35 or after 3:25 for various activities such as Girls Service League meetings, Future Homemakers of America meetings, Encore meetings and others. Swimmers and divers met before school in the mornings and after school in the evenings. The track team met in the afternoons also. Most students felt that it was important to become involved in activities such as these, and to be at various meetings at times when school wasn't in session.

Weekends at Lake Highlands were also very important. It was not just before 8:35 or after 3:25 on school days that students were fully involved in many of their activities.

Weekend activities consisted of wrestling tournaments for the wrestling team, sponsoring their first speech tournament for the LH Encore club and the FTA sponsoring their annual convention in the Lake Highlands auditorium.

Even though school wasn't in session before 8:35 in the morning and after 3:30 in the afternoon, Lake Highlands was constantly full of activity.

any students like junior Michelle Edwards make he library their place of habitation in the mor- ings before school. Many times it was to catch p on homework, read magazines, gossip with iends or simply study.

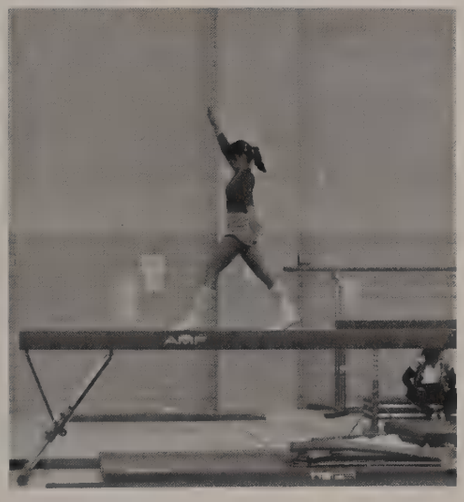
Senior Becky Skrabanek very carefully decorates the classroom door which will represent her second period class in the Christmas door-decorating contest. The class with the best original decoration earned a coke party from the Student Council.

Sunny but chilly was the scene on this early fall morning for the High Stepping Highlandettes as they go through their morning warm-ups and practice their very well executed gun routine. Many mor- nings, the Highlandettes were at school and practicing as early as 6 a.m., and during performances such as Spring Show in March, they stay as late as 9 p.m.



Junior Debbie Lacy, an all-around gymnast, spends her after-school hours practicing her compulsory beam routine which she used for gymnastics meets throughout the area and the state.

The last night of the YL Ski Trip at Winter Park was an emotional one, as the special entertainment group, Rick, Joyce and Dennis, played and sang to LH and Richardson students.

In the snow at Colorado, senior Tommy Bailey and Junior Dwight Dunlap head for breakfast after loading their skis and boots on the Continental Trailways buses.

Young Life Director at Lake Highlands and North Area Director in Dallas, Joel Householder, hams it up as a man who thinks he is a balloon in one of the zany skits at the nightly club meetings.

LHHSYLC On The Slopes

Skiing was an intensified activity during the Thanksgiving and Christmas Holidays as church groups, families and school organizations hit the slopes. One of the largest, most well-known trips was the annual Young Life Ski Trip.

Due to the tremendous popularity of Young Life and Campaigners at LH, the trip to Winter Park, Colorado was well publicized and well received. In 1973, seventy-five students went on the ski trip. During the 78-79 year, YL took the largest group ever, one hundred and thirty-five Lake Highlands students, as well as several Richardson students.

Across the city, Young Life took 1300 students from Dallas area schools on eight different trips. Our local Young Life trip took five Continental Trailways buses and rode twenty hours each way.

YMCA Snow Mountain Ranch in Colorado was revisited this year by Lake Highlands, but in past years the club traveled to Breckenridge, Lake Eldora and Monarch ski resorts.

LH takes several adults with them, usually parents of the students, and the YL skiers welcomed the Woodrings and Barbara Bailey as guests on the trip. There were also twenty-five counselors on the trip.

The well organized team worked closely with the kids, and there was an eight to one ratio of counselors to campers. The trip lasted six and a half days with the skiers on the slopes four full days.

The price of the entire trip was $220 plus lift tickets and meals on the bus ride up and back. Each day the buses pulled away after breakfast at 8:30 and took skiers down the mountain to the Winter Park ski resort. Skiing until 4:30 or 5:00 . Every day the buses took home very wet and very exhausted skiers.

At night there was a club meeting in a large room, with a variety of skits and songs as well as a talk by one of the leaders. Dale Vollrath, the Metropolitan director of Young life in San Francisco, was the speaker for the trip. He gave a series of talks and told about the most meaningful thing in his life. Each night he moved through various illustrations showing the campers why he was motivated to become a Christian. Students responded with enthusiasm, tears, and deep respect for Dale and the message he delivered.

The camp was a special time for the students, as were all the YL camps. The Young Life organization reaches out to many of the kids through weekend trips at nearby camps, week-long summer camps, backpacking in the Colorado Rockies, cross country skiing, word crew training and placement. Young Life at Lake Highlands has had a definite impact on the student body.

To many, the ski trip was the high point of their year and to others simply another fantastic growing experience within the YL group.

Dwight Dunlap noticed that it was a "whole different thing being surrounded by Christians in such an exciting, entertaining atmosphere." Another LH student that frequented Young Life and the Campaigner Bible Study, summed it all up. Tommy Bailey said that "Young Life gives me an opportunity to hear the Word of God from the point of view I can relate to. It has played a major role in my becoming a devoted Christian."

LH Students Voice Their Opinions

Lake Highlands High School was thought to be one of the finest schools in the Richardson Independent School District, at least by those who attended the school or had anything to do with it. The students displayed friendly attitudes, the faculty was sincerely dedicated, the counselors were extremely helpful, and the principals were always supportive, making for an excellent academic and extracurricular atmosphere at Lake Highlands.

LH was a school which most of its students were proud of because of the many achievements, many fascinating extra-curricular clubs, an outstanding drill team, a superb band, excellent athletic teams and an overall great student body.

Most of the students who attended Lake Highlands loved the school and felt very strongly about its programs. There were others, however, who did not seem to appreciate the many achievements which had been made. With more than 2,100 students in the school, many were asked to express their views concerning the school and its atmosphere. The results were what might be expected from a student body that loves its school.

Students surveyed felt that the strong points at Lake Highlands were the fine academic curriculum, the opportunity to be an individual and make a place for one's self in a large environment, the freedom to choose their own courses, and the general feeling that counselors at LH were very helpful.

It was true that Lake Highlands had a fine academic program in areas such as English, math, foreign language, science, history and others. Most students felt that LH had prepared them for the world after graduation, but many felt that learning to deal with people and becoming a better person were far higher achievements during their stay at the school. Most students also felt that they were aided immensely in their career development.

Students stated that the friendships they developed while at LH were very important, not only while they were in school, but after school as well. Students felt that the faculty and administration helped to create an atmosphere which made education a much less bitter pill to swallow.

Although many students felt social, financial and educational pressures while at Lake Highlands, most were able to overcome those pressures through their own hard work and the encouragement they received along the way from friends, parents and faculty members. All in all, most people concluded that Lake Highlands High School was a nice place to be during the 1978-79 school year.

Sophomore Van Rapp, when asked to express his opinion of Lake Highlands, said, "I feel no pressures here, the teachers are pretty well qualified and it's a really good school."

I think Lake Highlands is a really fine high school. It is geared toward improving yourself and it is very educational," said senior Leslie Canpied when asked to give her opinion of Lake Highlands High School.

Varsity football running back and very outgoing senior Richard Gray, when asked about the pressures at Lake Highlands, was quoted as saying, "I feel no pressures at all; social, educational, or financial."

Junior Mary Rose Becker expresses her view of LH by saying, "I like it a lot. I moved here in my sophomore year and I met many new friends. The people here are also super friendly."

Senior Carolyn Durham was quoted as saying, "Lake Highlands is a pretty good school. To me it has many opportunities as well as some very educational courses.

The Big Decision

Senioritis was a common affliction during declining months before graduation. Usually it was disgnosed correctly with a few, easily recognizable symptoms; an itch to get away from Mom and Dad, little brother and sister and all the games that high school kids played. Seniors were found at home, blowing their exemptions, suffering from mental exhaustion brought on by twelve long years of schooling. Many rushed out to lunch, suddenly taken ill because of claustrophobia. Apparently Lake Highlands was no longer large enough to hold the affected 1979 Seniors.

The yearning to get out of school occupied the thoughts of most seniors. However, the next predicament was whether or not to continue their education, and, if so, how.

Taking the achievement tests was always an inconvenience, since they seemed to fall after out-of-town football games or dances. Sometimes students took it several times before they were satisfied.

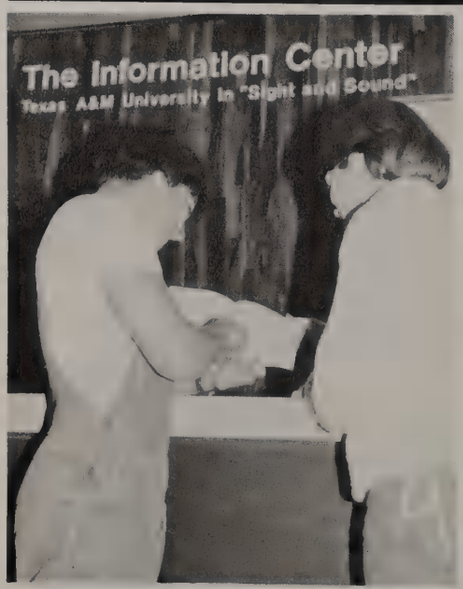
Then came the stacks of college catalogs, long talks with parents, counselors and college students. Possibly one of the more frustrating aspects of the entire process is the mail. Every senior encountered it. Sifting through bothersome letters from faraway colleges was interesting and possibly even a little fun at first, but soon the pile of clutter became unbearable. Sending in applications, putting down deposits and dorm reservations was all very confusing and usually a bit frustrating. Acceptance and refusals brought on hopes and fears and anticipation.

Different reasons for entering college existed, varying with the individual. Lake Highlands students realized that progress in life didn't usually come without a formal education and the logical alternative was to pick a college suited to that particular person. The school spi and football team, sororities, cos were all considered. Lots of kid went to college for all the wron reasons and ended up back home Richland. It was not an easy task leave the nest and take on so mar new responsibilities.

In five or ten years, when the clas of '79 gets back together to show o brand new life styles, there will b many who have succeeded. Lak Highlands was constantly upgradin the system in order to prepare th student for college better. The b decision about college was very d ficult, but the 1979 graduating clas from Lake Highlands High Scho had a whole new world before the with so many new experiences. The would deal with these new respo sibilities and experiences with th pride and style of any LH student, b with a special determination simp because they were the Class of '79.

Richland Junior College, more affectionately known as "Harvard Off The Highway," offers students a chance to complete prerequisite courses for other colleges or to earn an associate degree.

The old Memorial Student Center was opened 1951 and dedicated as a living memorial Aggies who gave their lives for their country This new facility was opened two years ago.



Many LH exes have helped seniors come to a decision about which college to attend. Fred Balda, a 1978 graduate of LH, shows Karen Hill the "sights and sounds" A&M Information Center.

'Heavy Metal' Comes To LH In The Form Of 180 Proof

Lake Highlands students were given the opportunity to hear the live sounds of 180 Proof this year, as the band played for a near capacity crowd in the lake Highlands Auditiorium. The band, consisting of Ken Adams (Vocals), Mark McCuistain (Guitar), Dwaine Carter (Guitar), David Still (Bass), Dominick Pizzuto (Keyboards), and Chris Hawkins (Drums), played an hour's worth of original and borrowed material.

Reaction to the show was mixed, but the general concensus was that the band was at their best when performing their own material. Original 180 Proof compositions such as the spirited rocker, Come Sail proved to be the highlights of the show. They delivered rather tattered versions of the Kinks ala Van Halen classic, You Really Got Me, and the Lynyrd Skynyrd staple tune, Free Bird, but did manage to turn exceptional renditions of the Beatle turned Aerosmith hit, Come Together, and the Alan Parsons Project tune, Wouldn't Want to be Like You. Overall, though, the show was considered a success, as students were finally able to attend an assembly geared more towards student interests.

Officers Spur Spirit And Fund Raising

Junior class officers for the '78-'79 school year were busy doing what they do best : raising money and promoting spirit. Officer elections were held on September 14 after each candidate had presented petions with signatures of 25 supporters and had given his campaign speech in front of the Junior class. Student voting resulted in the election of Nicky Manos, Pesident; Michelle Massimino, Vice-President; Cindy Schweizer, Teasurer;Randa Babaa, Secretary; and Jill Woodring, Representative. 'We have raised more money than the sophmores and we have done even more than the Seniors,' commented Junior class President Nicky Manos. He and the other officers with the support of the student body brought the total class treasury to over $3100. The officers also led the Junior class where school spirit was concerned. The Junior class won the spirit stick for collecting more money in a glass keg than either the Sophmore or Senior class during the week of the Richardson basketball game.

Junior Princess & Favorites Elected

Homecoming festivities for the Junior class was the crowning of Junior Pincess Joyce Boyle. She was crowned after a week of nominations and voting by the Junior class. Other nominees for Junior Princess were Kelly Gray and Suzanne Herbert.

Later in the year Juniors celebrated the election of class favorites. Nominees for Junior girl favorite were Joyce Boyle, Kelly Gray and Randa Babaa and for boy favorite nominees were Todd Kirkpatrick, Bob Hmmeres and Nicky Manos. After a suspenseful day of voting, todd Kirkpatrick and Randa Babaa were announced Junior class favorites at the dance that evening which was held at the Fairmont Hotel.

From Victory Dance To Senior Prom money was raised by the Junior class officers by sponsoring a victory dance during basketball season. The dance was held after the Wildcat roundballers overpowered the Richardson Eagles in the Wildcat gym on January 12. Music was provided by a dee jay for the enjoyment of LH students. A total of $450, which will be used to fund the Senior Prom for the class of '80, was raised through the victory dance

Susan Hull, a senior, shows her style at a Wildcat victory dance held in the LH cafeteria.

Students celebrate another LH win by hitting the floor at a victory dance later that evening. Victory dances were prime fund raising acrtivities for many LH organizations, including the Junior class which raised some $450.

Popular Restaurants Enjoyed By Students

Lake Highlands students were frequent patrons at several of the local restaurants offering popular foods in the middle price range ($2-$7). The North Dallas area had a large share of such restaurants which offered a variety of food types.

Burgers 'n' Fries Still Favorites

For one of America's favorite meals, a hamburger and french fries, students headed for such old stand-bys as The Filling Station and Chile's. Although these two restaurants had been around for several years, they still remained favorites with many Lake Highlands restaurant goers. Chile's offered a large one-third pound hamburger, while The Filling Station served both regular and large size burgers piled high with lettuce and tomato. Both restaurants served ample orders of french fries.

For an alternative to Chile's and The Filling Station, many Lake Highlands students turned to Judge Beans, a new restaurant on Park Lane. Judge Beans offered a similar menu of hamburgers and nachos in a casual atmosphere.

Annie's Offers Latin Flair

For a complete menu of Mexican dishes, many students found Annie's Santa Fe a great place to enjoy an authentic Mexican meal. The menu included huge "puffed" tacos stuffed with meat, lettuce, tomato and cheese. Empanadas, dough stuffed with meat fried-pie fashion, were a unique and delicious item on the menu. Annie's also served conventional Mexican dishes such as enchaladas, tacos and tostadas. The decor reflected the simple life of the Mexican-American Indians. The many hanging plants and handtowels used for napkins gave Annie's Santa Fe a relaxed and homey feeling.

Juniors Cindy Traylor and Marsha Pratt enjoy nachos and hamburgers at Madhatters, located in the Market shopping center at the corner of Fair Oaks and Park Lane. In addition to offering good food in the middle-price range, Madhatters also provided a game room for the enjoyment of its patrons.

Relaxing Atmospheres Popular

Many Lake Highlands students found Banana's Cafe an ideal spot for a relaxing Saturday afternoon lunch. The open atmosphere and delicious banana specialities added to the interest of Banana's, located in the Market shopping center.

Our House, with its warm, earthy atmosphere was a favorite place of many students for casual dining. "We are most noted for our fresh vegetables and our Crab quiche," said Senior Mary Anne Farmer, also a hostess at Our House.

For late night or after-the-dance meals, students turned to restaurants such as Jojo's and Sambos. Both were open twenty-four hours a day and served a variety of foods. Jojo's featured a menu with complete dinner entrees, while Sambo's menu focused on basically fast-food items and breakfast dishes.

Food tastes at Lake Highlands were wide and varied, but students were fortunate to have a variety of restaurants in the local area to serve their needs.

Juniors Lorie Mathews and Mary Morrow are seen leaving Pizza Hut, a favorite place to get a bite after the game. Pizza Hut restaurants have several locations convenient to the Lake Highlands area which offer many types of pizza with either thick or thin crust.

Senior Tracy Hanson steps up to the counter to pay for her sandwich at Schlotsky's, a small sandwich shop serving huge deli-style sandwiches at a reasonable price.

Wildcat Maniacs Bring Newfound Spirit To LH

During the autumn months of 1978, Lake Highlands High School was suddenly attacked with a severe case of school spirit. Out of nowhere, and without explanation, students were turning out in numbers to support the Wildcat football team. The spirit even spread to within the school. Windows and windshields were adorned with cheers and encouragement for the Wildcats. Banners and posters were designed to be displayed on LHHS walls. Many members of the faculty agreed that it was the finest display of spirit in Lake Highland's history.

Lake Highlands Shocks Division

This impressive show of spirit had its beginnings during the week before the Lake Highlands, Highland Park game. The varsity cheerleaders and the Highlandettes decorated as many cars as they could get to in the parking lot, while the usual array of banners were placed in the hallways. Towards the end of the week, the spirit that the cheerleaders and Highlandettes had started had ignited, and Wildcat Mania swept the school.

The Highland Park game was the most talked about subject of the week, and tension began to mount for the upcoming game.

Lake Highlands students were not disappointed as the Wildcats soundly defeated the Highland Park Scotties. The spectators at the game could almost be given as much credit for the win as the football team. Throughout the game, Wildcat fans cheered the team on to a rousing victory. When time finally ran out after the fourth quarter, Wildcat Maniacs poured onto the field to congratulate their team. A large mob of fans and players gathered together on the fifty-yard line to celebrate the upset victory.

School spirit was never greater. Students anticipated the big games that were to be played in the future, and there was talk of a possible district championship.

Valerie Shane puts the finishing touches on a spirit banner to be displayed in an LH hallway. Organized sign painters, such as the members of the Wildcat Mania meetings, contributed greatly to creating and generating spirit at the school.

Spirit Unable To Keep LH Afloat

The Lake Highlands caravan made its way to Plano stadium in an optimistic mood. This would be the game that decided the team's fate. Plano, had the upper hand over Lake Highlands and dominated the Wildcats throughout the entire game.

The next major game on the Lake Highlands schedule was against Richardson. Long-time rivals of the Wildcats, Richardson played a very respectable game against the LH team. Victory, however, belonged to the Wildcats, and Lake Highlands found itself one step closer to the playoffs.

Lake Highland's last chance came at the final home game against Greenville. Many students tried to maintain the spirit of the earlier part of the season, but it was not the same. The spark and spirit of an earlier Wildcat team was simply not present, and Lake Highlands was again defeated. This brought an end to an otherwise successful season for the team.

Car caravans were a popular part of displaying school spirit. Here sophomores Leslie Setliff and Laura Brown make their way to the Plano game.

Juniors Greg Davis and Jane Malabanan prepare for an evening of theatrical entertainment at the Dallas Theater Center. The Theater Center was located in a secluded woody area near Turtle Creek, and offered a pleasant atmosphere for the theater goers.

Dallas Is Living In The Middle Ages

Those students who wished to escape the ordinary forms of entertainment could easily do so in Dallas. The entire range of classical arts were represented in the form of the Dallas Symphony Orchestra, the Dallas Civic Opera, the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts, and in many other sundry theaters and museums around the metroplex. In 1978 and 1979, these organizations began campaigns to revive interest in the fine arts, and fortunately, attendence took an upward swing.

Another art center located in Fair Park was the Music Hall. The Music Hall housed performances ranging from the Dallas Symphony Orchestra to comedian Steve Martin.

New and Improved Orchestra & Opera

In an effort to boulster the size of their audience, the Dallas Symphony Orchestra took part in a series of performences with a modern touch. They performed several different shows designed to appeal to almost everyone. Taking advantage of the 'Star Wars' craze, The DSO performed a show featuring music related to the cosmos. Featured selections included 2001, Star Wars, Close Encounters, and The Planets Symphony by Holst.

As a part of the 'Summertop' series at Northpark, the DSO cashed in on another fad by featuring a disco night. The orchestra devoted the second half of their show to songs from the Saturday Night Fever album. The audience was invited to join along with a professional dance team as the orchestra played.

Outdoor concerts were also a popular part of the DSO season. The atmosphere was extremely casual, as patrons brought lawn chairs, picnic baskets and frisbees along to the show.

Under the leadership of Eduardo Mata, the orchestra was also fortunate enough to recieve a recording contract from RCA records. It seemed that Mata's joining the orchestra was a major progression in the history of the organization.

Like the DSO, the Dallas Ballet company produced a series of outdoor performances in an effort to attrack followers. The performences, consisting of a set of short modern ballets were conducted at night outside of the town hall.

All through the year, various ballet companies sponsered shows starring special guest dancers from around the world. The ballet, however, recieved the most attention at Christmas time, with the annual performance of Tchicovsky's 'Nutcracker Suite.'

The Dallas Civic Opera also went through change during the 1978-79 season. For the first time in the history of the organization they performed an opera written in English.

Pompeii, Warhol & Dracula Come to Town

The most destinguished of musuems, The Dallas Museum of Fine Arts, displayed many fine exhibits during the year. The most important of which was the Pompeii exhibit that opened in Dallas in January. The exhibit featured classical Roman art, recovered from the ruins of ancient Pompeii, a city destroyed by the eruption of a volcano in 79 A.D.

The work of contempary artists such as Andy Warhol and Claus Oldenberg were also featrued a t area galleries, bringing a modern touch to the metroplex.

The world of the stage was not neglected in Dallas as theaters around the town produced many excellent plays. Notable presentations included 'A Texas Trilogy', ''Dracula', and the musical presentation of 'A Chorus Line.'.

The largest art museum in the city was the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts located in Fair Park. The larger exhibits that toured the country, such as Pompeii '79, usually found their way to this facility because of its size and prime location.

Chris Snow's silver Ford pickup complete with spurs and gunrack seemingly intimidates a tiny sports car occupying the adjacent parking space. Both of these autos are considered prestigious forms of transportation by most students on the LH campus.

Variety The Word On LH Auto Scene

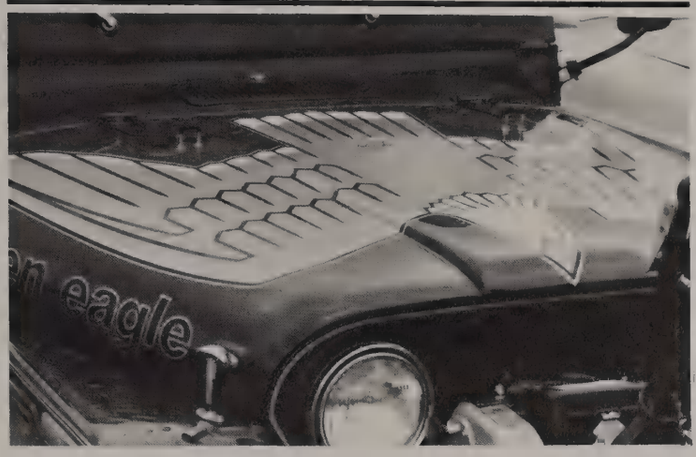
The Lake Highlands High School parking lot boasted an almost endless collection of car models--everything from 57 Chevies to 78 Trans Ams. The Lake Highlands pride showed through even when it came to cars. Almost all of the students, no matter what they drove, had a sense of pride in their automobiles. Even the tiniest of the compact cars did not feel out-classed by any of the long, lean luxury cars that they shared the lot with.

No Car Typical At LH

It was impossible to find a car model typical of Lake Highlands students because, car preferences, like many things at Lake Highlands, were individualistic. If the student (or his parents) could afford it, popular choices included Ford Thunderbirds, Pontiac Trans Ams and the infamous Z-28 Camaro by Chevrolet.

Older model cars of every conceivable shape and size also found their niche in the Lake Highlands auto scene. Some of them were the students' personal choices while others were hand-me-downs from parents or older brothers and sisters. It didn't seem to matter where the car came from, just as long as it got the student where he was going. Pickup trucks, once thought to be just another way to get around, became quite a status symbol on the LH campus during the 78-79 school year. Trucks were rated according to their size and extra features. Many were monstrous creations, equipped with roll bars and extra lights. The interests of the truck owners were reflected by items found in the trucks, such as spurs, boots, and tins of Skoal.

If students were looking for an inexpensive car which could be operated economically, compact cars were often the answer. Among the many compact cars found at Lake Highlands were the Toyota Celica, the Dodge Colt and the Ford Mustang II. These economy cars, although small in size, offered great savings at the gas pump.

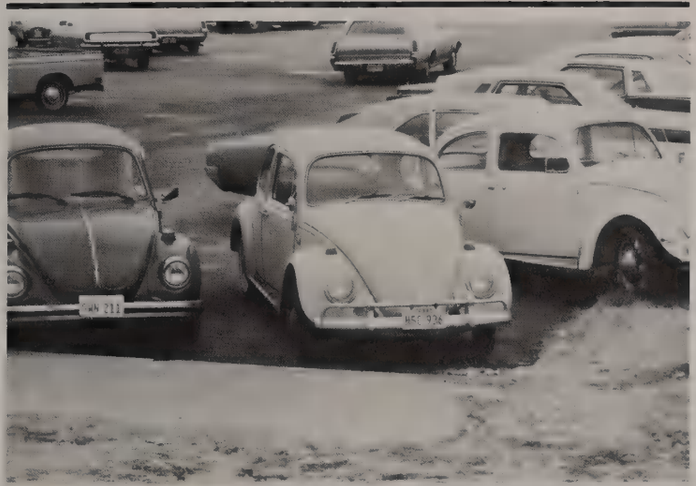


The hood of junior Dwight Dunlap's "Golden Eagle" Jeep is adorned with dramatic artwork of black and gold illustrating the model's name. Dwight is one of several students at Lake Highlands who finds Jeeps to be the answer to their transportation problems.

Self-Serve to Save Money

Gas prices were up again, but students were still willing to pay the price. Prices varied according to the type of gas purchased, where it was purchased and whether or not the student pumped it himself. Many gas stations added at least one self-serve island while others converted to entirely self-service operations. More and more students were pulling up to the self-serve islands in an effort to save money.

Despite soaring gas prices and high maintenance costs, cars were as much a part of Lake Highlands life as academics. It seems cars always have, and always will be, an important part of life at LH.



On a damp, grey day, the Lake Highlands parking lot sports its own Volkswagen "Bug Collection." Although the VW Beetle has gone out of production in the U.S., older model Bugs are still popular modes of transportation with many Lake Highlands students.

Lake Highlands Students Infiltrate The Economy

Student spending habits were examined at Lake Highlands and were found to be as diverse as the students themselves. Student income was also examined and it was found that most students obtained money from jobs, allowances or from other sources such as loans or gifts from relatives or any combination of the three. Working students at Lake Highlands earned an average of $308 a month while parents dished out an average allowance of $14.60 a month. Other sources of income ranged from recieving Social Security benefits to babysitting and doing odd jobs. Overall, the students at Lake Highlands had an average income of $154 a month.

Clothes & Fast Foods Top Budget

Students spent their money at large department stores and smaller specialty shops alike. Sanger-Harris and Titche's/Joske were Lake Highlands students favorite department stores, especially for purchasing clothes and related accesory items because of the variety available at one central location. Favorite specialty shops for clothing included Casual Corner, the Limited, and Judy's for gals, while the guys preferred Chess King and J. Riggings.

Food was another item to be considered on student budgets. Lake Highlands students frequented fast-food restaurants more than any other type, spending an average of $6.66 a week at such places as Pizza Hut and Burger King. McDonalds was Lake Highlands students favorite place for a quick bite, followed closely by Jack-In-The-Box, Whataburger and Taco Bell

Costs Engulf Student Incomes

Transportation expenses were a large part of many student budgets. During a given week, students spent an average of $9.30 on gasoline and an average of $30.23 during a month period. Automobile maintenance and repairs took quite a chunk out of many student bank accounts. Approximately ten percent of those surveyed had some type of maintenance work done in the past month at an average price of $40.50. In addition to gas and maintenance, many students faced the chore of monthly car payments at an average of $148.28 a month.

Students also spent a good deal of their money on entertainment and recreation. Recreational activities, primarily movies, cost students an average of $5 to$10 a week. Northpark Cinema and Loew's Quad each with four screens, attracted the majority of Lake Highlands movie goers, while some preferred Medallion and the Gemini Drive-In. Student incomes were also being spent at such favorite record stores as Peaches, Melody Shop and Sound Warehouse for at-home and in-car entertainment. The average record and/or tape buyer spent $9.48 at the record shop which indicates students were buying two records at a time, or double record sets in addition to single albums. For live entertainment, concert goers spent an average of $22.00 a month on concert tickets

Students who found relaxation in the challenge of electric games and pinball spent an average of $19.80 a week at such places as Mars and Carousel Raceway.

Students spent their money in as many ways as they earned it. It was encouraging to see students already taking on financial responsibilities and building for the future.

Year-Round Concerts Entertain LH Students

One of the advantages of big-city living in Dallas was the abundent amount of big-name concerts that came to town. Every month brought several popular bands to the metroplex to perform at such locations as the Tarrant and Dallas Country Convention Center, McFarlin Auditorium, Moody Coliseu, and for the biggest show of the year, the Cotton Bowl.

The Cotton Bowl, of course, was the site for the most successful concert of the year, The Texxas Jam. The fifteen hour marathon featured the talents of Van Halen, Walter Egan, Journey, The Atlanta Rhythm Section, Eddie Money, Heart, Aerosmith, Mahagony Rush, and others. The comedy team of Cheech & Chong hosted the affair, and some 80,000 people endured tempratures of over one hundred degrees to take part in the extraviganza. Heat stroke and heat exhaustion were a problem, but luckily the show took place with minimal casualities.

Fleetwood Mac, Steve Miller, Bob Welch, and The Little River Band also played to a capacity Cotton Bowl crowd, with equally successful results.

The band DC Kow performed in the auditorium in a money-raising assembly. Bands like DC Kow and 180 Proof provided students with a welcome relief from the day to day scholastic routine.

Junior Dominick Pizzuto waits between sets at the U.K./Jethro Tull show at Tarrent County. The Tull show proved that even after ten years, the band is still going strong.

ELO & Yes Razzle Dazzle The Fans

Indoor shows were also popular, with bands often bringing along elaborate stage shows to accomapany their tour. The best stage show of the year, as voted by Lake Highlands concert goers, was the Electric Light Orchestra concert at the Tarrant County Convention Center. The performance featured a dazziling array of lasers and lights, and to top it all off, the band played form within a mammoth flying saucer.

Another unique stage show came from the group Yes, who brought with them a revolving stage. The stage was in constant rotation, while the individual band members played their solos on a stable center column

Guitarist Tommy Shaw of the heavy metal-progressive group Styx thrills the crowd with a spirited solo. The Styx tour came to Dallas to help promote their latest album at the time, Pieces of Eight.

Boston, Kansas & Other Concerts

Other outstanding concerts included Boston, Rush, Queen, Foreigner, the Rolling Stones, Santana, Kansas, Aerosmith, Ted Nugent, and REO Speedwagon, just to name a few. The 1979 Wildcat surveyed the Lake Highlands student body about concerts, ant the results can be seen to the right.

Big Time Movies Hit Big Screen In Big D

The year's crop of movies offered a variety of entertainment to Lake Highlands students. There were comedy flics, adventure films, mystery and science fiction, not to mention dramatic films and love stories.

Animal House Tops Polls

Students overwhelmingly chose comedy as their favorite type of movie. Of course, this was only natural when National Lampoon's Animal House was voted by Lake Highlands students as their favorite movie of the year. The movie inspired toga parties and was even the basis of one campaign speech of a candidate for junior class president. Although Animal House was by far the most popular comedy of the year, fine performances were turned in by Chevy Chase, of Saturday Night Live fame, and Goldie Hawn in Foul Play, the second most popular comedy among LH students. Neil Simon's California Suite also hit movie theaters, but was not as successful as his Goodbye Girl was the previous year.

The Goodbye Girl took second place in the love story category behind the almost unchallenged favorite Love Story, which was released some nine years earlier. Oliver's Story, the sequel to Love Story was released during the year, but did not fare well with students or at the box office.

Two films based on Agatha Christie novels placed high in the ranking of the suspense/mystery category. Taking first place was Murder on the Orient Express, released in 1977, and in third place was Death on the Nile released in 1978. Mel Brooks' comedy-mystery, Murder by Death, took second.

Star Wars swept the science fiction category, leaving Close Encounters of the Third Kind at a distant second. The biggest science fiction flic of 1978, Invasion of the Body Snatchers, took a disappointing third place in the student rankings.

The ever-popular 1939 classic Gone With The Wind, took first place in the dramatic category as well as being voted the favorite movie of all time. Taking second place in the dramatic category was Coming Home, a touching story about life after Vietnam, which starred Jane Fonda and John Voight.

The Granada Theater, located on Greenville Avenue, presented a variety of movies ranging from foreign films to Beatles classics.

The Second Time Around

It was a year of remakes and adaptations. Superman-the movie hit local theaters to thrill young and old alike with good, old-fashioned adventure and an all-star cast. Attracting considerable interest was the remake of the 1954 sci-fi classic Invasion of the Body Snatchers. J.R.R. Tolkien's Lord of the Rings was adapted into an animated film whose unique qualities were quite appealing to the student body. Two Broadway musicals came to the big screen also. The Wiz, an adaptation of the 1930's favorite The Wizard of Oz, met with great success as did the film version of Grease, which starred John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John

John Travolta was a distant sixth in the favorite actor category even after the success of his two hit movies Saturday Night Fever and Grease. Leading in the rankings were Burt Reynolds, the sex symbol of the 70s, in first place, and Animal House star John Belushi in second.

Taking top seat in the favorite actress category was Katherine Hepburn, reminiscent of the golden era of Hollywood. Tying for second place with Ann Margaret was the newest of Charlie's Angels, Cheryl Ladd. Singer/actress Barbra Streisand rounded out the top three.

Northpark III & IV, located in the office complex next to Cental Expressway, provided a pleasent, natural setting for LH movie-goers. The cinemas were sister theaters to Northpark I & II, located in the shopping mall on the other side of the freeway.

Mary Tevis, a senior, looks over the latest issue of Seventeen in the Lake Highlands library. Seventeen was voted the most popular magazine by students at Lake Highlands.

Reading Still Popular In Age Of Electronics

In the age of television, movies, and quadrophonic stereo, some students still found reading a source of enjoyment and relaxation. Whether it was books or magazines which the student read, the reader's choice was sure to be a reflection of his interests, hobbies or personality.

Magazines Reflect Interests

Magazines were probably the best indicators of a student's interests. Besides the ever-popular Sports Illustrated, there were magazines specializing in only one sport. For soccer fans or soccer players, Soccer Corner and Soccer Monthly were top magazine choices. Other sport magazines read by Lake Highlands students included Cyle World, Minicycle, Ski, and Skateboarder. For those interested in cars, Road and Track, Hot Rod and Car and Driver published the latest news from the world of autos. Fashion conscious students kept up with the latest trends through Vogue, Glamour and Cosmopolitan. Seventeen, which claimed to be "young America's favorite magazine," was also the most popular magazine at Lake Highlands. Students were keeping up on world and national news through magazines such as Time, which was the second most popular magazine at Lake Highlands, and Newsweek.

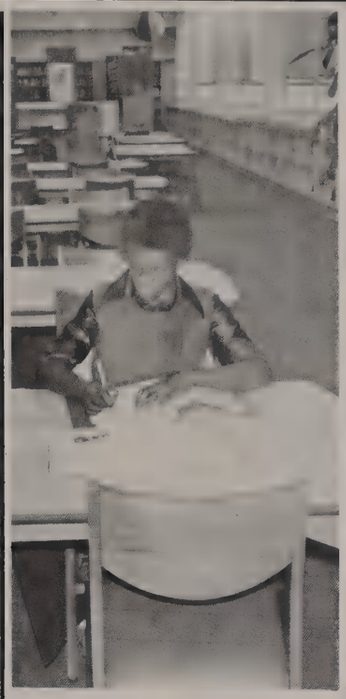
Most students subscribed to the magazines that they read most frequently. Those students who preferred to buy their magazines were most likely to purchase them at the grocery store or drug store. Only a small percentage of the students purchased them at news stands or convenience stores.

The library was a place that students could go and read the latest issue of their favorite magazine or check out the newest best-seller, all at no charge. Slightly over 50 percent of those surveyed visited the library at least once a month, but only 33 percent purchased five or more books during the year.

Diversified Tastes In Books

Because of the number of books published and the diversified tastes of Lake Highlands students, it was hard to determine the most popular book of the year, although there were a few titles which popped up around campus quite frequently. One of these, The Promise, was a tender love story of two young people who are finally reunited after a terrible tragedy, and it was a favorite among the girls. The one time controversial novel To Kill a Mockingbird, tame by today's standards, was still popular with a number of students. The Ammityville Horror was the most widely read book in the mystery category by Lake Highlands students. Mysteries were second only to romantic books in popularity at Lake Highlands. The Australian answer to America's Roots, The Thornbirds, was quite popular with LH students as well as being a national best-seller.

It was amazing to see that in these technilogical times, students still found enjoyment in reading as their parents and grand parents had before the days of television.



Wesley Johnson, a junior, works on completing a paper in the school library. Like many other students, Wesley took advantage of the many resources available in the LH library.

Books, books and more books! Walden's Book Store displays an infinite varity of books. Students at Lake Highlands chose romantic books as their favorite type followed by mystery and comedy respectively.

LH Students Sample A Year's Worth Of Music

1978 and 1979 proved to be grab-bag years in the music world. There was a barrage of new albums and new groups on the scene, bringing with them an onslaught of good, bad, and mediocre material. The most recent division of popular music, disco, thrived for yet another year, as disco oriented groups multiplied in number.

Junior Dean Markham prepares to listen to a side of the Frank Zappa album, Shiek Yerbouti. Dean was one of many students that owned extensive album collections.

Chief among these new groups was The Village People, whose first two albums were instant successes. Donna Summers also kept ahead of the competition with the release of a new album and a hit single, MacArthur Park.Other popular disco releases of the year included Le Freak, by Chic, Y.M.C.A., BY The Village People, and I Will Survive, by Gloria Gayner.

Popular Music Endures A Dismal Year

Fans of the rock "Supergroups" had a disappointing year, as many of the groups released rather poor albums. Boston's second elpee, Don't Look Back could only be described as a virtual clone of their first album, while many thought that Foreigner's Double Vision and the Kansas Point of Know Return albums were inferior follow-ups to the previous records by these two groups. Long time kings of the rock n roll scene, Led Zeppelin, delayed the release of their album for months, and this angered many Zeppelin enthusiasts. Opera rockers, Queen, also upset some of their followers with their album entitled Jazz, which many fans considered too bizarre for their tastes. Styx seemed to be the only popular band that remained popular with their fans with the release of the Peices of Eight album. The rock albums of the year, however, as decided by LH students and the country in general, were the Rolling Stones effort Some Girls, and the premeir album from L.A. rockers, Van Halen.

Progressive fans also had a dismal year, as the major progressive bands seemed to be deteriorating. Emerson, Lake and Palmer, or ELP for short, released what most considered to be their worst album ever in the form of Love Beach. The album was also their last effort, as the group soon disbanded after the records release. The rock orchestra, Yes, achieved only mediocracy with their Tormato record, an album which many fans took as an insult to the group and its fans. The grandfathers of progressive music, Pink Floyd, like the Zeppelin, chose to remain idle for the year, while Jethro Tull's Heavy Horses elpee seemed to be yet another failure.

The live album trend, started by Peter Frampton in 1976, continued through '78 and '79. Major live albums included Two For the Show, by Kansas, Bursting Out, by Jethro Tull, Live Bootleg, by Aerosmith, and the infamous Double Live Gonzo by Ted 'Theodore' Nugent.

Middle-of-the-road rock also flourished during the year. Fleetwood Mac enjoyed continued success in this with The Jefferson Starship, Wings, Jackson Browne, and Gerry Rafferty also making it big. Punk, or new wave rock, came and went, and then came back again, this time with Elvis Costello and Devo replacing the notorious Sex Pistols as the leaders of the movement.

Miscellaneous

There were many Lake Highlands students who appreciated music out of the popular mainstream. Some of these musicians and albums were James Taylor, Willie Nelson, whose Stardust album has already been called a classic, Stanley Clark, Al Jarreau, Herbie Mann, Waylon Jennings, and Frank Zappa, whose Studio Tan album has also received widespread acclaim from the critics.

What ever a person's taste in music, however, there was a radio station to suit his need or at least one that came close. K-104 served the disco community, while Q102 and the Zoo 98 FM catered to the adult rock fans. KNUS and Z 97 tried to bridge the gap between the two worlds. The Lake Highlands Wildcat took a poll about musical tastes, and the results can be seen to the right.

The sophomore class of 1979 proved to be an ambitious group, as they got a head start on making money for their own prom to be held in May of 1981.

The major fund-raising project for the sophomores was the selling of Funds-a-Poppin popcorn. During the sale, sophomores could be seen all over the school, carrying their boxes of popcorn, trying to 'hawk' them to students, faculty and administration.

The sophomores also sponsored a Valentines Dance on February 16 which was open to the entire school. The sophs also decorated the varsity locker room during football season in an effort to raise spirit.

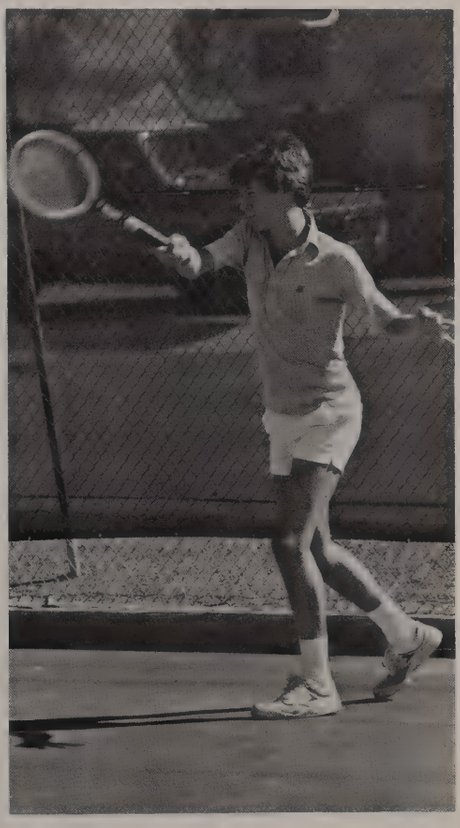
The student center was a popular place for Lake Highlands sophomores to visit during the lunch periods and also during the morning break. The student center offered a variety of convience foods in a relaxed atmosphere.

Sophomore Sam Finklea gives an interpretive reading during the Speech Department's presentation of Looking Back Laughing. Sam, like many sophomores, was actively involved in the Speech Department production which was given at the end of the year for classes at Lake Highlands. The show was also presented one evening for the enjoyment of the community.



Sophomore Morgan Davis, a member of the Lake Highlands Tennis team, practices constantly to improve his game. Morgan Davis proved to be a true asset to the 1979 Varsity Tennis team.

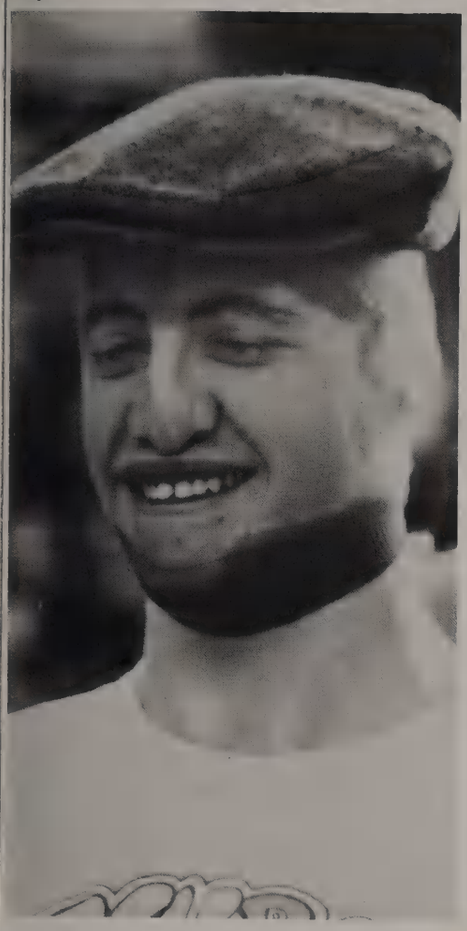
Pat, Lainson, a spirited sophomore, demonstrates the different disguise techniques he had developed through the use of Leggs. Many students were unrecognizable on Wild and Crazy Day.



Sophomores Katie Turinsky and Diane Hale show off their new homemade togas in Mrs. Buchanan's fourth period history class. Although togas were banned for Wild and Crazy Day, many students wrapped sheets around their clothes. Apparently, current fads cannot be stopped even by school administration.

Lake Highlands Students Were Wrapped-Up In Togas In '79

Many probably remember that when they were in the seventh or eighth grade, status was owning the biggest mood ring. Mood rings were a fad, a style followed faithfully by people for a while, but soon disappears. Fads are also ideas that are introduced by some sort of media, such as movies, songs and books.

This year at Lake Highlands, several fads attacked the student body. One style that was apparent was girl's shoes.

"All the girls wear those spiked heels!" said Robert Dennis. "I don't see how they can wear the kind with no straps."

One very unforgettable craze was the Mister Rogers imitations.

"It's a nice day, isn't it?" said Jeff Holland, who told naptime stories during A lunch on Wild and Crazy Day.

Of course, there were togas. Some LH students had their own versions of the Toga Party, derived from the movie "Animal House." Although togas were banned during Homecoming week, some students did wrap sheets around themselves over their clothes.

"I think togas are great," said Lynda Vanderburg. "It's just kind of a wierd thing to do."

Last, but not least, we pay homeage to all Steve Martin followers. The wild and crazy guy himself gave us many saying, including "Let's get small," "I am a wild and crazy guy," and "Go in a closet and suck eggs." Steve had people singing about King Tut, and introduced a new men's fragrence, Tuna Fish Sandwich.

Other noticable fads or style that were apparent were guys getting permanents in their hair and straight-legged jeans.

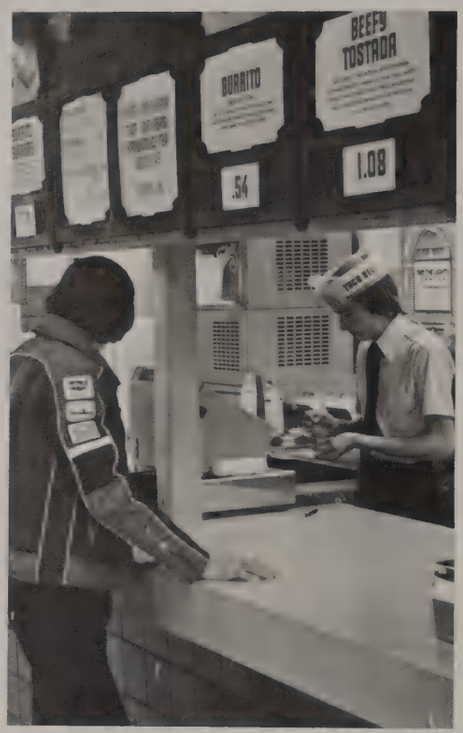
Fast Food Keeps Students From Going Hungry In'79



Fast food restaurants played a major role in the lives of many Lake Highlands students in 1978-79. A questionnaire was sent out to some students chosen at random to find out how much and where LH students spent their money. The questionnaire asked students to list some of their favorite fast food restaurants.

McDonald's, Jack in the Box, Wendy's and Whataburger ranked highest among the places mentioned.

Other favorites were The Brittany, Pizza Hut, Pizza Inn, Taco Bell, Burger King, and Dairy Queen.

There was such a variety of foods to choose from, that many people experienced the embarassment of ordering a Big Mac at Jack in the Box, or a Whopper with cheese at Whataburger.

Senior Keith Lokey stops by Taco Bell after classes for a quick bit of modern, Texas-made, Mexican food. Mexican food was favored in the winter, while ice cream was a fall and springtime favorite.

Jeff Blanton's favorite fast food restaurant was McDonald's. "Oh, I like McDonalds. I don't like Burger King though." When asked why, he replied, "Their food just isn't as good."

Although food that comes out of a drive-thru window may not have tasted as good as a home-cooked dinner, it sufficed. For people with busy schedules, going back and forth between school, jobs, meetings and practices, a burrito and coke on the road kept their stomachs quiet a while. Of course, for those whose parents weren't always home, it was fried chicken one night, pizza the next.

Many sophomores did not have cars, but that did not keep them from their hamburgers. David McLeeland said, "Wendy's and Keller's are my favorite, but when I have to walk, I go to the Dairy Queen. It's only a couple of blocks from my house."

Fast food, whether it was good or bad, hot or cold, definitely kept a lot of students from going hungry during the year.

Taco Bell, the site of many gatherings and after the game get togethers, was built in the spring of 1978, and is situated in the heart of the busiest neighborhoods in the Lake Highlands area, by the intersection of Kingsley and Audelia. Other student meeting places included the LBJ Mcdonalds, Pizza Hut, and the Brittany.

White Rock Lake Remains Popular Hangout

White Rock Lake has been a popular Dallas park since 1930. This year, Lake Highlands students flocked to the lake to throw frisbees, listen to stereos, and visit. Senior Laura Runyan said, "I wish I could go more often, but I'm so busy there really isn't time." The lake was a meeting place for students who had time to spare, and was a good place to make friends.

The lake provided some excellent recreational facilities. Parks with swings, slides and merry-go-rounds were there for younger children. Covered pavillions for picnics and meetings were available on a first come, first served basis. A new jogging and exercise trail was implemented when public demand increased.

White Rock Lake was a popular site for local fun runs, the annual Turkey Trot, and club sponsored marathons. Track coach Norman Alsobrook placed second in his age group during the Turkey Trot, and runs ten miles every day.

There were fishing piers for the sports minded and several major sailing clubs at the lake. Among those sailing were seniors Laura Nelson, Mary Anne Farmer, and Peter Otte. The Trailside Museum was there for visitors interested in the history of the lake. Collections of the plants and animals common to the lake region were in abundance. The museum was open daily to the public, and many LH students took advantage of the facilities.

With an increase in security and clean-up, White Rock Lake became a popular place for a Sunday drive or a relaxing afternoon. Traditionally, students have gone there for years and will continue to do so in years to come.

Beautiful weather and good friends inspired much togetherness during sunny afternoons at White Rock Lake. Becky Harpole, Monica Bush, Erin Stephens, Paige Faber, Mashell Gifford, and Lori Marsh form a human pyramid.

The paved jogging trail that circles White Rock Lake attracted masses of joggers, walkers and runners, both beginners and masters at exercising. Becky Harpole, Lori Marsh and Brian Stotts jog around the exercise track in their tennis shoes and warmup suits on a sunny, windy Sunday afternoon.

Chris Allen and Oliver Tull get off bus number sixty-one in front of the school after a long ride to school in the morning. Many students who rode bus 61 were from the Hamilton Park area.

Students Depend Upon School Buses For Transportation To, From School

Yellow school buses carried students to and from Lake Highlands every day of school. They transported people who lived at least two miles from school and had no other ride.

Some people had never ridden a bus to and from school, while others had been bus passengers since elementary school. These people were used to and tired of the life of a bus rider.

Jeff Gerber declared, "When I get a car, I'll be able to sleep later and leave home at 8:10 instead of 7:30."

Yes, it was true, some people had to be at their bus stop as early as 7:00 or 7:30 in the morning and arrived at school as early sometimes as 7:45. Of course, if the bus was late, its passengers were late for school.

"It always seems like my bus is late on the coldest days," said Darrick Whitfield.

It was not unusual in the afternoon to see someone running out of the building yelling at a bus to wait. Another reason one might have hurried outside was simply to get a seat. If they did not get a seat, it sometimes meant waiting for a later bus.

"What's really bad is an overcrowded bus on a hot day. We have to ride with the windows open and hair blowing in our faces," said Martha Fulton. "And I hate sitting on the edge of a seat with two other people already in it!"

Although riding a school bus may have been uncomfortable and aggravating at times, it was essential for those who did not have cars.

Scott Mendenhall and Carrie Perkins joke around while getting off of the bus in the morning. Riding the school bus provided an excellent opportunity to meet new people and develop new relationships. Most bus riders, however, would much rather be driving their own cars.

As the driver waits patiently for a load of students to pile off the bus, Willis Hogard and Kasundra Brown routinely debus and head for the school building and a day full of classes.

A collage shows several samples of the miscellaneous items collected by Dallas area sports fans. In the upper left hand corner is a Dallas Tornado cap. Next to that is a poster of the Dallas Cowboys, smiling with victory and autographed by the whole team. Team pictures of the Dallas Black Hawks hockey team and the Dallas Tornado soccer team were also popular. Cups glasses and mugs with different team emblems on them were popular

Pro Sports Provide Students With Fast Paced Action

The city of Dallas is a cultural oasis in the barren plains of North Texas. It offered LH students muiseums, opera, ballet, symphonies, and professional sports. Students patronized these events, especially pro sports. Dallas hosted several major teams including football, baseball, hockey, and soccer.

Some students enjoyed football above all other team sports in Dallas. Junior Kirk Sides said 'I enjoy footall. Idon't enjoy any other professional sport. The Dallas cowboys are great, and I like Tom Landry.' It was easy to see how Kirk Sides and many other LH students were devoted to the Cowboys. The Cowboys had been to the Super Bowl four times, returning twice as World Champions; defeating the Miami Dolphins in 1972, and the Denver Broncos in 1977.

The Dallas Tornado was Dallas' fasst moving soccer team. Sophmore Cathy Sanders said, 'I've played soccer for a long time, and I like going to Tornado games.' Local games were played at SMU's Ownby Stadium, and the Tornado was a favored pro team.

Another Metroplex team which gained fans, players, and points was the Texas Rangers baseball team, who played at Arlington Stadium. LH students were able to attend the games for a + 4.00 ticket price.

Tennis was one of the most popula and fast growing sports in Dallas. Most Lake Highlands students eithe played the game or participated as spectators. Dallas hosted the Avor Tennis Tournament March 3 through 10. Lake Highlands students followed the tournament news unti the end, when Martina Navritalova defeated Chris Evert in the final mat ch.

All in all, lake Highlands students this year proved to be very avid and devoted sports fans.

Sophs Make Transition From Jr. High School

Last fall, 765 people had to make a very important change from junior high to high school. It was almost a change of a way of life. The once wise freshman quickly became a confused and bewildered sophomore. This is the story of one such person, a typical member of the sophomore class of 1978-79.

Sophie Moore arrived at Lake Highlands at about 8:15 a.m., schedule in hand. She began looking for her locker. Sophie saw people everywhere, people she had never seen before in her life. She had not seen any of her friends yet. She saw a few people she knew and many older people. After finding her locker, Sophie headed on to her first period class. The room was about half full, so she took a seat in the middle of the room.

The day went on, and the week went on. Sophie soon became aware of all the new freedoms. For instance, she did not have to have a hall pass to get into the building before 8:25, and had a choice of two places to eat. She also felt more free to do her own thing. She discovered that it was not easy to hang around a particular group of people at school, as the building was so large and everyone was going in different directions. Sophie did not feel like she had to belong to a group, though, because all the people seemed much more independent than the ones in junior high.

Once while talking to a few friends, the subject of the difference between high school and junior high came up.

Geri Hyer said, "Well, it's one year closer to graduation."

Dianna Stryhal said, "On the first day I was terrified, but school's a lot more fun, not as restrictive."

"True, but it's sure a longer walk home. But most important, there's more guys," replied Patti Rosenberg.

Mike Micarelli said, "In ninth grade, we were the oldest, best, and most advanced class in the school. We were looked up to. And then we came to high school and we have to start working our way to the top all over again."

Sophie had a little trouble at first finding her way around, but by the second week of school, when the teachers started counting tardies, the number of lost sophomores was reduced considerably. She would sometimes turn the wrong way at the top of the staircase and end up at the wrong end of the building.

John Hargrove leads a spirited crowd through the halls cheering the team on to victory before the Highland Park game. Although pep rally privileges were taken away, this didn't stop the endless spirit of the sophomore class.

As time went on, Sophie and her fellow classmates realized the grave importance that was placed upon discipline.

Patti Rosenberg said, "I was surprised at the rules concerning detentions, skipping and tardies. They really want us to come to school."

Sophie was impressed by the number of clubs to choose from. There was a club for everything.

Sophie was hesitant at first to take advantage of all the new freedoms. After becoming used to the teachers, books, halls, rules and new friends, she felt a bit more at ease, and began to enjoy high school life.

Patti Rosenberg, Sharon Landress and Christy York conform to the Western Day attire, a part of their transformation into high school life.

Students Attracted to Different Games, Recreation

The Backgammon craze which swept the country in the late seventies also made its way into Lake Highlands. Students enjoyed playing the game, whether it was in the park or at home.

Lake Highlands students became more relaxed. They sat down and enjoyed their free time in a number of ways.

Listening to stereos and watching TV was still a major way to relax but games ranked a close third. More and more people escaped from violent physical games and learned to relax non-violently by playing games. Whether it was playing pong or throwing frisbees, recreation had a new look to it.

One game that really caught on was backgammon. Senior Arnie Kraus enjoyed backgammon as a new found hobby and played in his spare time. Different clubs and restaurants offered backgammon tournaments and game ladders for patrons, as it was a game for young and old alike. Backgammon boards and pieces could be purchased for as little as $3 and up to as much a $150.

"Monopoly is boring, but backgammon is a challenge when you have a good partner," stated senior David Strickland.

Frisbees, a game which has been around for years, was equally popular. A gun Sunday afternoon activity was throwing the frisbee at the park or at White Rock.

Another outside activity included kite flying, a sport that has been around for several centuries. Senior Cheryl Finfrock enjoyed kite flying and said, "I especially enjoy the shop with different styles of kites at Olla Podrida."

But games that could be played inside were just as important as those played outside. Risk, Monopoly and cards were favorites on icy afternoons.

It seemed to be a game culture, as most LH students participated in their favorites at one time or another during the year.

Driving Instructors Attempt to Make Responsible Drivers Of Sophomores

This year, Sophomores discovered driver's education. They discovered the excitement of cruising around the neighborhood with an instructor and a few friends. They discovered the fear that overcame them every time the worst driver got behind the wheel. And, of course, every car always had a worst driver.

Driver's education began in Study Hall B. After filling out papers, paying fifty dollars and studying the Texas Driver's Handbook for a few days, the students took their tests at the Department of Public Safety, and (if they passed) they received their beginner's permits.

The next day they were either assigned to a car, or went to the simulator.

In their cars, the students learned the basics: how to fasten a seat belt, lock doors, and release the parking brake. The next step was to hold on. For many, it was the first time to ride in a car with an unexperienced driver.

"We drove on the parking lot the first day, and I was scared to death," said Gina O'Brien.

At first, the students drove through residential neighborhoods. Next came intermediate traffic. The driver's ed cars crawled, swerved and sped along Skillman, Audelia, Church Road, Northwest Highway and Abrams. Lane changes and busy intersections became the new challenge.

After a few weeks, the drivers were ready to conquer the infamous LBJ.

Marie Lee said, "I was really excited about it. Everyone was. But it wasn't as hard as I thought it would be." Meanwhile, in the simulator, (the trailer parked beside the Zeke House), the students spent half the period listening to the instructor, and the second half watching a film and driving along with it. The films were made to look like the film watcher was driving. The students sat in small contraptions resembling the driver's area of a car. The safety belts were required to always be fastened, so the students would not fall on the floor.

One of the main things taught in the simulator was IPDE, which stands for Identify, Predict, Decide and Execute.

The second six weeks were spent in another trailer outside the cafeteria. In there, students watched films and wrote answers to the questions asked by the narrator. Of course, the narrator always revealed the answers after a few seconds, so most students waited patiently for the correct answers instead of jumping to conclusions.

At the end of the quarter, students were glad to be through with driver's education. It was sometimes a very tiring, boring and frustrating course, but it qualified those who passed for a driver's license.

The first day in Drivers Ed car for Becky De Falco means learning the procedure for starting the car. Before the students were allowed to drive on the streets, they had to master all the petty details that most drivers take lightly.

Sitting in their driving units in the Driver's Education simulator, Laurie Oldham and Gayle Schulz wait, seat belts fastened, for the exciting film to begin so they can learn how to drive.

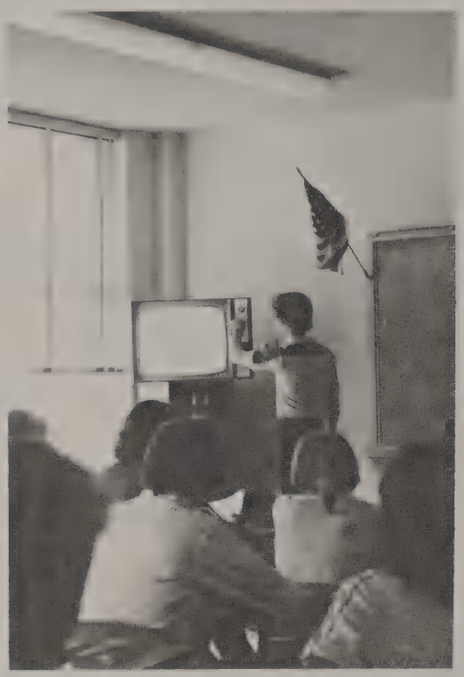
Senior David Gatz is seen here adjusting the television set in Ms. Pittman's Humanities class. Many teachers had their classes watch interesting and educational programs on the classroom televisions.



Television was viewed by millions of Americans this year. It was responsible for bringing religion, education, current envys, and entertainment into Lake Highlands students' lives. More than ever, students turned to television to provide them with a much needed escape from their studies.

Sophomore Patti Rosenberg said, "I watch television because it is a release, a break in tension." Many large school districts had their own tele-communications system and provided television education within the district. The Richardson Independent School District had it's own system, located on the campus of Hamilton Park Elementary. Also, public television grew into a large industry, providing high quality viewing without interrupting advertisements.

When scanning the TV Guide for a week, Monday through Thursday proved to be the most enjoyable times to view. Sophomore Laney Adams did not watch TV that often, but her favorite show was Three's Company. Shows such as Mork and Mindy, The Waltons and Laverne and Shirley were at the top of the ratings. These were favorite shows among LH students and provided them with some good laughs.

For students with a streak of adventure in them, detective shows such as Starsky and Hutch, Columbo and The Rockford Files offered some fast paced action. Talk shows like Mike Douglas and The Tonight Show helped to cap off student's busy days. Finally, local and national news shows like 60 Minutes kept LH students abreast of current events.

Without this form of the media, students would have coped, but it was one thing many would not live without.

Sophomores Scott Harbolt and Jim Jamieson inspect different models and brands of televisions at Lake Highlands Television at Kingsley and Audelia. Many Lake Highlands students had family sized television sets in their own bedrooms, as their parents bought one of the new Colortrack or other newfangled television sets for the family room.

Micca Rogers, a sophomore, enjoys relaxing and watching television after school. Although many of the afternoon shows are reruns, students still enjoy watching them.

Sophomore Class Proves It Has a Lot to Offer to LH

The sophomore class had a lot to offer LH. Traditionally, sophomores have been the "dorks" of the school, always the brunt of jokes and low people on the totem pole. The 1979 sophomores definitely broke some traditions.

In track, sophomores David Harty, John Collinsworth, Clinton Gerst and Clinton Robinson moved onto the varsity team and did well throughout the season. Patti Wonder, Morgan Davis, Laura Hurley and Martha Johnson all held key roles in drama department productions, adding a spice of life to the theatre.

Sophomores made a noticeable difference in Lake Highlands in 1979.

Sophmore Amy Machin, who has been an outstanding athlete ever since anyone can remember, is seen here working out on the tennis courts this year, Amy was on the varsity tennis and basketball teams.

Group Pictures. . . . . .

All group pictures, with the exception of athletics, have been placed in the back of the yearbook for a number of reasons. The primary reason was to allow us to have more space to cover club activities on the club pages. It is our feeling that the primary coverage of the yearbook should be on the activities in which the clubs participate and not pictures of rows of people. We do feel, however, that the group pictures are important enough to be in the book, so we have placed them here.

We Predicted Our Year, But We Were Wrong

As the year drew to a close, we looked back and realized that when we had predicted another ordinary year, we were wrong.

It had started out as just an ordinary year, just another in-between year. We had roughly the same ingredients: approximately 2,200 students, 140 staff members, 2 gyms, 1 auditorium, 80 classrooms, and A, B, and C halls. But it was different. It must have been the combination of the ingredients that made it different.

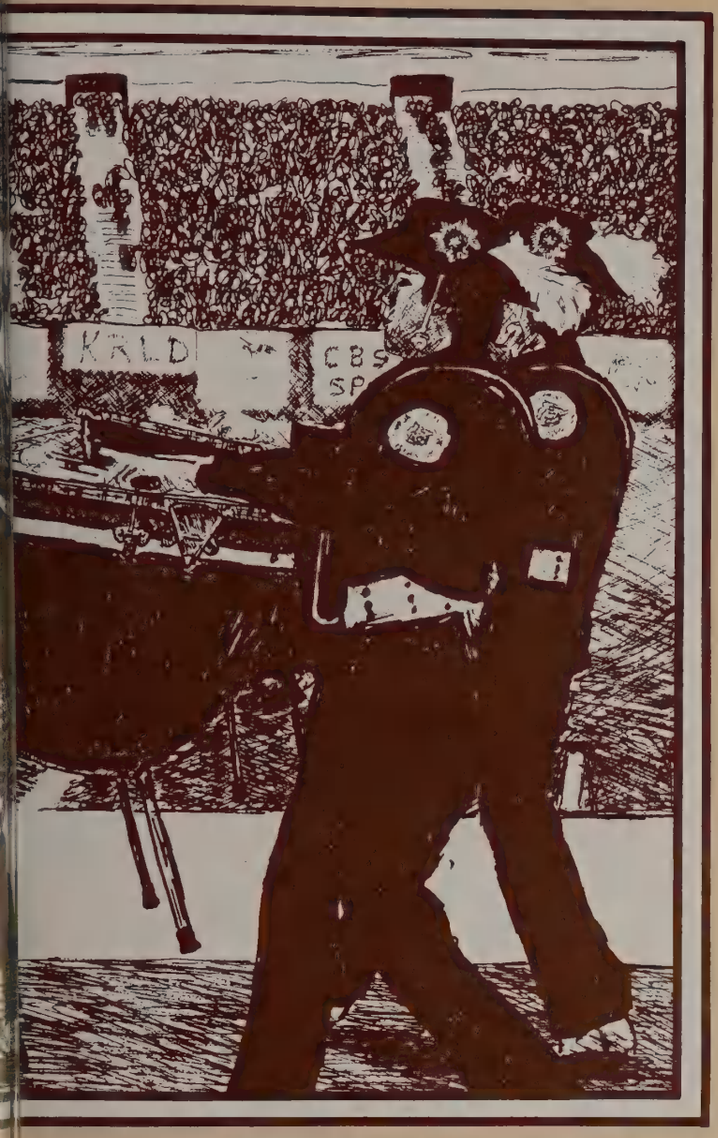
Our teams began winning again. All of a sudden we were vying for district championships in football, basketball, and baseball.

Clubs worked hard on projects which were beneficial like the Student Council's President's Club which united all the clubs in service projects for the community and school.

Luckily for us, predictions don't always come true. We had anticipated an ordinary year, but we were wrong.

In Mrs. Susie Boone's Art II class, Laura Bacalzo does a water color assignment. This is one of the many techniques learned through the extensive arts program enjoyed by many.

Paul Maturi delivers a pitch during the W.T. White baseball game. The Wildcats were victorious, winning the game 4-3 and finishing the season second in district.



Drum Corps memnbers juniors David Sanders and Bruce Bridges and sophomores Mark Leggett and Mike Conlin march proudly on the Cowboy field at halftime during the Dallas-St. Louis game.

Senior Jeannine Thomas happily receives a bunch of carnations on the annual National Honor Society's Red Carnation Day. The price of the carnations was 50 cents each.

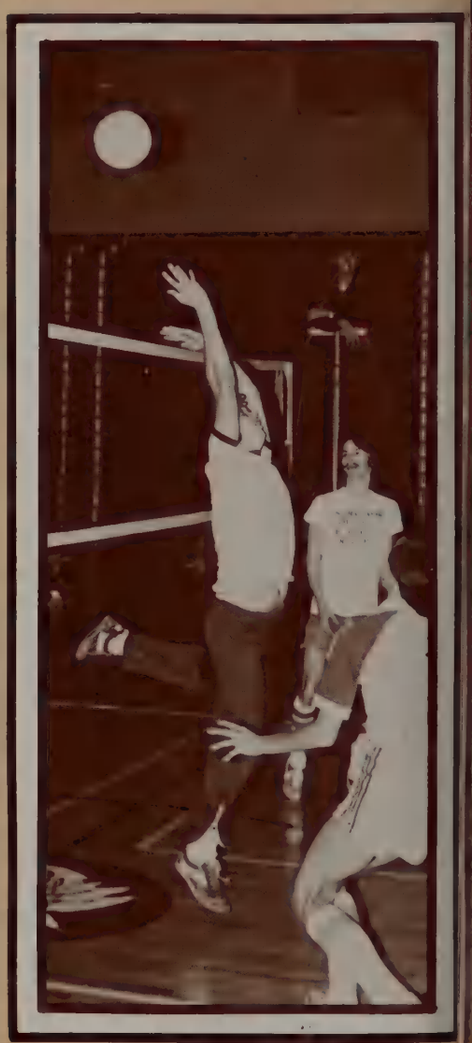
Phillip Walton and Dan Zellos stand laughing after making the obvious mistake of overflowing the washing machine in Mrs. Freddie Clark's Single Survival class.

At the German Club banquet, Mrs. Caroline Peadon, the club sponsor, receives flowers from the club. The annual banquet was held at the Schnapps Und Schnacks restaurant.

Martha Johnson portrays a character in The Importance of Being Earnest. The play was entered in the Interscholastic League one-act play contest and won area and district titles.

Rock band 180 Proof, organized with LH students, performed at the Junior Class fund-raising assembly. Junior Mark McChristian is the lead guitarist for the band.

Lunchlady Rena Gilbert proudly displays her decorating skill on a pie prepared for the lunchtime crowd. Mrs. Gilbert is the chief pastry decorator for the lunchroom.



Coaches Albert Dedrick and Leonard Carey triumphantly walk off the basketball court at the end of the FCA-faculty basketball game. The faculty won the game 47-33.

Gymnasts Cindy Zikos, Carol Coursey, Sharon Buckley, Michelle Anderson, Cindy Boner and Laurie Kinkaid, led by Miss Denise Jones, joke around during a practice meet in the gym.

Seniors Cynthia Blum, Wayne Mendenhall, Michelle Snoddy, Beth Roberts and Dede White have a casual donut break in the Student Council Bookstore on Senior Grub Day.

We Were At The Top, A Nice Place To Be

The 1978-79 year found us up at the top; and up at the top was a nice place to be.

After a few years of riding on the coat tails of LH's past glory, it was nice to be back at the top.

Our clubs ranked high with other similar clubs throughout the state. Athletics once again gave us something to really shout about. Academic standards of excellance prevailed during the year. Awide variety of activities gave us something to look forward to all year long.

But it was us, the people, at the center of all the activities and organizations that made the difference. Once again, we were up at the top, and up at the top was a nice place to be.

Kirk Decordova saves a volley for the Math Club during an intramural volleyball game. The tournament was coordinated by Mrs. Donna Clark with the Math Club placing third.

Paula,
Never can I remember what a terrific person you are.
The Lord really shines through you.

Paula,

I don't playing clarinet fun! The practices are so exciting. Well, you've worked hard – keep it up. Band a good time not being a sophmore anymore.

Love,
Delilil
Dickson

Hey Pow-la!

It's been great this year hasn't it! Hat Crew has really been a lot of fun! Band is terrific – but it's such hard work! I can't wait to get started again now! Pow-la, you've really been CHICAGO great as a Hat Crewer & I noticed you were a great rank leader too-

Keep it up! I love you, Mere

Colophon

The 1979 Wildcat had a press run of 1,800 copies. There were 304 pages printed on 70 pound enamel coated paper. Body type throughout the book was set in 10/12 Helios and captions were set in 8/9 Helios Bold.

Headline styles varied through the sections. Opening, closing, and cover headlines were typeset in 30 point Oracle. Helios Bold Italic type in 24 and 36 point was used for headlines on the Activities pages. Academic headlines were set in 18 and 36 point Helios Italics. Headlines in the Organizations section were set in 18 and 24 point Helios Bold. Sports headlines were set in 14, 18, and 36 point Branding Iron. Senior section headlines were set in 24 point Gothic Outline. Type on the Junior Section pages was set in 10 and 18 point Cooper Black. Headlines on Sophomore pages were set in 24 point Oracle type. Thirty point Helios was used in the Faculty section. Folio type used was Gothic Outline.

The cover was printed on 70 pound Kromekote using the four color process for pictures and art work. Identifications, borders, and backgrounds on the cover were printed using PMS colors nos. 467 and 469. The entire cover was fully lamentated after printing.

Class and faculty portraits were taken by Classmate School Portraits by Bill Bunch. Four color used on theme pages was processed and printed by Wildcat staff photographers.

The Wildcat is a member of the THSPA. ILPC, NSPA, and CSPA.

The Wildcat staff would like to extend special thanks to our Taylor Publishing Company representative, Acie Mitchell; our foster mother, Mrs. Jane Haltom; and the Journalism student teacher, Mrs. Felecia Garvin for their help and support.
